ATLANTA WINS ANOTHER LEGAL BOND VICTORY BUT LONG DELAY IN PROGRAM IS INDICATED

Atlanta Rum Raiders Are Directed From Airplane

SPOTTED FROM AIR, THREE MEN NETTED WITH LIQUOR STORE

Winking Lights From Skies Direct Officers in Gray Dawn of Saturday to Contraband Cache.

PETERS ST. SCENE OF DRY INNOVATION

Use of Plane May Be Broadened on Strength of Success of First Trial, Officials Assert.

A new chapter in Atlanta law enforcement was written Saturday when an airplane was used for the first time as a machine for directing a liquor raid.

The seizure, which netted 10 gallons of whisky and three arrests, was made possible by light signals flashed from a plane as it circled over the Peters street section at dawn Saturday.

Joe Ray, who operates a filling station on Walker street, and two negroes, Arthur Styles, of 6 Lowes alley, and Jessie Freeman, who lives in an alley paralleling Trenholm street, were arrested and placed under bonds of $1,000 each. Police confiscated five gallons of whisky found in Freeman's roadster and five gallons uncovered in Styles' house.

Lieutenant L. S. Alridge, of the government prohibition forces, and C. E. McCrary, of the city vice squad, from their seats in the forward cockpit of an airplane watched the three men from the time they met in Peters street near Walker street until the entire transaction had been carried through.

Light signals were flashed from the ship to Lieutenant E. S. Acree, and L. J. Brooks, of the vice squad, and Lieutenant Weaver, of the government force, who were waiting in a covered spot on the upper end of Peters street. As soon as the signal was given, the three officers sped to the spot, where they surprised Ray and the two negroes.

Every move of the men on the ground was visible to the officers, they said. They saw Styles take five gallons of whisky to his house and return, watched the three men as they hurried to exchange the contraband from one car to another, and were able to give the signal which sent Lieutenant Acree and his companions speeding on their mission.

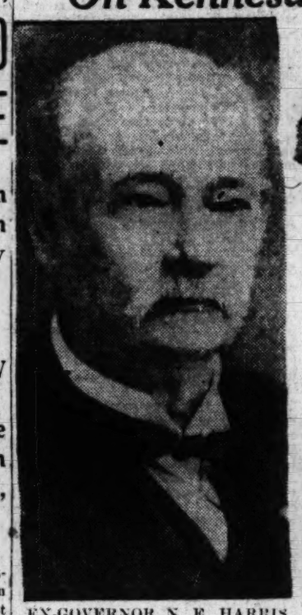

The raid marks the beginning of a new and thrilling chapter in the government and police war on Atlanta whisky traffic. This is the first raid ever directed from an airplane in Atlanta, and because of its unquestionable success, it may develop a new unit in local law enforcement.

Officers who took part in the first "air raid," as well as government and city officials, are impressed with the possibilities which the airplane offers as a machine for use in "spotting" whisky stores and directing seizures.

2 CARS PEACHES LEAVE GEORGIA FOR NEW YORK

Macon, Ga., May 22.—(AP)—Two cars of peaches, the first shipments of the season, cleared here tonight for New York. The first car was from Ellaville, Schley county, and the second was from Fort Valley, in Peach county.

Harris and Clem to Serve On Kennesaw Commission

EX-GOVERNOR N. E. HARRIS

MAJOR GENERAL JOHN L. CLEM

President Coolidge Signs Battlefield Survey Measure and Board Will Be Announced Soon.

Washington, D. C., May 22.—(Special.)—President Coolidge has signed the Kennesaw Mountain bill, and it is definitely announced by Senator William J. Harris, of Georgia, that the secretary of war will appoint ex-Governor N. E. Harris, of Georgia, and Major General John L. Clem, retired, of the United States army, as two of the three commissioners authorized by the measure. The additional appointee will be chosen from the engineer corps of the army.

The measure provides for an appropriation of $5,000 for the survey of the Kennesaw Mountain battlefields, and the movements of both armies in the civil war in and around Kennesaw mountains. Under the bill one of these commissioners must be a Confederate veteran, the other a Federal veteran, the third to be selected from the engineer corps of the army.

Suggests Ex-Governor Harris.

Senator Harris suggested the name of ex-Governor Harris and the fitness of the choice was promptly recognized by the war department. In addition to his service as governor, he has rendered notable service to his state. He is known as the founder of Georgia Tech and has been the chairman of the board since its organization. Ex-Governor Harris is a distinguished Confederate veteran.

Old friends of General Clem in Atlanta, without his knowledge that his name was even being considered, took up with Senator Harris the matter of his appointment for the place to be filled by a Federal veteran. Senator Harris at once conferred with the secretary of war, calling his attention to the fact that General Clem was a participant in the battle of Kennesaw Mountains, that he lived for five years in Atlanta, first as a lieutenant, later as captain, then major in the quartermaster department of the army in the old department of the gulf. During his first service in Atlanta he was in charge of all the Federal cemeteries in the southeast, and since the Federal cemetery at Marietta is one of them it was pointed out that he was in intimate touch with the people of that town, which is at the foot of Kennesaw mountains. The secretary of war immediately recognized the eminent fitness of the appointment and announced that it would be made at once, with the names of the full commission.

GENERAL CLEM WELL KNOWN IN ATLANTA, HIS OLD HOME.

The announcement that Major John L. Clem, retired, of the United States army, will be appointed, with ex-Governor N. E. Harris, as a member of the Kennesaw Mountain park commission, will be received with delight here in Atlanta, where he has many warm friends.

General Clem lived in Atlanta for five years, serving in the quartermaster department of the army. He first came here as a lieutenant about 1895, later being promoted to a captaincy and then becoming a major, this rank placing him in charge of the quartermaster department of the old department of the gulf. During his early service in Atlanta he was in charge of the federal cemeteries of

POLAND ISSUES CALL FOR ELECTION OF NEW PRESIDENT

Marshal Pilsudski, Who Engineered Revolt, Has Agreed To Become Candidate.

PADEREWSKI SAILS FOR REST IN GENEVA

Former Polish Premier Denies He Is Going to Poland; Appears in Bad Health.

Warsaw, May 22.—(AP)—A national assembly has been convoked for May 31 in Warsaw to elect a successor to Presiden. Wojciechowski, who resigned after the Pilsudski military coup.

Marshal Palsudski has definitely agreed to be a candidate for the presidency. His friends are reported to have assured him that a straw vote canvass showed 70 per cent of the senators and deputies favored his election.

A proclamation issued by Acting President Rataj says he chose Warsaw for the meeting because to foreign countries it will indicate Poland's return to normalcy.

"I fully understand the responsibility devolving upon me," says the acting president's proclamation, "but as I have received positive guarantees from the ministers of war and interior that the assembly will be held without interference from any one, I feel as certain as any human being can be that the meeting can be safely held in Warsaw."

NATIONALISTS AMAZED AT ELECTION CALL.

Posen, Poland, May 22.—(AP)—The decision of the Pilsudski government to hold a presidential election by the national assembly in Warsaw late this month has created a political situation fraught with many possibilities.

The nationalist parties, meeting here, express great amazement at the decision.

"It is beneath the dignity of the nation to have its representatives elect a new head of the republic in a place where so much blood has flowed," a leading conservative deputy told The Associated Press.

"The argument is being used that foreign countries will interpret the selection of Warsaw as an indication that Warsaw again is perfectly calm and normal," he continued, "yet we of the right parties think that this view is too optimistic. The ineradicable fact is that Pilsudski overturned the legal government at Warsaw. He did it once and he may do it again if the new government does not suit him."

Although the nationalists have expressed their disapproval of the selection of Warsaw, it is taken for granted they will participate in the ballot.

Should they refuse, the election cannot occur legally, as a majority of deputies must be present according to the constitution. Either provisional President Rataj then would have to select another place than Warsaw or to call a rump parliament of Pilsudski followers whose meeting would be unconstitutional.

JAN PADEREWSKI SAILS FOR EUROPE.

New York, May 22.—(AP)—His country racked by civil war and himself ill, Ignace Jan Paderewski, pianist and former premier of Poland, feebly waved good-bye to America today from the liner Paris on which he sailed for Europe.

The famous pianist left New York hurriedly. With Berlin cables announcing him at Posen conferring with Polish political figures, he left the Hotel Gotham without public announcement. Aboard the Paris he presented himself to newspapermen for a brief interview. His face was haggard and his lips blue. His hands trembled. He said he was very ill. This illness kept him confined for several weeks.

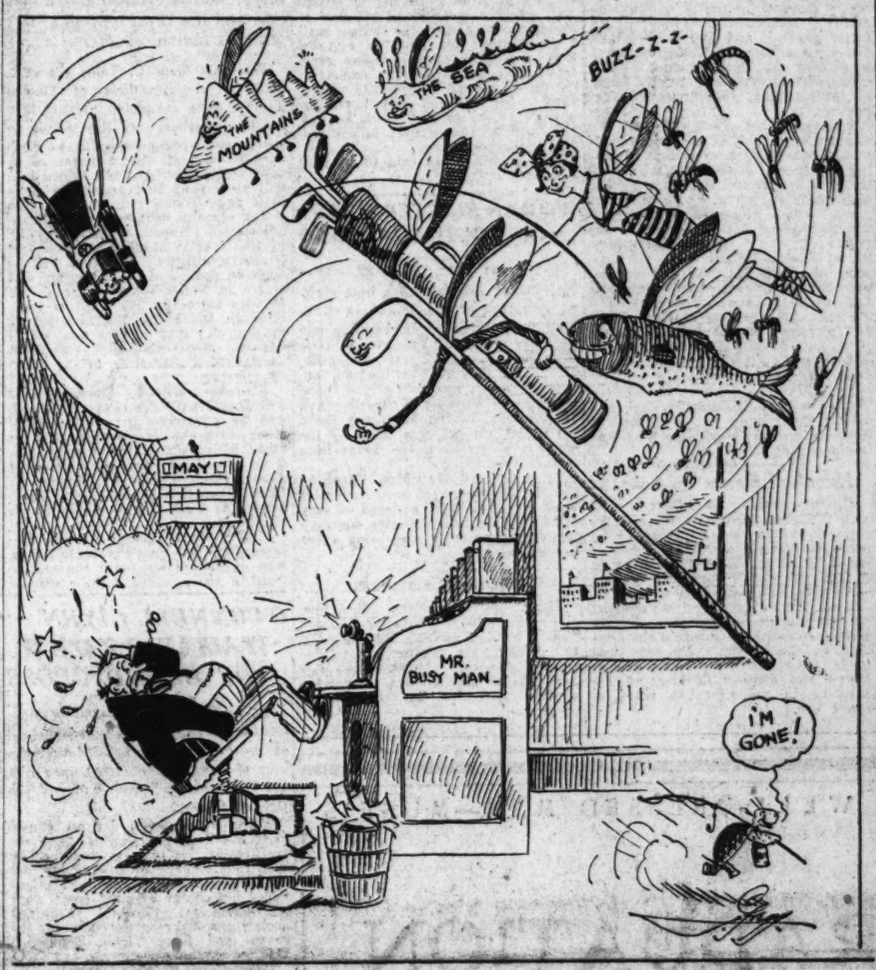

"I am not going to Poland," he said. "I am going to Geneva to rest. I can say nothing about conditions in Poland, because I do not know the facts. All I can say is that I deplore stupid and cruel bloodshed and that I hope that whatever happens will be for the benefit of my country."

He had nothing to say about Marshal Pilsudski, whose military coup put him in command of Poland. Marshall Pilsudski was a government official while Paderewski was premier.

Paderewski was suggested as a candidate as first president of the new Polish republic but he showed no desire to take the post. After serving as premier for less than a year he resigned in December, 1919, and was succeeded by Marshal Pilsudski.

The Sting of Spring!

NEW PROHI ORDER MAY BRING TEST IN U. S. COURTS

Some Observers Believe Order Was Intended as Test of Dry Sentiment Over Country.

BY THOMAS L. STOKES.

Washington, May 22.—The hostile reaction to the executive order permitting state, county and municipal officers to serve as federal dry agents is welling up into a veritable flood. Wets are now talking of challenging in the courts the commission of local officers as national prohibition agents.

Various theories are being advanced as the order and its probable effect is studied.

There is a suspicion among certain observers that this new system was intended as a test of sentiment of the prohibition law, with which dissatisfaction has been voiced recently before the special senate committee here. It certainly represents about the final and most extreme step that could be taken in enforcing any law, that is, if it should be applied as is theoretically possible.

Attitude of Administration.

The administration, according to these observers, is saying in effect through this order:

"The law is on the books and must be enforced. Measures tried so far have not been effective. This appears to be the only means left. It is legal, in our opinion. If the people don't like such methods, let them say so, and change the law. It's up to them."

Something of this kind was read by observers advancing this theory into the comment today of General Lincoln C. Andrews, dry enforcement chief, who said:

"This is not the time to talk about states' rights so far as prohibition is concerned. When the people approved the 18th amendment to the constitution they invaded the police powers of various states. The people themselves decided the federal government should have the police power hitherto reserved by states, but made the federal jurisdiction concurrent. They forced us to use this police power, but we must lean upon the states to carry on their concurrent jurisdiction, leaving the government as little police work as possible."

Others say this executive order rep-

Tennessee City Again Swings Ax In Railroad Row

Tennessee Supreme Court Vacates Restraining Order and Chattanooga Wrecks Buildings.

Chattanooga, Tenn., May 22.—(AP)—Thirty minutes after Commissioner Ed Bass, of the streets and sewers department of the city government, received information from City Attorney Byron Tatum that the supreme court of Tennessee had today vacated the supersedeas sought by the state of Georgia, work of demolishing the building barring the way to the extension of Eleventh street into the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis railroad yards was under way.

A large force of trucks and men, supplemented by fire department apparatus and a squad of policemen, were sent to the scene and the work of razing a three-story brick building which occupied 60-foot frontage on Market street was begun. By dark two stories of the structure had been demolished and carried away and Commissioner Bass announced his intention to continue the work through the night and Sunday.

The building torn down was formerly occupied by the Southern Rubber company. At the same time a force of men was put to work removing the debris from the entry made into the yards from Ninth street, at the head of Broad, two weeks ago before work was stopped by Georgia filing the petition for a writ of certiorari and supersedas. Within a short time this passageway was opened to traffic and was used during the afternoon, many automobiles being driven through the railroad yards to the W. & A. crossing on Market street.

Powerless Until Tuesday.

It is stated by city attorneys that it will be impossible for the state of Georgia to secure action to stop the work from the Tennessee court of appeals, to which tribunal it was held by the supreme court the former writ should have been presented, before next Tuesday, and by that time the opening of Broad street will almost have become a reality.

The temporary restraining order, granted Georgia authorities two weeks ago, was dissolved today when Justice F. P. Hall, of the state supreme court in Nashville, decided that the court did not have jurisdiction. At-

NO END IN SIGHT TO BRITISH STRIKE

Baldwin Rebukes Miners and Operators and Warns Subsidy Stops at End of Month.

London, May 22.—(AP)—Through his secretary, Premier Baldwin has sent communications of equally stern rebuke to both the miners and mine owners for the impossible attitude they are adopting which prevents the government's earnest attempt to effect a settlement of the coal mining dispute.

The communications are in answer to the notice of the miners' representatives that the government's latest proposals could not be accepted, the men objecting to the clause providing for a reduction of wages and a lengthening of the work day, and the declination of the owners, who contended that the premier's compromise suggestions would limit freedom of administration and would not increase the efficiency of the industry.

The premier at this stage gives no intimation of what further if any steps the government intends to adopt, and it is explained matters will simmer for the next few days. He states quite clearly, however, that since both sides have rejected the coal commission's report, the government no longer considers itself bound by the commission's recommendations. He gives the miners warning that at the end of the present month his own proposals for a settlement, embracing a subsidy of 3,000,000 pounds, also will lapse. But the premier announces that he still holds himself ready to any new practical proposals for a settlement from either side.

The letter says that there were recommendations in the coal commission report that the government only accepted reluctantly and which could not have been accepted except in the hope of a general settlement.

"This hope," it continues, "has been disappointed. In these circumstances, it must be clearly understood that the government regain its freedom for all purposes and no longer holds itself bound by the terms of an offer which has been rejected.

"In particular, in view of the great growing burden imposed on the general finances, and the present stoppage in the coal industry, it will be impossible for the government to hold open beyond the end of the present month, the offer of any further subsidy."

OPPONENTS PLAN TO APPEAL CASE TO SUPREME COURT

Announce Intention After Judge Humphries Again Rules for Validity of $8,000,000 Issue.

FEDERAL ISSUE CLAIMED INJECTED

Confiscation of Property Without Due Process Charged in Attack on Viaducts.

While Atlanta won another technical legal victory in the courts Saturday over those who are seeking to block its $8,000,000 bond issue program, developments of Saturday indicated that it will be delayed six months or more.

This came to light when Attorneys E. W. Maynard, of Macon, and Robert Bruce, of Atlanta, representing the Kimball Operating company, and Louis Frankel, Pryor street merchant, in an intervention suit against the $1,000,000 bond issue for the Central avenue and Pryor street viaducts, announced they will appeal the case on a bill of exceptions to the Georgia supreme court.

The announcement was made after Judge John D. Humphries in Fulton superior court ruled a second time Saturday that the $8,000,000 bond issue was valid, following hearing on the intervention proceedings.

Validity of the issue was attacked on the grounds that the election of March 24 was illegal, irregularly advertised and that registration was not properly conducted.

Federal Issue Involved.

The complaint also injected a federal issue, according to Mr. Maynard, in that it claimed that "passage of bonds for building and construction of the viaducts entailed the taking of property without due process of law, which is unconstitutional."

The city was represented in the litigation by City Attorney James L. Mayson and Assistant City Attorney Courtland S. Winn.

The grounds upon which the viaduct bonds were attacked were of such a nature as to endanger the other items of the issue if the petitioners establish their contentions, according to evidence in the hearing.

Testimony Is Heard.

Among those who testified at the hearing were Mayor Walter A. Sims, Clark Howell, editor of The Constitution; newspaper reporters and election managers of various city precincts who were in charge of the bond election.

The plaintiffs attempted to prove that managers of the precincts did not conduct their respective polls in the election as required by law; that the Fulton County Daily Report, in which advertisements of the election appeared, was not a newspaper of general circulation, and thus the election was not legally advertised; that registration was improper, and that railroads could not contribute to the viaduct projects, referring to contributions to construction costs made by the railroads over which tracks the Pryor street and Central avenue viaducts will run.

If You Do Not Own an Automobile, Buy One

Twenty years ago an automobile was a novelty, and you were greatly elated when a more fortunate friend invited you for a ride.

Today automobiles are almost as plentiful as cookstoves, and nearly as necessary. You are not invited to go for a ride now because you are expected to have an auto of your own.

If you are still without a machine, get one and enjoy it with your family, and pay for it as you use it.

There is one for every purse, and they run from good used cars up to the de luxe limousines. Look through the advertisements in The Constitution this morning. Pick out the car you want from the descriptions and prices given, and have it ready for a trip next Sunday.

To Fill D. A. V. Convention Expense Chest This Week

Three-Day Whirlwind Drive by Hundred Workers To Raise Needed $35,000.

Three days' work by a hundred men and women, centered within a half-mile of Five Points, is expected to round up $35,000 this week and provide the Disabled American Veterans with funds for the entertainment of the biggest convention of the year, scheduled for June 21 to 26, less than a month away.

"Com,any is coming and the cupboard is bare," announced a letter sent out by the campaign headquarters. "Atlanta has invited this big convention of disabled men to pay us a week's visit; most of them will have very little money beyond their railroad fare and hotel bills. Can we ask them to stand around the streets with nowhere to go and nothing to do?"

Mayor Walter A. Sims declared Saturday that no convention which ever came to Atlanta is of more importance than that of the Disabled American Veterans.

With Serious Aim.

"We would be disgraced should we fail to give these boys every possible attention," he said. "They are the men who suffered in France, every one of them disabled in some way. This is their one great treat in the year—an opportunity to meet their old 'buddies' again.

"They are not the type of men who cause disorder. They come not only for fun, but with a serious purpose. The organization is recognized by the government as representing claimants for war compensation. They work to see that every man gets a square deal from the government and from the public. The convention will be attended by high officials of the government and it will be one of the most important Atlanta has ever entertained."

Workers Meet Monday.

Prominent men and women, representing leading civic clubs and associations, have been at work on the campaign committee for weeks trying to help the local chapter of the D. A. V., raise its fund and go ahead with the convention plans, which include parades, barbecues, a picnic, a dance and many other features. The budget, carefully drawn up, shows that $35,000 is barely enough for the expenses. It will be expended under the direction of the executive committee, composed of Julian Boehm, Milton W. Bell, Asa Warren Candler, A. Ten Eyck Brown, Basil Stockbridge, Ben I. Hall and James K. Finch.

The workers will meet Monday evening at the Hotel Ansley for dinner, when they will receive their prospect cards and final instructions. They will start out Tuesday morning, 37 teams of three each, and hope to complete the canvass by Thursday night.

MORRIS BROWN DRIVE SUCCESS PREDICTED

Belief that the drive for $1,000,000 endowment fund for Morris Brown university will be carried through successfully was expressed Friday by leaders in the movement. The trustee board of the Central Park college at Savannah subscribed $7,000 last Tuesday and plans were formulated to organize the city for an intensive drive. At a recent state-wide meeting in Macon the drive was unanimously indorsed and many large subscriptions made.

The annual trustee meeting of the university will be held June 1, at which time the state will be organized. One-half of the entire quota will be underwritten within the next two months, it is said.

Already the A. M. E. church in Atlanta and the colored people in general have subscribed approximately $75,000. An effort will be made by Tuesday night of next week to carry this to $90,000. Each member is required to pledge a minimum of $10. Bishop J. S. Flipper is director general, and Dr. W. F. Boddie, cashier Citizens Trust company, is general campaign manager. The object of this drive is to secure funds for maintenance, endowment and expansion.

From every indication, it is said, the commencement will attract unusual attention because of the campaign. Leading laymen and ministers will be present and the exercises will begin Friday night, May 28, when the opera "Cleopatra," will be presented by more than 200 students of Morris Brown at the city auditorium. On Sunday, May 30, at 3 o'clock, Bishop R. C. Ransom, of Nashville, will deliver the baccalaureate sermon at Bethel church. Dr. James H. Dillard, member of the general education board, New York, and president of the John F. Slater fund, will deliver the commencement address at 10 o'clock at Bethel church June 2.

Dean T. W. Carter, of Edward Waters college, Jacksonville, Fla., will deliver the sermon to the School of Theology Sunday, May 23, at 3 o'clock, in the university chapel.

Knocked Down by Auto.

C. Ridenhouser, of Elbert street, was knocked down and slightly skinned and bruised Saturday afternoon at Stewart avenue and Elbert street by an automobile driven by J. J. McGreth, of 167 Barnett street, according to police reports.

After the accident McGreth stopped his machine and offered Ridenhouser assistance and later reported the accident at the station. No case was made. McGreth stated that Ridenhouser ran directly in front of his machine in an effort to board a street car.

Arrests Made In Mail Pouch Looting on Liner

New York, May 22.—(AP)—The recent looting of mail pouches on the steamship George Washington, of the United States Line, was believed to be cleared up today by the arrests aboard that vessel at Bremen, Germany, of two men, one a member of the crew and the other a stowaway who is believed to be a notorious international crook. Word of the arrests was received here today by the line.

A mail pouch was looted on the George Washington's last trip to the United States and a postoffice detective was placed aboard as a member of the crew when she sailed from New York May 12. Two additional pouches were looted two days after the vessel left New York.

When the George Washington arrived at Plymouth, England, a detail of Scotland Yard operatives boarded the vessel and went to Bremen, where the assistance of the Bremen police was obtained.

The ship was searched and the stowaway was found in a coal bunker. Nearby were a number of letters and safety razor blades, similar to those found beside the rifled mail bags. Further investigation revealed that a member of the engine room crew, who had made but two trips on the ship, had a criminal record. Both were arrested and upon the vessel's return to New York June 4, they will be turned over to the federal authorities.

The prisoners are said to be both American citizens.

WOMAN ELECTED HEAD OF LOUISIANA ROAD

Shreveport, La., May 22.—(AP)—Mrs. Sarah Edenborn has been elected president of the Louisiana Railroad and Navigation company to succeed her husband, the late William Edenborn, according to announcement here today. The election, announced today, was held at the board of directors' meeting Wednesday and applies only to the Louisiana lines. No action has yet been taken by the board of directors of the Texas lines of the company.

It is believed that Mrs. Edenborn has the distinction of being executive head of the longest railroad of any woman in the United States, approximately 350 miles of road being under her direction.

Hobson To Speak.

Huntsville, Ala., May 22.—(Special.)—Captain Richmond P. Hobson will come to Huntsville next Monday to deliver his lecture on "The Crisis." Captain Hobson is now head of the league that is warring against narcotics in the United States.

Yaarab Temple's Official Representatives To Imperial Council Meet in Philadelphia

Yaarab Temple will send a delegation of notables in Shrinedom to the imperial council, official representatives shown above being, left to right, Henry Heinz, Potentate Thomas C. Law; past potentate and life representative of Yaarab Temple, Forrest Adair, and Frank Cundell, director of the temple's famous chanters.

Potentate Tom C. Law, the officers and organizations of Yaarab Temple have completed preparations for the pilgrimage of the temple to the imperial council meeting in Philadelphia and all that remains to be done is for "last-minute" nobles who will accompany the caravan to make their reservations.

The caravan will leave the Terminal station at noon, Sunday, May 30, in two special steel trains over the Southern railway. No stops will be made en route and the delegation will arrive in Philadelphia at 10 o'clock Monday morning. They will be quartered in the Hotel Bartram during the four-day stay in that city, which has the sesqui-centennial exposition as an added attraction to the council meeting.

Yaarab's official representatives will travel with the caravan, though will be quartered in another hotel along with the representatives from other temples. Yaarab's representatives are Past Potentate Forrest Adair, Past Potentate Henry C. Heinz, Potentate Tom C. Law, Noble Frank A. Cundell and Noble Ralph Northcutt.

Past Potentate Adair is a life representative and Past Potentate Heinz, who is making his tenth consecutive visit to the council, will be offered as a candidate for imperial outer guard. This is the only office in the council for which there will be any contest, and while there are at least half a dozen candidates in the field, Past Potentate Heinz's friends thinks that he is certain to be elected on the second ballot.

Yaarab's band, patrol, chanters, Oriental band and degree team have been allotted conspicuous places in the parades, in which they will appear under direction of Chief Marshal Seamans and Yaarab's staff. Yaarab's patrol will give an exhibition drill in the huge stadium and Yaarab's chanters again have been honored by being chosen to sing at the opening of the imperial session.

Nobles To Visit Gotham.

After participating for four days in the activities attending the meeting of the imperial body, visiting the sesqui-centennial and enjoying the long list of entertainment features, Yaarab's caravan will leave Philadelphia at 10 o'clock Friday morning, arriving in New York at 12 noon, being quartered at the Hotel McAlpin in that city. Saturday at noon the delegation will leave for Charleston on one of the Clyde Line's palatial steamers, spending nearly two days on a delightful ocean voyage. The return to Atlanta from Charleston will be over the Southern and Georgia railways, arriving here at 8:45 o'clock on the night of June 7.

Reservation may be made by Noble J. C. Beam, chairman of the transportation committee at the down-down ticket office of the Southern railway in the Grant building. Nobles are required to show their 1926 Shrine cards when making reservations, as the trains are for Shriners and members of their immediate families.

Official announcements were mailed Saturday to all members of the big ceremonial session of Yaarab Temple at the auditorium next Wednesday night. This event will start with a street parade from Shrine headquarters to the auditorium, the line of march being down Peachtree to Marietta, out Marietta to Spring, back to Forsyth, Forsyth to Hunter, Hunter to Peachtree, Peachtree to Five Points and thence direct to the auditorium. All organizations are to be ready for the parade to move promptly at 6 o'clock.

The ceremonial will start promptly at 7:30 o'clock and all of Yaarab's organizations will be given an opportunity to display some of their program for the imperial council meeting. The Oriental band will put on a one-act play between the first and second sections of the ceremonial. A big class is promised and the event will be spectacular in every detail.

Both Ponselle and Spalding On Program of Music Club

Rosa Ponselle, soprano, and Albert Spalding, violinist, young American artists who already have achieved world supremacy in their own fields of music and are advancing season by season to new heights of universal popularity and admiration, will be presented in the first two concerts of the Atlanta Music club's next civic concert series opening in October, it was announced Saturday by Mrs. Cliff C. Hatcher, president.

Ponselle will make her first concert appearance in the south at the City Auditorium-Armory Thursday night, October 14, and Spalding will make his second Atlanta appearance at the same place October 28, two weeks later.

Rosa Ponselle, prima donna soprano of the Metropolitan Opera company, has for several years reigned as the south's popular idol among all the stars of the Metropolitan and during the recent opera season was given the unusual honor of singing the leading roles in both the opening and the closing operas of the week.

While a frequent and favorite star in opera here, the great soprano has never been heard in concert in Atlanta, although critics nationally and abroad have declared her to be even greater in concert where her own marvelous personality has full expression in songs of her own choice than in opera where the real Ponselle is submerged in the masterfully interpreted role in which she is cast.

Spalding's one previous concert in Atlanta, three years ago, when hundreds were refused admission for lack of space in the Auditorium where he played, has been the talk of musical Atlanta ever since that time. Interest locally in his career and in his development has mounted steadily during the past three seasons as he has conquered the artistic strongholds of America and Europe, one after another, and won new recognition for America as a producer of incomparable artists.

Members of the Music club Saturday called attention to the especial appropriateness of presenting the two greatest American artists as the first two concert attractions of this year, when the nation is celebrating the sesqui-centennial of its independence. "For nearly a century and a half a politically independent America has been depending on Europe for its great music, sending across the seas in order to find those who were freely acknowledged as the real leaders in their own fields of music," Mrs. Hatcher, the president, remarked.

"Now, we have a soprano and a violinist, native Americans of American parentage, whose early education was gained in America and to whom even the older countries of Europe have conceded supremacy. The Atlanta Music club is glad to be able to present them in Atlanta as its first attractions of the sesqui-centennial year," she declared.

Mrs. Hatcher stated that it had not been attempted to secure an "all-American" course for the year. The Music club, she explained, has carefully combed the lists of the world's great artists in each field of music to find those best qualified to represent the highest development of voice, piano, violin and ensemble artistry and was fortunate in finding that in two fields, those of the soprano voice and the violin, Americans were the most eligible for presentation. France, Germany, Poland, Belgium, Russia, Switzerland and other nations are represented on the list of other artists who have been selected tentatively for the season and whose names and dates will be announced as soon as contracts are definitely closed.

Although the concert season does not open until October, subscribing memberships are already being received in large numbers from music lovers who are desirous of securing the first choice of seats and the cheaper ticket rate, practically half price, offered through subscribing membership.

VISIT TO EUROPE CONCLUDED, U. S. TROOPS SAIL HOME

Havre, France, May 22.—(AP)—The American militiamen from Hartford, Conn., and Richmond, Va., concluded their visit to France and Belgium Friday and sailed for home aboard the steamer Chicago. The men were bronzed, for most of their time was spent in the open with parades in Brussels and Paris and trips through the battlefields. They are taking with them a number of Belgian police dogs which they acquired during their stay in Belgium.

The American consul, Lester Maynard, and numbers of the American colony were at the pier to wave farewell to the militiamen.

CHURCH SCHOOL PLANS PICNIC FOR SATURDAY

The annual picnic of St. Luke's Episcopal church school will be held next Saturday at Mooney's lake, S. J. Torbett, secretary of the school, announced Saturday. All members of the school are requested to meet at the church at 9:30 o'clock Saturday morning, where they will be taken to the picnic grounds in trucks. Swimming, boating and dancing will be the chief diversions of the day.

Deacon To Be Ordained.

Dr. Hoyt Trimble, of College Park, will be ordained deacon of the College Park Baptist church at tonight's services conducted by Dr. A. J. Moncrief, pastor of the First Baptist church of Decatur, and Dr. L. E. Roberts, pastor of the College Park church. Dr. Trimble, who recently was elected deacon, is president of the Men's Bible class and is prominent in church affairs. A musical program will be rendered following the ordination, which begins at 8 o'clock.

O'CONNELL GIVEN ITALIAN ORDER OF GRAND CROSS

Boston, May 22.—(AP)—William Cardinal O'Connell, of the archidiocese of Boston, has been notified that the king of Italy has conferred upon him the Order of the Grand Cross of the Crown of Italy.

Marquis Ferrante, Italian consul here, called on the cardinal with the notification. He told him that he had been thus honored because of his love for Italy, his solicitude for the Italians under his charge and his great work for humanity. Cardinal O'Connell made a graceful response, thanking the consul and King Victor Emmanuel III. for the honor.

The order will be formally bestowed upon the cardinal in a few days.

Berenger Sails To Assist French Debt Settlement

New York, May 22.—(AP)—Henry Berenger, French ambassador to the United States, sailed for home today on the Paris to assist his government in ratifying the debt settlement between France and this country, of which he is optimistic.

"I wish to convey to the whole American press my cordial thanks for its helpful assistance and to render homage to the officials with whom I have come in contact," he said. "I go to assist my government in a prompt ratification of the debt settlement."

The ambassador will return in June if the settlement is ratified, and in September if it is not, he said.

Grady Club Will Carry On

:: FORMAL ORGANIZATION SLATED FOR MONDAY ::

Ideals of Noted Georgian

Formal organization of the Henry Grady club will be effected at the Henry Grady hotel clubroom Monday afternoon at 5 o'clock.

The club thus celebrates the 76th anniversary of the birth of Grady and its annual terms will date from that day. A constitution and rules will be adopted and the agenda of the club's future activities agreed upon. Items embraced in it are said to be:

To "carry on" for Atlanta in the unselfish and affectionate spirit of Grady;

To foster wise efforts for the moral and civic uplift of our citizenship;

To promote generosity toward the poor in spirit and in resources;

To support enterprises for the education and physical welfare of our city population;

To exemplify sectional fraternity and unqualified national patriotism.

It is said by the founders that they expect the club to extend its membership throughout the state and to enroll non-resident members living in other sections of the union. Letters of inquiry from Boston, New York and Texas have been received, it is said, and that it is probable that in Dallas, Texas, where Grady made one of his famous speeches, a Henry Grady club for Texas may be organized to cooperate with this parent Georgia club.

Several metropolitan journals have noted the organization of the club here and declared that it should rank with the Hamilton and Jefferson clubs that do patriotic work in other great centers of the nation.

At the conclusion of the session tomorrow at 6 o'clock, the members will repair in a body to the Henry Grady statue on Marietta street, where a memorial wreath will be placed and brief appreciations of Grady spoken by Colonel Walter R. Brown, his fidus Achates, and Dr. Sam Small, a journalistic contemporary.

Pupils of the Henry Grady High school particularly, school pupils generally, and all admirers of Grady who care to, are invited to bring tributary flowers to the statue decoration at 6 o'clock.

At an early date there will be held a public session at the auditorium, with a distinguished orator from the east, to renew to thousands of Atlantans the story of the life and service of Grady.

Prisoner Was Buried Alive

:: DARING PLAN TO ESCAPE REVEALED ::

In Concrete Wall at Joliet

Joliet, Ill., May 22.—Buried alive somewhere within the frowning walls of Illinois state penitentiary here is the skeleton of a life term convict who made a daring attempt to escape by having himself covered with concrete when the walls were being "poured."

The curious story of the prisoner's fate was revealed today in testimony before the Will county grand jury investigating conditions at the big prison. The incident occurred seven years ago and the name of the unfortunate prisoner remains in the penitentiary record merely as "Old John."

Peter Spaggotti, a veteran convict, said he remembered the entombment quite well.

"I was with several other convicts one afternoon pouring concrete on the west wall," Spaggotti said. "When we were about to be called in along toward sunset John said he had an idea.

"'Spag,' he said, 'I'll get down on top of the concrete and when the guards ain't looking you pour some over and cover me. Then when you go in I'll get out and go over the hill.'"

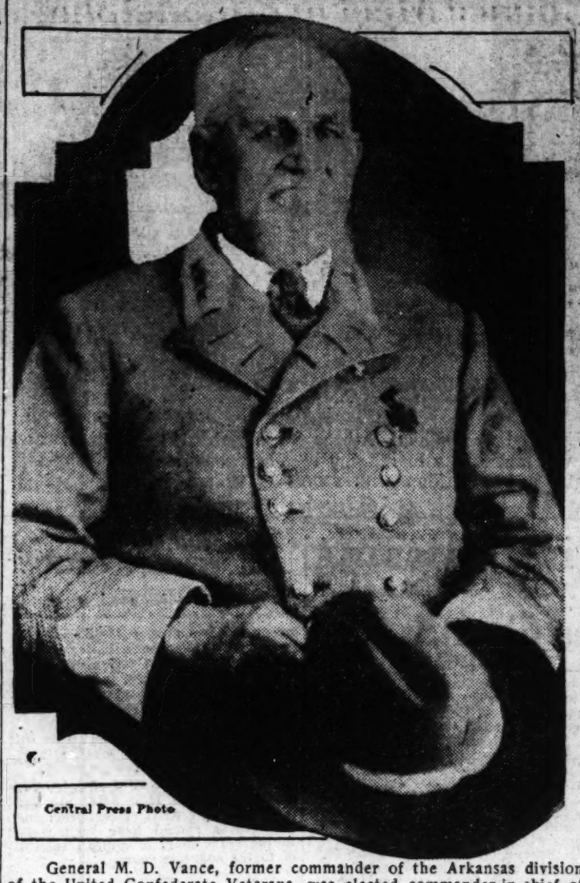

Spaggotti held back for a while but finally agreed. John put a small rubber tube in his mouth and was covered with a thin layer of concrete.

At lockup time the convict's absence was noticed. Searching parties went out but nothing was ever heard of John.

Next morning, Spaggotti said, he was shocked to see the tube still protruding from the mortar. The concrete was in the same condition as when he left it except that it was set firm. John was inside but probably had died during the night, so Spaggotti kept quiet while other workers went ahead building the wall up several feet higher.

The story of the strange affair was a part of Spaggotti's testimony concerning prison conditions. He said the convicts hid boxes of tools a few inches under the concrete in the hope of using them later in a prison escape.

LIQUOR CAR NABBED AT CLARKESVILLE

Clarkesville, Ga., May 22.—(Special.)—The sheriff of Habersham county and his deputy captured a seven-passenger automobile loaded with 174 half-gallon cans of corn whisky. There were four men in the car, three of whom escaped and one was arrested.

PENNSYLVANIA VOTES STILL BEING COUNTED

Philadelphia, May 22.—(AP)—Political party leaders in Pennsylvania still are mulling over the returns of last Tuesday's primary trying to figure out who got the better of one of the most desperate contests in recent years in the state.

The Vare-Beidleman group won the United States senatorship, while the Mellon-Pepper wing of the party apparently captured the governorship.

Noses still are being counted as to which faction captured the majority of the members of the state committee which will reorganize next month and elect a state chairman, to succeed W. Harry Baker, friendly to the forces of Edward E. Beidleman, the defeated gubernatorial candidate.

While the official count will not be completed until next week, tonight Congressman Vare, who ran on a wet platform, had a lead of 84,888 for the republican senatorial nomination, with 128 districts missing. The vote was: Vare 590,851, Pepper 505,963. Governor Pinchot 232,367.

The vote for the republican gubernatorial nomination with one district missing was: Fisher 642,365, Beidleman 627,987, a lead of 14,378. Beidleman's managers refuse to concede the nomination to Fisher in the hope that there may be wide discrepancies in the unofficial returns.

FAMOUS COW PUNCHER TO LASSO MUSK OXEN

New York, May 22.—(AP)—Carl Dunrud, famous Yellowstone National park ranger, is going to exchange his ten gallon hat for a fur parkha, his Mexican heeled boots for snow shoes and invade the sub-polar regions to try to lasso musk oxen and walrus.

The cow puncher who has a national reputation for throwing and tying steers, will sail with the American Museum of Natural History Greenland expedition early in June.

The experiment of lassoing musk oxen and walrus, George Palmer Putnam, director of the expedition said today, will be made for the purpose of obtaining specimens of these creatures for the American and Denver museums. The Canadian government, which owns Ellesmere land, has given permission for the capture of a limited number of the beasts.

Another experiment to be tried by the expedition is the "banding" of Brant Geese, to learn their migratory routes.

SPEEDY ACTION URGED IN FLORIDA LYNCHING PROBE

Tallahassee, Fla., May 22.—(AP)—Governor Martin has requested Judge George W. Whitehurst of the circuit court for Hendry county, to call a special session of the grand jury immediately to take up the cases of the 19 men arrested in connection with the Labelle lynching, the executive stated today.

The governor, in a letter to Judge Whitehurst, suggested that the grand jury should be convened at once to clear up the situation growing out of the lynching last week of Henry Patterson, negro. Those innocent of participation of the occurrence should be freed as speedily as possible, the governor said, in order that they may return to their families.

CHILD DISEASES LEAD TO HEART TROUBLE, CLAIM

Atlantic City, N. J., May 22.—(AP) Childhood diseases aid in obtaining immunity, declared Dr. Charles P. Emerson, dean of the medical school of the University of Indiana, before the state and providential health authorities of North America at their conference here today.

The health authorities, however, passed a resolution stating that these childhood diseases lead to heart trouble in later years and that heart disease is the most frequent cause of adult death.

In speaking before the general session of the American health congress Dr. Emerson stated that parents should allow their children to contract diseases because it would make them immune in later years.

SEARCH IS CONTINUED FOR AIMEE M'PHERSON

Los Angeles, May 22.—(AP)—Authorities of Santa Monica continued searching the sparsely settled hills northeast of Santa Monica today in the belief that Aimee Semple McPherson, evangelist, who disappeared four days ago while surf bathing at Ocean Beach, may have wandered away, a victim of amnesia.

Meanwhile, Herman Cline, Los Angeles detective captain, who holds the belief Mrs. McPherson was drowned, announced that he would establish patrols along the whole of Santa Monica bay to watch for the body. Most of the evangelist's followers are convinced that she lost her life in the surf.

Title to Angelus Temple, a structure covering a square block and which Mrs. McPherson built three years ago with contributions from her flock was vested in Mrs. McPherson, the pastor, and her mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, the latter said today.

If the death of Mrs. McPherson is legally established, it was pointed out, her mother would have title to the temple property with a valuation close to a million dollars.

Besides this property, Mrs. Kennedy said, the two owned a knoll near Elisyian Park, valuable close-in property which was given them, and their home in the fashionable West Adams district.

Mrs. Kennedy, who heretofore had steadfastly held to the belief that her daughter had been drowned accidentally, expressed the view that the evangelist may have been murdered. As a possible motive, she cited the evangelist's opposition to the dance hall measure recently carried in an election which permitted resumption of Sunday dancing at Venice.

POLICE SEEK BOYS IN SAFE ROBBERY; ONE CAPTURED

Jersey City, N. J., May 22.—(AP)—Police today were seeking two companions of John Buskiewicz, eight-year-old confessed safe robber.

The child opened a safe in the Hudson Iron Works last night by using the combination, carried a strong-box to the rear yard, smashed it with a stone and was ready to leave with $40 in loot when a night watchman caught him.

The lad was paroled in the custody of his parents after being booked as a juvenile delinquent. He said two public school pupils accompanied him and gave their names. The police planned to arrest them today and hold all three child cracksmen for a hearing before the juvenile court.

HUGH DILLMAN GETS CONSENT TO CHANGE NAME

New York, May 22.—(AP)—Hugh Dillman McGaughey, who recently married Mrs. Anna Dodge, widow of the automobile manufacturer, obtained permission today from Supreme Court Justice Tierney to assume the name of Hugh Dillman.

In his petition, McGaughey stated he was born February 8, 1885, at Chesterville, Ohio, and now lives on Park avenue. He gave as his reason for changing his name the fact that he has been engaged in theatrical and artistic management for more than 15 years and is known to business associates as Hugh Dillman.

Cumberland Body Of Presbyterians Choose Lakeland

Columbus, Miss., May 22.—(AP)—With the selection of Lakeland, Fla., as the next meeting place, the general assembly of the Cumberland Presbyterian church had finished its routine work tonight and was ready to consider business affecting the denomination's policy Monday. The board of education sponsored an interesting program tonight.

The visiting ministers will occupy pulpits in Columbus churches tomorrow. A consecration service will be held tomorrow morning and another special service will be conducted tomorrow night.

Harmony has prevailed during the first three days of the session. No questions have flared forth to divide the membership. Interest is centered around educational problems, now in the hands of a committee. The report of the educational board reviewed perturbed conditions at Bethel college, McKenzie, Tenn., but failed to cause discussion. Several messages indorsing the administration of Dr. J. R. Whitmer, president of the institution, were received.

A proposal for the consolidation of the endowment commission and the educational board is in the hands of a special committee and is expected to cause much discussion. Burton Huffman, of Nashville, Tenn., was elected president of the young people's general assembly today. He succeeds Miss Anita Weigel, of Memphis, Tenn. Other officers chosen included Miss Jewell Hagood, Birmingham, Ala., vice president; Charles A. Lehning, Nashville, secretary; Ashburn Koch, Evansville, Ind., treasurer, and Miss Dorothy Knight, Dallas, clerk. Officers were installed tonight under the direction of the Rev. Charles E. Mattock, men's supervisor of young people's work. Speeches were made by Elder Wright, of Nashville; Miss Euline Cummings, of Rives, Tenn.; the Rev. George E. Coleman, of Jackson, Tenn., and the Rev. George W. Burroughs, of McKenzie, Tenn.

A petition from the young people's organizations to the women's board of missions, asking for a secretary for the former group was adopted today by the women. A resolution in the young people's organization which would ask for a separate board of publication was defeated after a day spent in wrangling over the ability of the board to function under finances now available.

The women's organization spent the day discussing and adopting a report of the committee on future work which recommended that the next 12 months be a "young people's year," with emphasis on organization of children's bands and missionary societies. The name of the group known as the McCullough Memorial Missionary society was changed to the Master's Missionary Messengers. Plans favoring the establishment if possible of a mountain mission were approved.

Selection of a superintendent of the San Francisco mission was referred to the women's board of missions for action.

Th selection of a convention city brought forth lively discussion. Lakeland finally won over Dallas, Texas; Jackson, Tenn.; Owensville, Ind.; Cookeville and McKenzie, Tenn.

The young people's organization and the women's mission convention adjourned today.

YALE PAPER SCORES STUDENT DRINKING

New Haven, Conn., May 22.—(AP)—Reports there was intoxication among Yale undergraduates at the Yale-Columbia-Pennsylvania regatta on May 8, were taken notice of today by the Yale Daily News. This paper agreed with the alumni weekly that something should be done to prevent recurrence of actions which would bring "disgrace on Yale's fair name."

An alumnus, Watter L. Goodwin, of Hartford, Conn., class of 1897, protested to the weekly against what he called "the absolutely disgusting exhibition of students who were occupants of the observation train at the regatta."

The weekly said university officers "left no stone unturned" to make the regatta a properly conducted affair on the part of the student body, yet, "the drinking at the races and the astonishing lack of public decorum on the part of enough men to make their efforts unsuccessful took place just the same."

The News declared the only remedy for the situation lies in "undergraduate opinion." Specific charges of drinking have not been made officially to deans of departments or the university administration.

A Revelation to Motorists

It is a revelation that quality, performance and style of the Franklin standard can be offered in a closed car at this new price—even Franklin has never done it before. And this is the finest Sedan that Franklin has ever built!

It gives you comfort over going where you don't expect comfort, not merely over going where you do.

You will never know how much cooling bother you can avoid until you have driven a Franklin, which gives none at all. Nor how a fine car can lead in economy till you own this one.

From a style and quality standpoint, there is nothing finer. De Causse's designs are acknowledged style-leaders, and the Franklin reputation for uncompromising quality is a growth of 25 years.

Less than eight months ago this Franklin Sedan sold for $3200. Since then upwards of fifty refinements have been made. And today the price is $2790!

That is why it is a revelation. That is why the demand is multiplying so rapidly. That is why you too should ask for a trial ride.

"Female Ruffians" Denied

GARMENT STRIKE PICKETERS MUST SERVE SENTENCES

Leniency by Chicago Judge

(The Chicago Tribune.)

Chicago, Ill., May 22.—"These women were Amazons—female ruffians—who, in the opinion of the supreme court of this state, were engaged in an open conspiracy to defy the court. It would be robbing justice of her sword and substituting a powder puff to commute their sentences."

Thus, Superior Judge Denis E. Sullivan replied today to seven clubwomen and social workers who appealed to him to save from jail 40 women, most of them mothers, found guilty of contempt of court for picketing during a garment workers' strike two years ago. The women must begin serving sentences of from 10 to 50 days each within a few days following a decision of the supreme court which upheld their convictions by Judge Sullivan.

Miss Jane Addams led the delegation.

They based their plea on "humanitarian ideas." It would do the community no good, they argued, to send to jail two-score women whose crime was that they had attempted, lawfully, it is true, to get higher wages.

Judge Sullivan remarked:

"Even if I wished I could do nothing for these women. I have no power to lessen their punishment. But if you women had heard the trial of these Amazons, I doubt if you would present such a plea.

"Day after day, they were warned that they were defying the court. But their attitude was insolent. They attacked other women who wished to work. One woman attacked a policeman who also had children dependent upon him, pushed him down an areaway and crippled him for life."

Tears of Mother Fail,

CURIOUS CONTRAST PICTURED IN GOTHAM COURTS

But Sobs of Wife Win

New York, May 22.—A mother's tears failed to move a justice in securing leniency for her wayward son, while in another courtroom the sobs of a wife won mercy for her husband, a mail thief.

Breaking into the Bronx county courthouse where her son Charles was awaiting sentence for robbery, Mrs. A. Stern forced her way before Judge Albert Cohen and tremblingly shouted, "Please listen to me, judge. It was my fault, not his. I'm his mother."

The last words were drowned by the judge's intonation of "not less than seven and one-half and not more than 15 years in the state prison at Sing Sing."

In the federal courtroom Mrs. G. W. Bridges, with a baby in her arms, stood before the bench and wept as Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard sentenced her husband, George, to two years in the federal penitentiary for mail robbery.

"I haven't a cent," she wailed. "When he goes away I don't know how we're going to get along—there are three children."

Pulling $10 from his pocket, Judge Goddard started a collection which netted $85.

He handed this money to Bridges saying, "I'm putting you on probation for two months."

MACON MAN HEADS GEORGIA LIONS

Macon, Ga., May 22.—(AP)—William A. Mann, of Macon, was today elected next district governor of the Georgia Lions' Clubs and Albany was selected as the 1927 convention city. The election came at the close of the morning session of the annual convention of the Lions' clubs which began here yesterday and which closed tonight with the annual banquet. Mann succeeds George H. Conklin, of Augusta, as district governor.

In the balloting for the next governor, Mann and Jack Partain, of Atlanta, tied for district governor and Partain withdrew from the race in favor of Mann. The new governor appointed Partain as first lieutenant-governor of the Georgia district, and Sol Simon, of Albany, was named second lieutenant-governor.

The morning session was featured with an address by Ban A. Ruffin, of Richmond, Va., international vice president of the Lions' clubs. He was the main speaker at the banquet last night which was presided over by T. H. Halliburton, of Macon, an international director.

This afternoon the visitors were entertained at luncheon by the Shirley Hills club, later attending a ball game between the Lions' club team of Wayeross and the Lions' club team of Columbus.

DECATUR BONDS SELL AT PREMIUM

Decatur, Ga., May 22.—(Special.) The $170,000 bond issue recently voted here with which to erect a new city hall, new school buildings and extension of water mains, were sold today to the J. H. Hilsman company and Citizens & Southern bank in Atlanta for $180,850, a premium of more than 6 per cent, which is considered a record premium on local bond sales.

Contracts have been let for the new school buildings and for the water mains extension but the city hall will be erected under personal supervision of City Manager Looney.

The city commission, Scott Candler, mayor, is gratified that Decatur's financial standing is such that the bonds brought such a handsome premium.

ATHENS PAPER WINS CONSTITUTION CUP

EDITOR PRAISES MEMBERS OF STAFF.

Athens, Ga., May 22.—(Special.)—Athens High school's publication, "The Red and White," won the silver loving cup presented by The Atlanta Constitution for the best secondary school publication published this year.

When Miss Josephine Brooks, editor-in-chief, was notified Saturday of The Constitution award being won by the "Red and White" staff she praised her associates and expressed the pleasure of herself and staff for their achievements.

"When The Constitution notified us that the 'Red and White' had won the cup offered for the best high school paper in Georgia, we could hardly believe it. The 'Red and White' is published semi-monthly by the students of the Athens High, but the final publication was published as the school annual. The paper was run by the cooperation of the student body. We used no advertisements.

"This is the second year the 'Red and White' has been published. The year before last the paper was started but was suspended last year. This year we decided to revive it and of course had to start all over. The staff was selected by a try-out. We had to write an editorial, a news story and rewrite. I think the staff has derived much good from having published the 'Red and White' and I believe the student body has enjoyed our little publication. I believe it has helped in maintaining the wonderful spirit that characterizes Athens High and accounts in large measure for its success in athletics, scholastics as well as all around development of its students."

The "Red and White" is published under direction of the English department. Miss Ruby Anderson is faculty adviser. The annual published last week by the "Red and White" staff is a very creditable magazine and the school is justly proud of the achievement of the staff. The McGregor company published the "Red and White" semi-monthly issue and the annual.

The annual contains photographs of Principal E. B. Mell, Miss Mamie Turnbull, woman principal; the several classes, staff of the publication, athletic teams, campus scenes, board of education and other photographs of interest.

The contest was sponsored by the Georgia Tech chapter of the Pi Delta Epsilon honorary journalistic fraternity. The judges were L. D. Newton, editor of the Christian Index and Atlanta City Builder, and G. M. Sparks, head of the journalism department of Tech, and a well known newspaper man.

HARRIS AND CLEM ON KENNESAW BOARD

this section. From Atlanta he was transferred to different departments, becoming liutenant colonel, colonel, then brigadier general, and after reaching the army retiring age was promoted by President Harding to a major generalship. He has made his home in Washington since his retirement from the army.

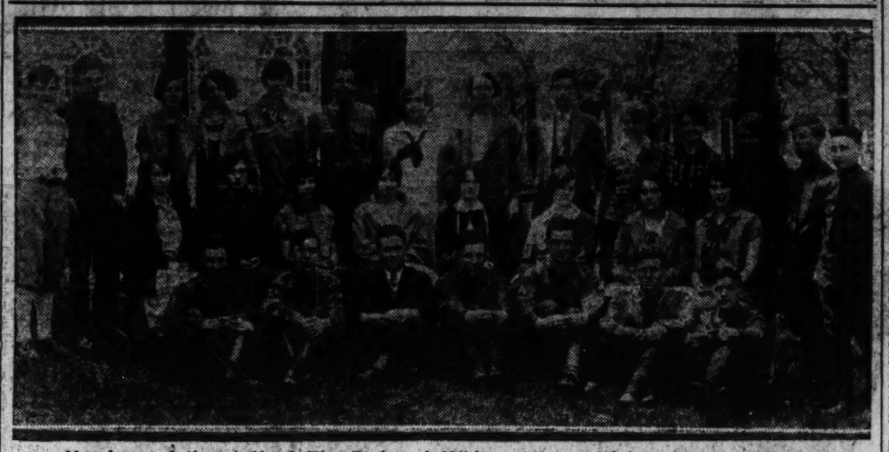

During his five years' residence in Atlanta he actively interested himself in all civic matters, was a hard worker in charitable and humanitarian enterprises and was one of the founders and first vestrymen of the Episcopal Church of the Incarnation in West End, where he had resided with his family. He was particularly popular with the old Confederate veterans in those days, and was frequently invited as a guest at their meetings. He was universally beloved here and left Atlanta with more friends than ever made by any army officer.

General Clem enlisted in the civil war as a mere boy, running away from his home in Ohio to join the federal army. As a drummer boy he got into the thick of the fight at Shiloh and was ever afterwards known as "the Drummer Boy of Shiloh."

Cry of "Pie! Pie!" Missing

SHERIFF DENIES PROFITEERING CHARGES

As Kohler Faces Grand Jury

Cleveland, Ohio, May 22.—(AP)—The familiar cry of "Pie! Pie!" by Sheriff Ered Kohler's hawkers in county jail was missing today. So was the sale of newspapers and other extras.

Orders to discontinue peddling in the prison were issued shortly before Kohler went before the county grand jury to defend his "starvation diet" and deny charges of profiteering in jail luxuries at the expense of the inmates.

Kohler asserted that he had "lost money feeding prisoners."

The grand jury investigation started upon reports that Kohler charged the prisoners 10 cents a cut for pie; 5 cents for newspapers which sold on the streets for 2 cents; 20 cents for cigarettes, and 5 cents for two boxes of 1-cent matches.

Announcement of the discontinuance of all "extras" followed a conference between Common Pleas Judge Frank C. Phillips, who ordered the investigation, and Chief Deputy Martinec. Reports reached Phillips that 50 prisoners who revolted Wednesday against the "starvation diet" were being punished for the rebellion after being assured no such treatment would be accorded. It was this promise by Judge Phillips that ended the revolt.

FRENCH CAPTURE CHIEF OF RIFFS

Tangier, May 22.—(AP)—The French claim that Abd-el-Krim, Riffian chief, and his family have been captured at Targuist.

FRENCH WAR OFFICE LACKS CONFIRMATION.

Paris, May 22.—(AP)—The French war office lacks information of the capture of Abd-El-Krim, reported as having been claimed by the French in a Tangier, Morocco, dispatch.

The Moroccan war communiques received here tonight also are silent concerning the Riffian war lord.

The report reached Paris today by way of Tangier, where the news was received from Melilla, Spanish Morocco.

Abd-el-Krim, as leader of the warlike Riffians, has long been a thorn in the side of the French and Spanish in Morocco. Refusing to recognize the protectorate set up by the Paris and Madrid governments in so far as they affected the Riff, Krim led his warriors in revolt against Spain in 1922 and met with some success. After the Spaniards had withdrawn some distance and established a successful barrier along the northern Littoral, however, he turned his attention to the French and launched a drive with Fez as its objective.

Krim's announced object has been to establish the independence of his country. At one time he termed himself sultan of Morocco and called upon all Moslems to rally to his cause. He consented this spring to peace pourparlers, and a conference was held in Oujda, in the French zone. The negotiations, however, never really got under way because of his refusal to accept the preliminary conditions of the French and Spanish calling for disarmament and exchange of prisoners.

Soon after the breakdown of the peace negotiations the French and Spanish began an intensive attack, which has developed into a pincers movements for the north and south. Within the last few days the French have claimed important victories and a dispatch from Fez today reports an advance near the village of Targuist, which is mentioned in the Tangier dispatch as the place where Krim was captured.

OIL WELL SHOOTER KILLED IN EXPLOSION

Amarillo, Texas, May 22.—(AP)—Paul Wright, oil well shooter for the Independent Torpedo company, was killed when a torpedo being prepared to place in a well near Pama, exploded prematurely today. Wayne Williams, a tool dresser, was injured fatally, dying an hour later. Robert Chelwood, another tool dresser, was injured agriously.

FREEDOM GIVEN TO LIQUOR SHIP

Norfolk, Va., May 22.—(AP)—Shrouded in as much official secrecy as on last Saturday, when she was towed into port by the coast guard cutter Manning, the rum-laden Honduran auxiliary schooner Julito was towed out to sea today. Efforts to learn what was to be done with the vessel, which was declared to have been seized 200 miles off the coast after an exchange of shots with two coast guard ships and a long chase, led to a blank wall so far as official information was concerned.

Captain A. J. Henderson, commandant of the district coast guard headquarters here, said he knew nothing whatever about the vessel. Customs officials likewise professed entire ignorance of the Julito's status. An inquiry at coast guard headquarters in Washington brought the information that Rear Admiral Billard, commandant, had issued orders that the matter be not discussed in any manner.

Unofficial reports here, however, were to the effect that the Julito had been ordered released by Washington, and that she was being towed to sea there to be given her freedom. The Manning, the same ship that captured the Honduran craft, left Baltimore with her in tow at 10 a. m. and passed out of the Virginia Capes at 1 p. m.

During their stay of exactly one week here the captain and crew of the Julito were held incommunicado and under constant guard at the St. Helena naval reservation. None was allowed to come neaf her, and no noe was allowed to go aboard. The craft was said to have about 2,000 cases of Canadian Club whisky and a large quantity of alcohol aboard.

ATLANTA YOUTH DROWNS AT ATHENS

Athens, Ga., May 22.—(AP)—Marlon Downs, ten-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe H. Downs, of Atlanta, was drowned in West lake here this afternoon. The boy was feeding fish in the lake from a small boat when it overturned.

Walter Forbes, captain of the University of Georgia swimming team, found the body of young Downs after it had been in the water almost an hour. Efforts at resuscitation were futile.

Mr. Downs is a salesman for the White Motor Company of Atlanta, and left early Saturday afternoon for Athens on a short business trip. He learned of the death of his son Saturday afternoon soon after reaching Athens.

TENNESSEE CITY SWINGS AX AGAIN

torney General George M. Napier, of Georgia, obtained the writ recently to prevent the city of Chattanooga from constructing the street across property owned by the state of Georgia and leased to the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis railway.

Local attorneys for the state of Georgia declined to say what, if any, further action was contemplated.

In vacating the order today at Nashville, Judge Hall held that the application for writs of certiorari and supersedeas should have been made to the state court of appeals instead of to the supreme court.

NAPIER TO LEAVE TODAY FOR CONFERENCE.

Attorney General Napier will go to Chattanooga today for a conference with William L. Frierson, attorney for the state of Georgia in the Chattanooga right-of-way controversy.

Colonel Napier said Saturday afternoon that there was no action possible to stop the Chattanooga authorities from opening Broad street through the Georgia-owned property earlier than Monday. It will be necessary to file a formal petition in the Tennessee court of appeals, which cannot be done until Monday morning. It is probable that this action will result from the conference between Colonel Napier and Mr. Frierson today.

Mr. Napier said he did not know what progress it would be possible for Chattanooga to make in demolishing the Georgia property over the weekend, but presumed that city would do all it could in this direction. Asked if tracks of the state-owned railroad would be torn up, the Georgia official said he did not know whether Chattanooga would go to this length, and added that he presumed it would have to obtain permission to do this from the N., C. & St. L., lessees of the property, first.

Plans Are Upset.

It had been expected by Georgia attorneys that, in event the Tennessee supreme court refused to take jurisdiction in the case, as actually happened Saturday, they would turn the case over to the court of appeals directly, which action would have prevented any such situation as now has occurred in Chattanooga. However, news dispatches declare that Justice Hall, of the Tennessee supreme court, simply vacated the restraining order on the ground of lack of jurisdiction, necessitating a new petition on the part of Georgia in the Tennessee court of appeals.

Colonel Napier expressed the view Saturday afternoon that it was unfortunate that the situation had developed late Saturday, when this state is barred from further action over the week-end, whereas Chattanooga authorities can proceed with the demolition of property straight through. He said that it was impossible to take further court action until the courts open in Nashville Monday.

Colonel Napier drew attention to the fact, however, that regardless of the action of Justice Hall on Saturday and the resultant resumption by Chattanooga of demolition of the Georgia property, the case would eventually reach the Tennessee supreme court, and in all probability, the supreme court of the United States.

Under the Tennessee law, while the city of Chattanooga is permitted to tear down the property, the state of Georgia can appeal to the highest courts in regard to the amount of damages to be awarded. This state already has appealed from the award made in the lower Tennessee courts as to the value of the property, and this case will reach the higher courts in the regular order of procedure.

On other legal points, Georgia has taken exception to the findings of the lower courts, and these appeals also are now on their way to the state supreme court.

NEW PROHI ORDER MAY GO TO COURTS

resents an earnest effort to enforce the law, and is aimed merely at securing cooperation between federal government and states where that can be effected without friction or ill feeling.

President Coolidge has urged in several speeches, one very recently, that the states preserve their rights. If he is sincere, it is pointed out, he certainly would not take such a step as this unless it were the last thing, and necessary thing, to do in order to secure law enforcement, to which he is pledged.

Andrews said today that the order is legal and constitutional, that sheriffs, deputy sheriffs and constables in the states have been eligible to hold assistant United States marshal jobs since 1873. Authority for a state officer to hold a federal commission is not a new idea, he said.

Another theory is that the order was issued to cover certain specific local situations, and that its use was not to be made general. The system was originally suggested by the prohibition administrator in California to meet a local situation there. It will be tried out first in California.

The administration, it is said, did not expect the amount of publicity that the order has brought. In fact, the order was not made public until two weeks after it was signed by President Coolidge, and the inference has been drawn that perhaps the administration did not intend to make it public.

The order was signed May 8. On Friday a newspaperman walked into the office of the assistant of Andrews and saw a copy of it lying on the desk. He asked if he might use it, and was told that he could. That was how the story came out. Officials at the prohibition unit expressed surprise that it had not been made public sooner.

Andrews admitted today that he intends to extend the use of the order, but said it probably would be confined to rural districts, especially to run down moonshiners in mountain sections which are more familiar to local officials. He has no intention, he said, to appoint entire police forces in large cities as federal dry agents.

Senator Bruce, Maryland, democrat, and wet, went so far in his speech on the executive order in the senate as to intimate that President Coolidge was using it as a political gesture for support of the drys in 1928, a theory subscribed to by others.

Whatever the reason for the order, and it may be a combination of reasons, it has been seized by the wets as campaign material.

Senator Bruce announced today that the wets expect to challenge in the courts the right of President Coolidge to issue such an order. They probably will sue for an injunction forbidding the order to be put into effect whenever an appointment is made in a state, Bruce said. The ground for this, he explained, is that the order constitutes an undue burden upon the states by the federal government. There are many decisions as precedents holding that such burdens are illegal, he declared, citing as one example, the exemption from the federal income tax of state officials, on the ground of "undue burden."

ATTEMPT TO DICTATE CHARGED BY RITCHIE.

Baltimore, May 22.—Governor Albert Ritchie looks upon the order of President Coolidge to permit federal enrollment of state, county, or municipal officers as an attempt, as far as Maryland is concerned, to give local officers a power which the legislature refused to grant them.

The governor made this comment on the president's order:

"The Maryland legislature has refused to enact the Volstead law in this state. This means that it has declined to clothe local Maryland officers with the duty of enforcing the Volstead act.

"The effect of President Coolidge's order, if carried out, would be to place this duty upon them. It seems to me most extraordinary that a federal executive order should undertake to confer upon local officers of Maryland functions and duties which the legislature has decided they should not have.

"I think also, that an order of the federal government which imposes upon the local officers of any state the duty of enforcing a federal law which is not also a state law is entirely inconsistent with our dual system of government. This is a clear attempt of the federal government to dictate to such a state what should be the duties of its local officers."

CALIFORNIA SHERIFFS WILL BE SWORN IN.

Washington, May 22.—(AP)—Enlistment of California deputy sheriffs as federal prohibition officers was ordered today by Assistant Secretary Andrews of the treasury, under authority granted by President Coolidge to employ state, county and municipal police in dry law enforcement.

He announced that local officers would be used only in California for the present and that enlargement of the federal force would be confined to deputy sheriffs. No consideration, he added, has been given to nationwide application of the new executive order.

Authority provided by the executive order was desired principally to permit closer inspection of rural districts, General Andrews explained, adding that it was for that reason deputy sheriffs would be enlisted.

Local police will be used only with their consent, the dry chief said, disclosing that Ned Green, California prohibition administrator, had requested authority to employ deputy sheriffs volunteering their services.

Prohibition officials scouted the argument advanced in the senate that the order was unconstitutional, and recalled that President Grant had permitted the appointment of sheriffs as deputy marshals. The order of President Coolidge was an amendment to that of Grant forbidding federal officers to accept employment as local officials.

General Andrews differed with the view of Prohibition Commissioner Jones that one purpose of the new authority would be to allow local officers clothed with federal power to ignore state, county and city boundaries in the pursuit of prohibition violators. He said no consideration had been given this point.

No More Razor Blades to Buy!

The U. S. Patent Office has recently issued a patent on an amazing new invention which does away with razor blade expense, dull blades, and disappointing shaves. It stops stropping automatically when the blade has reached its keenest edge. An Oklahoma man used it and shaved with the same blade for eighteen months. It is called KRISS-KROSS, a new kind of blade sharpener, different from anything on the market. So certain does it work that the inventor guarantees to keep any man in razor blades for life. He also gives free a new kind of razor with every KRISS-KROSS stropper. Agents are cleaning up under this special offer. New Rows Believed Looming As Chief Beavers Returns To Former Police Post

Connally's Appointment Until June 2 and Choice of Assistant Promise Storms.

Possibility of a new issue between James L. Beavers, chief of police, and the police committee of city council, which will write a new chapter into the long dissention over the many-times deposed official, developed Friday.

The new difference may develop early this week when the state court of appeals sends its remittitur in the Beavers' case back to the original trial court, Fulton superior court, declaring illegal Beavers' conviction on charges of failing to visit beats at irregular and unexpected times.

The police committee has named C. P. Connally, former acting assistant chief, as temporary chief. His term will extend to June 2, when the police committee holds a session, under terms of his appointment.

The court of appeals remittitur is scheduled to reach Fulton superior court Monday and Beavers has stated that he intends to return to his post as soon as this takes place, if his physical condition will permit.

Mooted Question Involved.

Therefore, the question will be whether Beavers can be denied readmission to his rank and post until June 2.

The police committee takes the position that it will be necessary for it to reinaugurate Beavers; to formally accept and ratify the action of the court of appeals, so to speak.

On the other hand, legal authorities are of the opinion that no such procedure will be necessary. They say that when the remittitur reaches Fulton superior court reversing the finding of that tribunal, no order replacing Beavers will be necessary. The superior court, as a matter of routine, will stamp the remittitur and the file of the case "make this the order of this court," but it is not expected to issue an order stating how and when Beavers will be reinstated.

In fact, under strictly legal interpretation, Beavers has never been deprived of his rank, and has remained chief while the case was in process of litigation. So that his return will automatically be directed and will take place the moment the papers are in the hands of the superior court and are made the order of the lower court.

Both Sides Watling.

The police committee and city officials generally have taken no definite stand in the matter other than to appoint Connally until June 2. They seem to have adopted an attitude of waiting on Beavers to make the first move, and just what Beavers' move will be, he declined Saturday to say. The chief said he is rapidly regaining his health following a recent stroke of paralysis, and spoke of his victory in the courts with gratification. But he would not commit himself in the matter of his future plans.

Still another point that promises to result in difference between Beavers and the committee is the selection of a permanent assistant chief. Captain A. J. Holcomb, senior captain, now holds the title of acting assistant chief, his appointment also running to June 2.

It is reported that a strong movement on behalf of Captain Grover C. Fain is on foot in the committee, but whether Fain will be acceptable to Beavers as his assistant is a matter of doubt.

Recommendations Necessary

When the time to select a permanent chief comes, Beavers will make recommendations to the committee. The committee may reject these recommendations, whereupon Beavers will be required to make additional ones to the number of six.

Should all six of Beavers' favored candidates be rejected by the committee, that body may then proceed to elect its own man, a provision of the city code specifying that this shall be the course pursued in any difference between the chief and the committee over the matter of appointments.

Beavers also declined Saturday to comment on his plans in the matter of selecting an assistant chief.

CHINESE GOVERNMENT IS ONE-MAN OFFICE

Pekin, May 22.—(AP)—While the war lords who dominate the situation in Peking, principally Marshals Chang Tso-Lin, of Manchuria, and Wu Pei Fu, of Hankow, continue to maneuver for political position, the nominal government of China continues to be a one-man affair.

Dr. W. M. Yen, the veteran statesman, who recently announced the formation of a "regency" cabinet with himself as premier, to conduct affairs under the aegis of the dominant militarists, still is the only active member of the only formal government the republic of China has.

However, two of those nominated for his cabinet have indicated their intention of taking up their portfolios. General Yang-Wen-Kai, named minister of agriculture and commerce, remains at Nanking, but he is understood to have forwarded his acceptance and to be preparing to come to Pekin. V. K. Wellington Koo, former minister to Great Britain and the United States, also is inclined to accept the finance portfolio.

In this post he hopes for the successful conclusion of the international tariff conference, which he believes would bring into immediate operation the surtaxes on the Chinese maritime customs granted by the Washington conferences, resulting in a revival of China's credit, now at its lowest ebb.

Howard Declares Special Destiny Aids U.S. Growth

Richmond, Va., May 22.—(AP)—A special destiny has assisted the United States to become a great and powerful country, in the course of a hundred and fifty years, Sir Esme Howard, the British ambassador said here tonight in addressing the Society of Colonial Wars.

The ambassador spoke of the struggles of the colonial wars and continental in which England and France were involved and of their influence upon the development of the life of the American nation.

"It seems to me," he said, "that the lessons to be learned from this period is that in the future, as in the past, the English-speaking races will continue consciously some times as during the late war, unconsciously often as after 1783, to stand together and assist each other for the great purposes for which they supremely stand, government of the people, for the people, by the people, government of law and not of force, government of steady evolution towards the great purpose of government, the protection of life and liberty of the individual, the guarantee of the possession of his lawful property to each individual, and equal opportunity to all in the pursuit of happiness."

The ambassador said he hoped above all things that "all countries may in the course of years sink their old animosities and rise above their suspicions, working together to save the world from the supreme folly of another war."

If France and Germany would do this, he said, "and if Great Britain and the United States stand together for their ideals of peace and good government, then I believe we shall be able to leave a better world to our children than the world we were born into."

J. WARREN SMITH NAMED RECEIVER FOR FLORIDA HOTEL

Miami, Fla., May 22.—(AP)—J. Warren Smith, vice president of the American National Bank and Trust company of West Palm Beach, Fla., has been named as receiver for the Hotel Alba, at Palm Beach, by Judge W. I. Grubb in federal court here.

The receiver was named in the bankruptcy proceedings instituted against the Southern Florida Realty corporation, owners of the hotel, by the Imperial Manhattan corporation, the Southern Florida Operating company and John D. Small.

William F. Carroll, representing the Alba, said the hotel liabilities were $6,000,000, the amount of $4,200,000 being held in mortgages by S. W. Strauss and company of New York. The action was described by Mr. Carroll as a 'friendly and voluntary case of involuntary bankruptcy, filed with the knowledge and consent of all concerned."

Belief was expressed by Mr. Carroll that the financial difficulties would likely be adjusted within the next few months and that the hotel would probably open next season under the same management.

8-LEGGED ANIMAL ROAMED COLORADO CANYON YEARS AGO

Washington, May 22.—A strange animal with eight legs and 16 toes once roamed the region about the Grand Canyon of Colorado.

Tracks in the ancient rock walls of the Grand Canyon furnished the clue. They were discovered by Dr. Charles W. Gilmore, of the National Museum here, and park employees of the interior department, along with many evidences of prehistoric plants.

It was many ages ago that the eight-legged animal roamed the Colorado basin, as 1,000 feet of rock strata has been built above the place where the tracks were discovered. The Colorado river exposed its existence to the world, cutting the deep gorge into the rocks.

While the nature of the animal is not known, a cast of it may some day stand in the national museum, as the physical contours of other animals have been constructed from small evidence.

Young Man Cut WhenHeInquired Cause of Quarrel

Chester Dickson, 24, of No. 178 South Forsyth street, was taken to Grady hospital late Saturday night suffering from serious knife wounds about the arms and hands, said to have been inflicted by a man whose identity police did not learn. It required 36 stitches to close Dickson's wounds, doctors stated.

Dickson, according to his statement to doctors at the hospital, was slashed when he asked "What is the trouble?" as he saw a man quarreling with a young woman at a South Forsyth street address.

The assailant jumped into an automobile and was pursued for several blocks by S. F. Jones, of 661 Catherine street, who with three companions were passing the scene of the cutting. Jones, it was stated, followed the assailant out East Fair street beyond Kirkwood, and just after the fugitive car passed Boulevard a tire blew out and it was forced to slow down. Jones and his companions condown. Jones and his companions continued to follow for several blocks and then reported the matter to police.

Coast Line Plans Big Expenditure; Georgia Included

Wilmington, N. C., May 22.—(AP) The Atlantic Coast Line general headquarters here today announced definite and formal authorization of additions and betterment to its transportation facilities that will cost approximately five and one-half millions of dollars. This will make a total of $40,000,000 spent during the past year and a half, the announcement said.

The work approved comprises a large number of projects in all six states served by the company.

The largest single project is that of the locomotive repair shops at Tampa, Fla. Other projects include new shop facilities at St. Petersburg, Fla., new passenger stations at Lake Wales and Orlando, Fla., automatic signals between Folkstone and Waycross, Ga., and two interlocking plants at Albany, Ga.

High Court Asked To Modify Decision In Cottonseed Case

Washington, May 22.—(AP)—The Hartsville oil mill at Hartsville, S. C., in behalf of itself and some 500 other cotton seed oil mills throughout the south, today asked the supreme court to modify its recent decision affirming the court of claims in rejecting the claim of the mills for payment from the government for cotton linters produced from the cotton crop for the year ending July 31, 1919.

The supreme court sustained the lower court in its findings that the companies were not entitled to compensation for all the linters produced during the crop year.

Asserting that the decision was caused by an insufficiency of findings by the court of claims and that the evidence before that court warranted a finding in support of the contentions of the mills, the Hartsville company asked the supreme court to modify its judgment, and instead of simply affirming the decision of the lower court to send the case back to the court of claims for further findings of facts.

BURLESQUE REVUE PLANNED BY WRITERS

New York, May 22.—(AP)—A "revolutionary burlesque revue" is to be produced this summer by a group of playwrights, novelists and others who have formed the "first workers' theater in America." Plays of a "frankly revolutionary nature" are to follow the burlesque, it was announced today.

John Howard Lawson, playwright; John Dos Passos, novelist, and Michael Gold, editor of "The New Masses," are included in the group.

Fight on Harbors And Rivers Bill Causes Bedlam

Washington, May 22.—(AP)—The $36,000,000 rivers and harbors appropriation bill was brought before the house today after four hours of parliamentary bedlam. Consideration of it then was postponed when a motion to adjourn, the eighth one made, prevailed.

The bill was stripped of the provision for expenditure of $25,000 for a new survey of the proposed all-American canal route, one of its most controversial points, when Speaker Longworth upheld an objection of Representative Mapes, republican, Michigan, to the technical wording of the section. This was done while a motion for consideration of the measure was pending and before the bill was formally before the house.

Four roll calls, each consuming half an hour, were taken on demand of members opposed to provision of $1,350,000 for navigation improvement of the Illinois river, with which is linked the highly controversial question of water diversion from Lake Michigan. Two more roll calls were forced on whether a roll call should be ordered to determine if a quorum was present.

Influx from cloakrooms and lobbies of members on each of the roll calls brought almost unending inquiries concerning procedure, with the speaker able to recognize only one of a score or more of perturbed, yelling gesticulators.

Five votes were taken by having the membership file past tellers in the center aisle and more than a score of standing votes were forced.

Lyons, announced, and Lieutenant Commander William Cogan, retired, was elected as the dental school's dean. Earlier in the week the resignations were submitted as a protest against consideration of the Cogan appointment.

DR. RUFUS C. HARRIS MERCER LAW DEAN

Macon, Ga., May 22.—(Special.)—Judge William H. Fish, who resigned his place as chief justice of the supreme court of Georgia about three years ago to become dean of the law school of Mercer university, is to become dean emeritus, and, on account of failing health, will teach only one class next year, it was announced at the university today. His work will be on "Georgia Practice."

Announcement is made that Dr. Rufus C. Harris, secretary of the Mercer University Law school, will become dean of that department. He will teach the property courses, including mortgages and trusts.

Two new professors are added to the law school, according to the announcement, and new quarters are to be provided for the school.

Joe A. McClain, honor graduate of Mercer in 1925, will become professor of equity courses. He is to study at Yale during the summer. He has been with the law firm of Slade & Swift in Columbus, Ga., since his graduation.

The name of the second new professor is not disclosed, but it is said that he will come from one of the leading law schools and will hold the degree of doctor of laws. His work will include contractural subjects.

The law school will be removed from Sherwood hall to new quarters not yet selected, it was stated.

The Mercer law school was given a class A rating in 1925 by the American Bar association.

Indian Chief Spared Contempt Of Former Love

BY JOHN STEELE.

(Copyright, 1926, by The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

London, May 23.—Sir Tukoji Rao Holkar, former maharajah of Indore, who is seeking balm for his sensitive heartaches in the mountain fastnesses of a secluded Swiss resort is likely to be spared the public humiliation which his former love, Mumtaz Begum, wished to wreak on him.

Mumtaz, it now is revealed, will be unable to leave India for Europe in order to haunt the footsteps of the former maharajah, flaunting her love for her present husband before his face, which was a plan her hate induced her to contemplate. The reason she will not be able to carry it through is that she is involved in a series of law suits in the Hindu courts with her own mother in order to obtain possession of her daughter, Sadat Begum, whose father was Abdul Bawla, a Bombay merchant. The father was murdered two years ago by servants of the maharajah from whose harem Mumtaz Begum had escaped.

The complexities of this passionate drama of Oriental love read like a tale of the Arabian Nights. Vazir Begum, mother of Mumtaz, plays a sinister part in the drama. The mother always favored the daughter's liaison with the haughty maharajah, being proud of her position as favorite of the maharajah's harem.

When Mumtaz married the millionaire leather merchant she gave her infant daughter to the mother, also transferring the legacy of $35,000 in order to care for the child. The mother was much vexed when the daughter quit the maharajah and refused to allow her to see the child, bringing an injunction also against the daughter to restrain her from getting possession of the rest of the legacy.

Every Hill in America Certifies the Power of these Sixes!

Chandler Twentieth Century 4-Door Sedan $1590 f. o. b. Cleveland

Cleveland Model 31 Four-Door Sedan $1090 f. o. b. Cleveland

ALL automobile engineers stress hill-climbing as the main test of an automobile.

The reason is that some cars seem spirited and lively enough on the level, but reveal second-rate power and faltering stamina when forced to tackle a towering hill.

It is a very significant fact, then, that Chandler and Cleveland motor cars together hold more actual performance records on great hills than any other car in America.

Nothing but superior power and superior stamina could ever establish such supremacy in hill-climbing. And it is power, after all, that makes a car delightful to run—and stamina that makes a car endure.

Chandler and Cleveland both have beautiful, rich body styles; both have high-pressure motor lubrication; and both have "One Shot" centralized chassis lubrication. The mere pushing of a plunger with your heel automatically and thoroughly lubricates the entire chassis!

New models at new low prices await your inspection—and any test you have a mind to give them.

New Ansley Entrance Aids In Relieving Traffic Jam

Photograph above shows the James street entrance to the Ansley hotel, recently opened for the purpose of relieving traffic congestion on Forsyth street and enabling egress and ingress from both James and Forsyth streets. Freeman Gibson, veteran doorman who has served the hotel since its erection, is shown in the photograph.

Opening of the James street entrance to the Ansley hotel, giving the big down town Dinkler hotel entrances on both James and Forsyth streets, is expected to prove of much help in relieving traffic congestion at a vital section of the city, according to John Loti, vice president of the Dinkler Hotels company.

In recent months many new buildings have been completed in the vicinity in the rear of the hotel, the Spring street viaduct has been opened and big, new structures are nearing completion, Mr. Loti said. In speeding up service and to provide entrance from the James street section, the big doorway has been opened, he explained. The entrance was provided for when the hotel was erected several years ago but has been closed and only the Forsyth street entrance used.

In opening the new entrance it was necessary to build a new office for Frank T. Reynolds, assistant to President Carling Dinkler, and this was completed in a corner of the big lobby. The veteran hotel man now is ensconced in an elegantly furnished office, with glass walls and doors and furnished with the most expensive equipment.

"Old Freeman" Gibson, in the employ of the Dinkler company for many years, has been stationed at the James street entrance to aid guests and serve them as he has in the past.

Federation of Clubwomen Faced by Many Problems At Convention Next Week

15,000 Women From All Parts of Country Expected To Attend Atlantic City Meeting.

Atlantic City, May 22.—Problems of government, industry, the home, art and music—almost every current subject facing contemporary America—will be discussed before the General Federation of Women's Clubs, which begins its annual convention here Monday.

Fifteen thousand women, from every part of the nation, are expected to attend the convention. They began to arrive today, led by Mrs. John Sherman, of Estes Park, Colo., president of the federation. Other prominent women already here are Mrs. Thomas Edison, Mrs. Gifford Pinchot and Mrs. A. Harry Moore, wife of the governor of New Jersey, who head the hostess' list.

Reports from governmental agencies will be heard Monday. Home betterment, legislative measures affecting women and conservation of America's natural beauty are among the subjects which will receive consideration first. The conservation division will urge indorsement of legislation for the removal of overhead wires and cables as a move to beautify state and national highways. This division also will recommend opposition to the construction of dams which mar the beauty of the Great Lakes.

The literature division will ask that publicity be given good books, and denied bad ones. It also will propose compilation of state biographies leading to greater appreciation and knowledge of American writers and study of the Bible as a cultural thing.

One important feature of the program will be the introduction of women composers, Mrs. Marx Oberndorfer, Chicago, music chairman, announced. Leading American women composers will appear in person. Operas written by four American women will be featured by the singing of the opera arias by American singers.

"Among those who will appear in person are Gena Branscombe, Fay Foster, Harriett Ware, Meta Schumann, Floy Bartlett and Louise Ayres Garnet.

Four American women have written outstanding operas that have been given production by producers: Mrs. Archibal Freer, of Chicago, "The Jester," produced by the Chicago Opera company; Mrs. Alfred Andrews, "Guido Ferranti," produced by the Chicago Opera company; Clara Moore, San Francisco, "Narcissa," and Mrs. Celeste Hechsker, of New York, "The Rose of Destiny." Arias from these operas will be sung by a tenor and soprano from the San Carlos Opera company. Prominent speakers before the federation will include:

ELKS PLAN BIG DAY FOR KIDS AT LAKEWOOD

The Atlanta Elks' big brother committee announced Saturday that Lakewood park, with its breath-taking roller-coaster, its dizzy merry-go-round, its pulse-quickening Old Mill, its immortal peanut stands—its grand and glorious everything—will be thrown open for the special benefit of every boy and girl in Atlanta schools on Thursday, June 10.

J. Turner Fitten, exalted ruler of Atlanta Elks, who is anticipating the event with as much pleasure as any of the children, made the announcement Saturday, explaining that while all entertainment plans had not been worked out yet, the frolic was a certainty. He said that the entire park had been secured by the big brother committee for the day and that invitations have been issued to every youngster in the whole town.

"The committee expects at least 50,000 children as their guests," Mr. Fitten said, "and ample provision will be made to see that each one of them has the time of his life. Other features, exclusive of the various forms of entertainment offered at the park will be arranged, including a flag drill and an especially prepared patriotic program."

All members of the big brothers committee will enact the roles of big brothers on the day, offering the chance of a lifetime for any youngster who never has known the perfect satisfaction of having such a relation in his own family.

More detailed reports of the committee's plans for the big day at Lakewood will be made as soon as they are completed, Mr. Fitten said.

The board voted to add Edward T. Tentative School Bond Allotment To Be Heard At Thursday's Meeting

Apportionment of $3,500,000 of City Bond Issue Will Be Outlined to Public This Week.

Members of city council and the bond commission, Mayor Walter A. Sims, parent-teacher officials and members of civic organizations will hear tentative plans for allotment of the $3,500,000 fund for schools contained in the $8,000,000 bond issue at a meeting to be held at 2:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon at Walker Street school. This announcement was made Saturday by Dr. R. M. Eubanks, president of the board of education.

Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of schools, who Friday outlined the plan at a joint meeting of the board of education and the school "contact committee' of the bond commission, will outline the program, with only a few minor changes, he stated Saturday.

"Time was so limited in Friday's presentation of the plan that all phases of the program were not fully explained and gone into in detail," Mr. Sutton said. "I hope that the public generally will withhold opinions until the department is given an opportunity to explain all suggested allotments."

Mr. Sutton also subscribed to the statement which Dr. Eubanks released regarding the tentative allotments, which follows:

"As president of the board of education and in accordance with a request by an alderman and in compliance with a resolution passed by the board at its meeting of Friday afternoon, May 21, I am naming Thursday, May 27, at 2:30 o'clock, at the Walker Street school building, as a time for inviting the various organizations of the city to hear discussion concerning the building program for schools which has been proposed by the administrative department of the Atlanta public schools. The board of education at its recent meeting heard with pleasure and profit the discussion by Superintendent Sutton of the proposed program. While the board realizes that the program as outlined is in its tentative stage and that some adjustments may be necessary, the board as a whole was very favorably impressed with the program as outlined and wish the representatives of all the organizations of the city to hear all the facts before passing judgment on the program as outlined in the daily press.

"Some features of the school programs as outlined in the press were changed in the recommendations of the superintendent. The public and the patrons of the schools are asked to withhold their judgment until they or their representatives can see the scientific basis on which the program has been outlined. In order that all may see and understand the program as a whole, I am inviting the members of the city council, the bond committee, the officers of the Parent-Teacher associations, and the officers of the various women's clubs, social and civic organizations of the city, to meet at the Walker Street auditorium on the date named above and to hear full and complete discussion of the program. Nothing is more conducive to clear thinking, and the best interests of the city, than for the people to be informed accurately and correctly on school matters. I respectfully ask that until accurate and authentic information has been given out, that the people of the city not pass judgment on the program. Many rumors are afloat and these should be investigated before any decision is made."

JOHN J. CONNORS NEW SAFETY CHIEF OF POWER COMPANY

John J. Connors, who set a new world's safety record while in charge of safety on the Nashville street railway system, has accepted a position as safety supervisor of the transportation department of the Georgia Railway and Power company, and took charge last week.

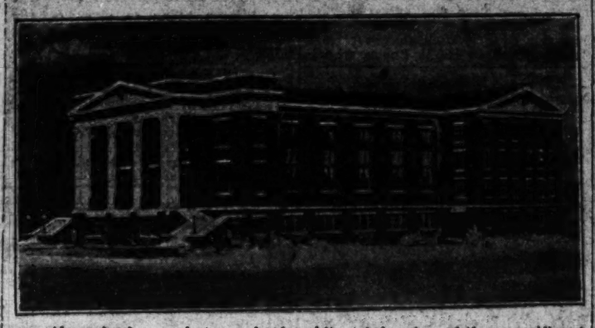

JOHN J. CONNORS

Mr. Connors will have complete charge of street railway safety activities in which the public and employees are involved. Bringing of Mr. Connors to Atlanta is expected to reduce materially the number of accidents throughout the street railway system and he already has started work on a program of teaching every trainman safety rules.

During the 25 years spent with the Nashville company the highest step in Mr. Connors' career came in 1925, when he led the system to the world's safety record. Last year Nashville's street cars went 66 days without an accident of any kind and traveled more than a million miles without a mishap.

At present Mr. Connors is making a detailed analysis of Atlanta's street railway system to decide in which way his work will be most effective.

New Capitol View Baptist Church Nearing Completion

Above is shown photograph of architects' drawing of the magnificent new structure which Baptists of the Capitol View church are erecting. The building is expected to be completed within the coming few weeks at a cost of approximately $85,000.

Completion of the new Capitol View Baptist church, corner of Stewart avenue and Dill avenue, is expected within the coming few weeks and already women of the church are sponsoring a series of affairs preparatory to formal dedication of the structure.

The new building will be one of the most modern in the city and will cost approximately $85,000. The Rev. W. Lee Cutts is pastor.

Activities of women members just now are centering about an "open house" on Sunday, May 30, when the nearly completed building will be thrown open for inspection by the public. A special program is being arranged for the day.

Another feature which is being planned is "Cash day" on June 6 when it is expected that $15,000 needed to complete the building fund will be raised. Just now a considerable amount of money is being raised, according to officials, through a "friendship card campaign," cards being sent out and sums ranging from $1 up subscribed and sent to the church for its new structure.

Other features are being mapped out as preliminaries to tformal dedication ceremonies, it is said, all with a view to making the coming few weeks of much interest to members of the Capitol View Baptist congregation.

$1,000,000 Building Plan At Avondale Is Under Way

T. T. Flagler Begins Construction of First Two of 100 Homes; Swimming Pool Opens Tuesday.

Work on the $1,000,000 development program for Avondale Estates this year already is under way, with start last week by Thorn T. Flagler, head of the Flagler company, widely known builders, of the first two homes of the 100 or more, which this firm plans to build in Atlanta's new suburb.

The Avondale swimming pool, which won so much admiration last year, is scheduled for formal opening for the season Tuesday.

Work is being rushed on Lake Avondale and this new feature of the recreational life of the development is scheduled to be opened early in July.

Within a week another unit of construction will be under way and a weekly schedule thus will be launched to continue through the year, units being enlarged when necessary to supply current demands for homes in the new suburb.

Large Saving Assured.

Employing a large building organization composed of groups of specialists, these builders will be enabled to concentrate skilled effort upon each detail of the project, assuring rapid as well as efficient construction, according to John H. Byrley, general manager of Avondale Estates.

The 100 or more homes which are to be Mr. Flagler's part in the $1,000,000 development program planned for Avondale Estates this year are to be built and made available under the Avondale home building plan. This arrangement, Mr. Byrley explained, provides the home purchaser without additional cost with the services of an expert organization in planning, purchasing, building, and financing, relieving him of the costs which apply to the home building project.

"The Avondale plan, under which facilities for a city of 15,000 are to be provided, calls for maintenance of an organization that seeks no contingent fees, architects' fees, or usual builders' commissions, and no profit on material, architects' services, or brokers' arrangements in the carrying of loans and time payments," Mr. Byrley said. "This enables the construction of homes much cheaper than could be arranged by the individual builder. For instance, a home may be built for $10,000 that would cost $12,000 or more under ordinary arrangements; or a home for $7,500 that would cost $8,500 to $9,000 ordinarily."

Builders Are Active.

Other home-building activities in Avondale Estates have been undertaken in addition to the program of the Flagler company, with similar arrangements by connection with the Avondale building plan of wholesale purchases and mass construction. Charles H. Black, a capitalist, who recently came to Atlanta from Los Angeles and bought a home in Avondale Estates, was so attracted by the advantages of life and recreation to be found there, he said, that he undertook a part in the community's development by building homes extensively. In addition to several homes already built and sold by Mr. Black, he has undertaken the construction of a group of six more.

Hoke N. Smith, another dweller in Avondale, undertook last week the construction of three new homes in the new suburb. The Better Homes corporation also has launched a home-building program in Avondale Estates, that is expected to continue through the summer.

"These activities give assurance that the 15,000 city which is the goal of Avondale Estate will be reached sooner than was anticipated in the original planning," said Mr. Byrley. "Along with the extensive home building programs there is an increasing interest and demand that justifies it.

"Since our summary a week ago of sales of more than $349,000 since the second unit was opened March 29, sales of $71,000 have been made, including many lots upon which the purchasers contemplate building homes as soon as possible. Only yesterday a sale of eight lots to one individual totaled $17,000."

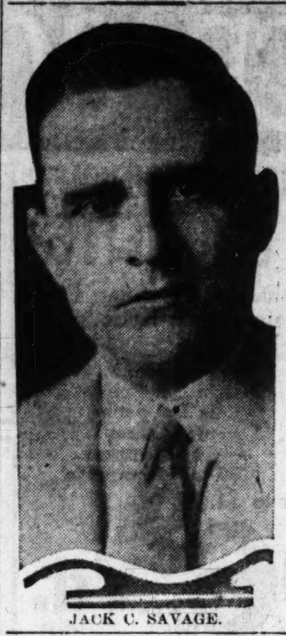

Lake Opens In July.

Larger opportunities for water sports for dwellers in Avondale Estates and their guests are to be provided upon Lake Avondale, the eight-acre body of water in the heart of the second unit, at the wooded head of which a bath house and casino will be built, starting this week. This project, with a bathing beach of white sand to be laid upon the gently sloping shore of the upper lake, will be completed early in July, and the lake will be opened then for swimming and boating.

Paving and improvement with sidewalks, curbing, sewerage, and water mains of seven miles of street frontage in the second unit, will start this week, preliminary work having been completed. This is done without cost to the owner of property in Avondale Estates.

SAVAGE CANDIDATE TO SUCCEED KNIGHT

Jack C. Savage, prominent young Atlanta attorney, who has been practicing law in Atlanta since 1916, Saturday formally announced his candidacy for the post of councilman from the ninth ward to succeed C. D. Knight, incumbent. Mr. Knight stated he had not decided whether he would offer for reelection, but that his candidacy has been placed in the hands of friends.

Mr. Savage in entering the race Saturday announced a progressive policy in regard to development of city parks and opposition to inefficiency of city departments by political combines.

At the present time Mr. Savage is a member of the law firm of Savage and Crawford, having severed his connection with Judge E. E. Pomeroy in 1922 to form his own law firm. He is president of the Scoutmasters' club of Atlanta and is prominent in fraternal circles. He is 30 years old.

Mr. Savage issued the following statement regarding his candidacy:

"Since first coming to Atlanta some eleven years ago I have entertained a desire to take a more definite part in the growth and development of our city and I think city council offers a wide field of opportunity for accomplishment, and in announcing my candidacy for council to succeed Mr. Knight I wish to acknowledge to my friends whose expressions of confidence and support have made the realization of my ambition a possibility, my sincere gratitude.

"If I am chosen to represent the ninth ward I shall:

"1. Lend every effort to the development of our city, and particularly to its public parks.

"2. Vigorously oppose impeding the efficiency of any of the various departments of the government such as fire, school and police, by attempting to use or to build up political machines, pay political debts, etc., in the furtherance of the ambition of any man.

"3. To seek a progressive and economical administration of the city's business."

'LABOR'S REWARD' AT HOWARD TODAY

"Labor's Reward," a motion picture combining all the interests of a thrilling love story, an educational masterpiece and a great industrial story, will be shown at the Howard theater this afternoon at three o'clock. There will be no charge for admission and the general public is invited to attend.

This picture, produced under auspices of the American Federation of Labor, is presented in Atlanta by the Georgia Federation of Labor and the Atlanta Federation of Trades.

John Hoehn, of Pittsburg, famous labor speaker, will explain the significance of certain portions of the screen story, during the showing, and music will be provided from the great Wurlitzer organ.

Everyone who has seen the picture declares that it provides one of the most powerful presentations of the dramatic story of labor, as well as being one of the most entertaining screen productions seen in many months.

Policemen Forget Crime and Cares At Annual 'Cue

With more than 4,000 merry-making Atlantans in attendance and a gay program of feasting, dancing and carnival gaiety along the midway to entertain them, the Atlanta Police Relief association staged its annual benefit barbecue Saturday afternoon at Lakewood Amusement park.

Nearly two tons of meat, done to a turn over the glowing coals banked under it since early Friday, 500 gallons of Brunswick stew, 2,400 pints of buttermilk, nearly 5,000 bottles of soft drinks of various kinds and uncounted loaves of bread were consumed as the favorite comestibles at the feast.

Exact figures on the proceeds were not available Saturday night, as a number of members of the ticket committee still had to make complete reports, but Lieutenant J. W. Blazer, president of the association, and Otis Howell, secretary, both stated that it was one of the most successful barbecues ever held and that probably more than $2,000 would be cleared for the association's treasury.

A children's Charleston contest was won by Jackie Weaver, six-year-old daughter of Lieutenant Buck Weaver, with Catherine Printup as second.

Stock of Groceries Stolen by Negroes In Daring Robbery

One of the most daring grocery robberies ever staged in Atlanta was reported to police early Saturday morning by officials of the Rogers Grocery company.

Virtually the entire stock of groceries from the store at 472 Ashby street was taken away shortly after dawn Saturday morning in an ice wagon by two negroes, police were told. The first load was hauled away about 5 o'clock and shortly afterwards the negroes came back and hauled the remainder of the stock away, according to negroes living in the vicinity. Entrance was gained by twisting the lock from the front door.

Although the exact amount of goods stolen could not be estimated, officials of the company stated that the store was practically looted and the loss was fixed at several hundred dollars.

NINTH WARD VOTERS TO HEAR CANDIDATES

Members of the Ninth Ward Civic association will hear candidates seeking election in the city and district primary at a meeting to be held at 7:45 o'clock Tuesday night at Highland Avenue school, it was announced Saturday by Mrs. Ed A. Pierce, president of the organization.

Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of schools, and R. R. Ritchie, assistant superintendent in charge of business affairs, who prepared the drawings of tentative plans for expenditure of the $3,500,000 allocated for school purposes from the $8,000,000 bond issue, will outline plans of the school department at this meeting. All persons interested in the school system and in the political activities of the ward and city have been invited to attend.

MRS. IDA HUGHES SUES FOR DIVORCE

Macon, Ga., May 22.—(AP)—Mrs. Ida Hughes, serving a life term in the state penitentiary at Milledgeville for the murder of her mother-in-law in Atlanta, more than two years ago, today instituted divorce proceedings in Bibb superior court here against M. Franklin Hughes.

Hughes is wanted by local authorities on a warrant charging bigamy in connection with his marriage last December to Miss Marjorie Anderson, 17, of Bellevue, which she claims was forced.

At the same time the warrant was sworn out before Lee Davis, Crumps park justice of the peace, the second Mrs. Hughes brought annulment proceedings in Bibb superior court.

The divorce petition brought by Mrs. Ida Hughes charges infidelity, naming Miss Marjorie Anderson as the co-respondent.

Wife number 2, who asks for an annulment of her marriage, claims that she was forced by Hughes to marry him, and that he threatened her life on the night of the wedding and that she lived with him two months because of continued threats of violence. The second wife claims that on last December 25 Hughes, by the exercise of force, intimidation and fraud, forced her to marry him, although that he knew he had a living wife from whom he had never been divorced.

A prize is being offered for the best stunt in each group and in this way each club works harder and only competes against clubs within their own group.

BISHOP ANTON BAST REFUSED NEW TRIAL

Copenhagen, May 22.—(AP)—The supreme court has rejected the appeal for a new trial of the Right Rev. Dr. Anton Bast, Methodist Episcopal bishop for Scandinavia, who recently was convicted on a charge of misapplying charity funds. Although Dr. Bast several days ago informed the police that he was ill, he was taken today to begin his sentence of three months in prison.

Dr. Bast was arrested December, 1924, and after a lengthy trial was convicted of misapplying the funds he had received for charity. He appealed to the king for a pardon and when it was refused appealed for a new trial. It was reported early this month that he sought a new trial chiefly to clear his record so that he might emigrate to the United States. He visited the United States in 1922.

Swimming Pools Of City To Open Next Saturday

Coincident with opening of the James L. Key golf course Saturday, L. L. Wallis, superintendent of parks and playgrounds, and Councilman John A. White, chairman of the parks and playgrounds committee of city council, began plans for the opening of city swimming pools next Saturday and the opening of two dozen city playgrounds on June 14.

The big day for Atlanta mermaids and followers of Neptune occurs next Saturday when, according to announcement of Mr. White, all parks over which the city has control, will be thrown open free. Swimmers, tennis players, golfers and all other sport fans will be privileged to use pools, courts, courses and other park privileges free.

The grand opening of swimming pools will take place at 2:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon, and the free clause in the announcement remains in force until closing hour at night.

A special program of dedication of the new Piedmont bathhouse at 1 o'clock in the afternoon has been arranged under direction of Mr. White. The Atlanta municipal band under the direction of John Scharf, will furnish music. Members of the park committee of council, Mr. Wallis; Miss Lillian Everett, park secretary, will occupy the stand.

Mayor Walter A. Sims will make the dedicatory speech.

RITCHIE PRAISED BY CITY EDUCATION BOARD MEMBERS

High praise of the work of Assistant Superintendent of Schools R. R. Ritchie in preparing tentative drawings and charts of the allotment of the $3,500,000 school bond fund contained in the $8,000,000 civic improvement bond issue voted March 24 was given Saturday by members of the board of education.

W. D. Hoffman, commissioner of the eighth ward, declared that the charts and drawings gave members of the board a graphic idea of needs of the schools and supplied them with more knowledge than could have been gained "by weeks of individual study."

"If the school board had employed an architect to make the drawings it would have taken a large amount of money to pay the bill," Mr. Hoffman said. "I feel that the services of Mr. Ritchie, who is intimately familiar with all phases of the school department, in this connection have been almost invaluable."

Pipe Smokers Invite Congressional Candidates To Speak at Banquet

The Grand Lodge of the National Order of Pipe Smokers is considering a plan to sponsor a banquet to hear addresses from all candidates for congress in this district, it was announced Saturday by Dr. Horace Grant, national president of the order. Invitations were sent to Mayor Walter A. Sims, Congressman W. D. Upshaw, L. J. Steele and Louis Burton, candidates in the coming race.

LEADER OAKSHETTE WILL GIVE ADDRESS

Prominent officials of the Maccabees from Birmingham and other tents throughout Georgia will attend the annual meeting Wednesday night at 7:30 o'clock in the assembly room of the Aragon hotel. The local tents, Georgia, No. 18, and Palestine No. 3, and Hive No. 41, will furnish entertainment, consisting of music, singing and dancing.

Dr. Horace Grant will make the principal address on "Fraternalism." Past Commander J. C. Oakshette will give a talk on the progress of the Maccabees. Dr. H. G. Bowden will preside.

PROTEST IS FILED AGAINST ARCHITECT

Atlanta Association of Building Material Dealers Saturday added its protest to that of Atlanta members of the American Institute of Architects to a proposal to engage an architect at a salary to draw plans for new school buildings to be constructed from the $3,500,000 allocated for school purposes in the recent bond issue.

The action of the material dealers' association was expressed in a letter to Arthur Neal Robinson, president of the Georgia chapter, American Institute of Architects, as follows:

"Dear Sir: Having information to the effect that the authorities connected with the building of new school buildings are contemplating their own architectural department to design new school buildings instead of employing established, reputable, independent architects to design and supervise the work and inspect material and equipment used in these buildings, the members of this association feel that the best interests of the taxpayers of Atlanta will be protected if these proposed buildings are designed and supervised by established, independent architects of known ability and experience, whose reputation must be maintained. We believe that this is preferable to having the work supervised by a newly-organized and possibly temporary organization of city-employed architects.

"It has been brought to our attention that some of the largest industries in the country do not maintain their own architectural forces; also, we understand that the United States government, to a large extent, relies upon independent architects, as well as state and municipal governments. This being the case, we feel that Atlanta should follow the practice that has been proven by experience to be the most economical and to the best interests of the taxpayers.

"We trust that the bond authorities will reconsider and place the work with reputable, established architects in the usual way.

"Yours very truly,
"BUILDING MATERIAL DEALERS ASS'N.,
"EUGENE B. KEMP,
"Secretary."

6,000 SAFETY CARDS EMPHASIZE 'CAUTION'

Through the joint efforts of the Atlanta Safety council and the Atlanta Association of Building Owners and Managers more than 6,000 cards calling attention to safety have been distributed to the tenants of office buildings in Atlanta.

The cards are of letter-size bearing the title "Safety in the Office Building," and emphasizing the fact that almost as many accidental deaths and injuries are happening in the homes and offices as on our streets.

Particular attention is called to the thoughtless handling of cigars, cigarettes and matches; the use of waste baskets as ash trays; using of revolving chairs for step ladders, negligence in the care of extension cords for electrical appliances, etc.

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

VOL. LVIII., No. 344. ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY MORNING, MAY 23, 1926.

Probe of Wooten Death Will Begin In Florida Monday

L. M. Hood, Driver of Car in Which Atlanta Woman Was Riding, Will Face Grand Jury.

NO VERDICT FOUND BY CORONER'S JURY

Pending Action, Sheriff Refuses Request of Subordinate That Murder Charge Be Preferred.

Miami, Fla., May 22.—L. M. Hood, 25, of Lake Wales, Fla., self-confessed driver of the automobile from which Mrs. Ethel Grace Wooten, 24, of Atlanta, Ga., met her death near Homestead yesterday, will face the Dade county grand jury Monday.

This announcement was made here late today by the office of Sheriff Henry R. Chase, who earlier in the day denied the request of a subordinate to place a first-degree murder charge against Hood. The action was taken after a Homestead coroner's jury had failed to return a verdict after three hours' deliberation, recommending only that Hood be held for further investigation.

No Formal Charge.

No formal charge has been lodged against Hood, who has been in the county jail since his capture last night by Palm Beach county authorities near West Palm Beach. His arrest came on the heels of the identification of the body of Mrs. Wooten by a sister, Mrs. Cora Lott, innkeeper of Princeton, Fla., whom the victim had been visiting since leaving Atlanta 10 days ago. Mrs. Wooten in that city was cashier for Nathan Bedford Forrest, grand dragon of the Ku Klux Klan of Georgia.

Mrs. Wooten suffered a fractured skull and a broken shoulder in the fall from an automobile driven by Hood while they were motoring near Homestead. She was picked up unconscious by Jay Simons, grove owner, who took her to a Homestead hospital, where she died without regaining consciousness.

Simons said he saw the automobile stop in front of his home, and Mrs. Wooten walk away a short distance. He declared the driver followed her, apparently inducing her to return to the car. A few minutes later he saw the woman pushed or fall from the running board, he said.

Heard Woman Scream.

W. J. Wellborn, of Homestead, told police he heard the woman scream just before he saw the body fall from the car, and that in a few moments he saw Hood carry her to a nearby house to get medical aid.

Hood refused to comment, other than to assert that Mrs. Wooten jumped from the car, and that after he had sought aid he continued his journey. His statement that he had not previously known Mrs. Wooten was corroborated by the victim's sister.

The coroner's jury revealed little of importance, the principal witness available being Mrs. Trady Faulkner, of Goulds, Fla., a sister of Hood, who declared her brother left her home shortly before noon Saturday, returning with blood on his face and blood-stains on his clothes. She said he left immediately, asserting that he was "in a big hurry to get away."

MRS. ETHEL WOOTEN FORMER LAGRANGE GIRL.

Mrs. Ethel Wooten, of 618 North Boulevard, who was killed in an automobile accident near Miami, Fla., Friday night, was formerly Miss Ethel Eaton, of LaGrange, according to Mrs. Lavida Gardner, her friend and roommate for the past three years.

Mrs. Wooten attended school at LaGrange college, later marrying an Ohio man. They were divorced three years ago and her husband is now in South America, Mrs. Gardner said.

There are no members of Mrs. Wooten's family now living in Atlanta. She is survived by a brother and two sisters, all living in Florida. Her mother and father are dead. Mrs. Gardner said.

Mrs. Gardner was grief-stricken over the sudden death of her friend and was at a loss to explain how the fatal accident might have occurred. She and Mrs. Wooten kept an apartment at the North Boulevard address for the past three years, after meeting at the Ku Klux Klan headquarters, where both formerly worked. Mrs. Gardner said that Mrs. Wooten rarely ever talked of her personal affairs and that she knew little of her past life and family connections.

BEAUTIFUL BLONDE BELIEVED VICTIM OF BEER RUNNERS

Police Fear That Miss Mildred Kavanaugh Was "Taken for Ride" Along With Frank Crimaldi.

Chicago, May 22.—A beautiful 20-year-old blonde may have been killed in the latest outbreak of Chicago's bitter gang war over alcohol rights.

Police tonight were searching for Miss Mildred Kavanaugh in the belief that she may have been "taken for a ride" along with her companion, Frank Crimaldi, the "Gold Coast" bootlegger, who was blindfolded and shot four times in the back of the head, presumably by rival beer runners.

Crimaldi's body was found in Franklin park, where it had been thrown from a passing automobile.

Miss Kavanaugh is known to have been an intimate friend of Crimaldi. According to a mysterious telephone message received by her mother, Mildred was with him an hour and a half before the murder is believed to have been committed.

Girl Still Missing.

Detectives are searching carefully for her, but thus far they have traced her movements only up to the time she met Crimaldi in the lobby of a "loop" hotel. Shortly thereafter she seems to have dropped out of sight.

If Mildred has been "taken for a ride" it will be the first time in the long record of gang killings that the wrath of rival bootleggers has been turned on a woman.

Crimaldi came here from Detroit. A week ago he was arrested for disorderly conduct. Police found six dress suits and 26 sack suits in his room at a fashionable hotel. He explained that he was a "high-class bootlegger" and needed the finery "to get into North Shore homes."

He gave bail on the disorderly conduct charge and no other charges were preferred against him, as a search of his rooms revealed no liquor.

WIDOW IS UNABLE TO AID CRIME PROBE.

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Chicago, Ill., May 22.—Mrs. Irene Baker Crimaldi, widow of Frank Crimaldi, gang victim, arrived in Chicago today, but she could give no aid in the solution of the murder. She had secretly married Crimaldi last year to save him from conviction for a murder in Detroit. She was the principal witness against him, and by the marriage disqualified herself from testfying against him.

"He was a perfect husband to me," she said, "but I find out now that he's been keeping a lot of things from me."

The "lot of things" referred most specifically and bitterly to Mildred Kavanaugh, blonde and 20, the missing Pontiac girl who was with Crimaldi on the day of his death.

"I am a vaudeville artist," Crimaldi's widow said, "and I go about the country wherever I can get a chance to do a song and dance act. I met Frank about three years ago."

THEODORE F. THIEL ARRESTED IN DETROIT.

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Detroit, Mich., May 23.—Investigation by Detroit and Chicago police of the murder of Frank Crimaldi who was shot to death in a Chicago suburb, led today to developments which the officers say may solve the McSwiggin-Doherty-Duffy murders.

Theodore F. Thiel, 39, arrested here, waived extradition and is en route to Chicago where warrants are held charging him with burglary and operating a confidence game. According to the Chicago authorities, however, he will be questioned concerning the McSwiggin case.

Detective Frank McDonald, of Chicago, who came to Detroit as soon as he learned of Thiel's arrest, says the prisoner answers the description of the man who purchased the machine guns with which McSwiggin, Chicago's "hanging prosecutor," was murdered.

Thiel denies having any part in the McSwiggin shooting. He says he has been in Detroit for three months, coming here from Chicago to take a job in an automobile salesroom.

"Big Parade" Is Attacked

"IMPUDENCE OR BAD TASTE," CHARGED

By Press of Great Britain

London, May 22.—(AP)—An unusual amount of space is devoted by the newspapers to the American film production, "The Big Parade," which was shown here for the first time last night. While unstinting praise is given to the fine technique, acting and spectacular effects, the press stigmatizes the absence from the film of any mention of the part England, France and Belgium played in the great war.

Several of the papers complain that the film conveys the idea that America alone won the war, and they consider for this reason it is unsuitable for production in Europe.

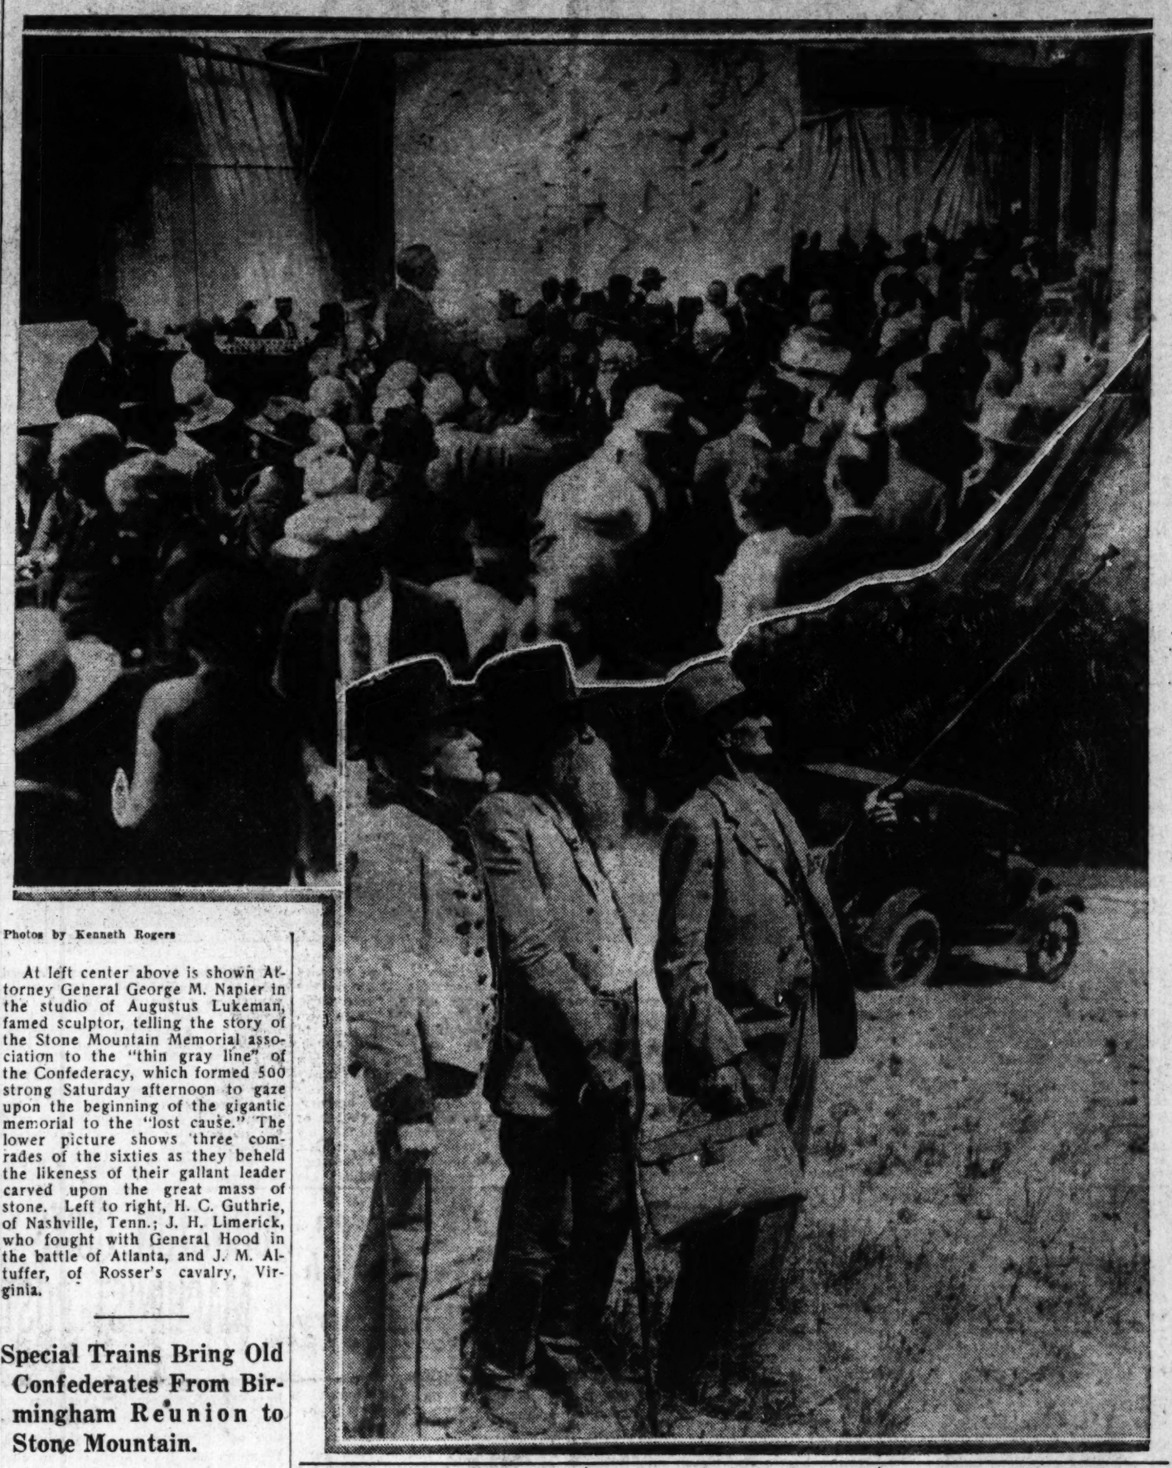

The Evening News suggests tht Will Hays should tell his London representative "that it does the American nation as a whole no good to show British audiences this curious essay in the expression of America's war spirit."

The Daily Express comments: "The film has more of the spirit of Hollywood than of America. It vulgarizes sacred memories."

The Star says: "It is doubtful if any nation other than the United States would have had the impudence or bad taste to produce the film, which will certainly find considerable opposition in England, Europe and the British dominions."

The Morning Post says: "If we remember it was produced primarily for American audiences, we shall not resent the total exclusion of the allies, and we are not going to condemn a wonderful piece of stage craft because the producer was jealous of his country's exploits."

500 Gray Veterans of Sixties and Sponsors View Stone Mountain Confederate Memorial

Photos by Kenneth Rogers

Special Trains Bring Old Confederates From Birmingham Reunion to Stone Mountain.

Shoulders squared and eyes glowing as if they faced the living form of their gallant leader, 500 southern soldiers stood at attention in the deep shadow of Stone Mountain Saturday and raised gray-sleeved arms in salute to Lee and the "lost cause."

Standing on the same ground that once ran red with blood of comrade and enemy, the brave old veterans were deeply impressed with the gigantic memorial which will perpetuate the memory of their valor long after the last survivor in that thin grey line has been laid to rest in his grey coat beneath the sod of his native southland.

Though many years have lapsed since they marched away against their northern brothers, there wasn't a soldier in the entire assembly at the mountain Saturday who found himself without sufficient strength to give vent to a lusty "rebel yell"—just to let the world know that the spirit which took them away to battlefields in the sixties was still alive. And possibly there was a hope that the familiar old cry would reach the ears of the one they followed and so loved, and whom all of them must have felt gazed down upon them.

Here From Reunion.

The veterans and their sponsors, who inspected the site Saturday en route home from the U. C. V. reunion just closed at Birmingham, approved the memorial.

Arriving on special trains of the Seaboard Air Line and Southern railways, the coaches were switched on tracks of the Georgia railway at the Union station. At Stone Mountain the coaches were run to the foot of the huge mountain on sidetracks of the Stone Mountain Granite company.

Here the visitors viewed with telescopes and field glasses the carved likeness of their immortal leader on the largest stone in the world.

The veterans swarmed the grounds, inspecting the carving work and models of Augustus Lukeman, sculptor in charge.

On behalf of Georgia, Attorney George M. Napier welcomed the veterans. Hollins Randolph, president of the memorial association, offered the address of welcome on behalf of the association.

The spectators comprised the largest body of Confederates ever to visit the scene at one time. They came from every southern state and from scattered portions of America. Departure of the Seaboard train to Birmingham was at 4:35 o'clock. The Southern left at 4:40 o'clock.

The veterans and their party were headed by General M. D. Vance, of Little Rock, and Adjutant General Harry Rene Lee, of Nashville, who were elected at the reunion just closed.

BERLIN STREETS SCENE OF PARADE OF 60,000 REDS

(Copyright, 1926, for The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Berlin, May 22.—About 60,000 communists in gray uniforms, military boots, red badges on their arms, red cocades in their hats and huge red flags, marched through Berlin's streets today in close military formation on order of the Moscow soviets.

"Clear the streets for the red workers," huge red posters screamed out to Berlin's citizens on all the main thoroughfares and bridges on the eve of the Whitsuntide, to the despair of the bourgeoisie population who clench their fists at the display of communistic militarism. Berlin's police force, former solders, reichswehr, armored cars and military are in readiness to prevent clashes on this national holiday, which the communists threaten to turn into a "red Whitsuntide."

Monster Demonstration.

The communists have called in members of their "red front fighters' association" from all parts of north Germany for a monster demonstration of strength and perfect military training to arouse the enthusiasm of the Berlin masses. Their communistic ardor has been cooling recently, and Moscow is anxious to realign Berlin's workers into the ranks of the communist party.

A special delegation of Russian leaders arrived from Moscow today to present the German communists with a genuine red flag. At a great meeting tomorrow the flag will solemnly be dedicated to the German proletariat.

Since early dawn platoons of communistic front soldiers arriving from Hamburg, Saxony and Halle, have been received at the stations with impressive brass bands and the biggest drums the party could muster. In close order they marched to their quarters in the populous districts of Berlin, decorated with red flags, garlands, paper carnations and soviet symbols. The party has made gallant efforts to provide quarters for the visiting red fighters, but this is impossible in view of the housing shortage under which Berlin is suffering.

The German capital this afternoon is a symphony of red and green. Windows and signs in street, automobile, horse cab and hand wagon, are covered with green leaves, contrasting with the red insignia and red flags of the communists.

FARM LEADERS PLAN SUBSTITUTE FOR HAUGEN BILL

House Members From Middle West Believe Modified Measure Can Be Passed.

Washington, May 22.—(AP)—Friends of farm relief legislation today turned their eyes toward the senate as offering the chief hope for salvage of any of the wreckage wrought in the house yesterday by defeat of the Haugen price stabilization measure.

Western senators said the house action would not deter their efforts for a farm relief bill at this session, and that steps would be taken to bring some order out of the present legislative chaos.

The western senatorial group plans to center efforts on shaping a bill to compose wide differences of opinion in the hope that it will pass the senate and be approved by the house.

Plan New Bill.

Meanwhile in the house, friends of the Haugen bill conferred with representatives of western farm organizations in an attempt to frame a bill embodying some and eliminating other of the price stabilization features.

In this connection Representative Aswell, democrat, Louisiana, today introduced a bill designed to carry out essential features of the Curtis-Aswell bill and the Tincher credit plan. Both these measures were before the house yesterday but were withdrawn by their authors before they could be voted upon.

The revised Aswell bill proposed a loan fund of $140,000,000 and would provide new machinery for the marketing of basic agricultural commodities.

House administration leaders, however, were of the opinion that the defeat of the Haugen bill, 212 to 167, and the defeat two years ago of the Monary-Haugen bill, 224 to 154, placed the house on record as once and for all definitely disapproving of such legislation. They asserted both bills were similar in principle and that the house had conclusively demonstrated it would not pass any measure embodying an equalization fee to be levied on basic farm commodities.

It also was predicted by the administration group that it was doubtful if any bill proposing an equalization fee would be permitted to again come to the house floor for consideration.

Preparations for Twin-Bridge Plans Pushed While Streets Are Clear of Traffic.

ENGINEER HERE TO SECURE DATA

Foster Describes Additional Interesting Features of Improvements Planned for City.

While Atlanta slumbered at 4 o'clock this morning, a force of engineers began a detailed and accurate survey of the twin viaducts which will span Pryor street and Central avenue. George W. Foster, of Memphis, associated with Walter F. Shulz, engineer, is in charge of the work, which was begun at this unusual hour by special permission issued by Mayor Walter A. Sims in order to avoid congested traffic conditions of daylight work.

"Much of the survey must be done between break of day and sun-up in order that we may set our instruments without hinderance of streams of traffic which pour over these streets," Mr. Foster, who is registered at the Piedmont hotel, said Saturday.

"We hope to complete our measurements in 10 days or two weeks, and then I shall return to Memphis to make accurate drawings as quickly as possible to prevent any possible delay in letting contracts as soon as the bond money is available for the work. We will place an adequate force at work on the survey, which will begin early Sunday morning."

Plans Are Pushed.

Mr. Foster's company is making the plans in compliance with instructions from Mayor Sims and in cooperation with the citizen's viaduct committee headed by Robert F. Maddox.

"Although the viaduct money contained in the bond issue may be held up for some time yet, we are going to push plans to begin work at the earliest possible moment." Mayor Sims said. "It is unfortunate that one or two firms are willing to stand in the way of this much-needed development."

"The viaduct section of the city should develop rapidly into a wholesale and jobbers district on account of its location," Mr. Foster stated. "Other towns have developed along the same lines in similarly situated areas, and Atlanta has one of the greatest commercial futures of the entire southeast. Property values will be boosted beyond all expectations when these projects are completed.

"Large wholesale concerns can display their merchandise in windows on viaduct street levels, while the old street levels can be used for shipping rooms. Stories extending above the viaduct levels can be utilized as storage rooms. Pedestrians having business either at Fulton county courthouse, the state capitol or the city hall, after the new city hall is built, will traverse this territory, and buyers from many miles around will come to Atlanta to buy from sample displays instead of from catalogs."

18-Foot Height.

The bottom of the viaducts will be about 18 feet above the train tracks, in accordance with the interstate commerce law governing construction of such passages. This, of course, will change to some degree certain street levels.

The Pryor street approach will start about halfway between Mitchell and Hunter streets, and when it reaches Hunter street will be between six and seven feet above the present level of the street. This will be about 19 feet at Alabama and slightly over 22 feet when it crosses the train tracks.

There also will be a slight read-

Lord and Lady Stradbroke Will Visit Atlanta Today

He Is George Edward Mowbray Rouse Lord Stradbroke

George Edward John Mowbray Rous, third Earl of Stradbroke, K. C.M.G., C.B., C.V.O., C.B.E., D.L., J.P., will pay a short visit to Atlanta today.

The distinguished guest, together with Lady Stradbroke, will arrive from New Orleans on the Crescent Limited at 12:30, at the Terminal station and, after viewing that part of Atlanta visible from his Pullman window, including the stock yards and rear ends of factory buildings as the train pulls through the local yards, will leave from Brookwood station at 12:50 o'clock.

Lord Stradbroke, in addition to the tities enumerated above, is governor of the province of Victoria, Australia, having held that post since 1920. He has been vice-admiral of Suffolk since 1890, is an A.D.C., to the king of England; a Knight of Grace of St. John; for 32 years has been councillar, alderman and chairman of the East Suffolk county council and for 12 years has been chairman of the county of Suffolk Territorial Army association.

He is also a former president of the National Sea Fisheries Protection association and is on the council of National Artillery association. He is president of the Central London Ophthalmic hospital, and honorary colonel of the first East Anglian brigade.

Born November 19, 1862, Lord Stradbroke is now 63 years of age. He married in 1898, Helena Violet Alice, Lady of Grace of St. John, O.B.E., who was a daughter of General Keith Fraser. They have eight children, five sons and three daughters, the eldest son being Viscount Dunwich, heir to the earldom.

His military career is a distinguished one. From 1888 to 1908 he was colonel of the first Suffolk R.G.A. volunteers. From 1908 to 1917 he was colonel of the third (Howitzer) brigade, East Anglian division, R.F.A. Through the war period after that date he was colonel of various artillery commands and was in Kantara area from October, 1919, to July, 1920.

The arl is also prominent in Masonic circles, being grand master of the United Grand Lodge of Victoria, Australia, since 1922, provincial grand master of Suffolk Freemans and East Anglian Mark Masons, and provisional grand master of Master Masons of England. He is a past grand warden and at his home place, Henham hall, Wangford, Suffolk, England, owns about 10,000 acres of property.

He is a member of the Bachelors' club and Carlton club, in London, and of the Royal Yacht squadron at Cowes.

All in all, he seems to have led a busy life, but just why he is in the United States, and passing through Atlanta today, will remain unknown until he tells himself, during his short visit.

GRAND JURY ASKS OFFICIAL TO QUIT

Joliet, Ill., May 22.—(AP)—Recommendation that one state official be asked for his resignation, and censure of one or more appointive officers of the state's prison and parole system will be contained in the report of a special Will county grand jury investigating prison conditions, it was reported today.

Preparation of the report is understood to have begun despite the fact that the jury will take evidence next week from Governor Len Small, of Illinois, who will appear Tuesday. Chauncey Jenkins, state welfare department chairman, and Will Colvin, chairman of the pardon and parole board, both of whom have testified, have been asked to reappear.

Some reports said that the grand jury would recommend more than one resignation. The jury is known to be contemplating recommendations than an army officer be put in charge of the state prison, where seven prisoners lately escaped after killing a deputy warden and where testimony to the grand jury has indicated lax discipline and a feeling among prisoners that money was a factor in winning parole.

The jury is in recess until Tuesday.

ATLANTA WOMAN GIVEN HIGH HONOR BY COLLEGE GROUP

Mrs. Dunbar Roy, well-known Atlanta woman, has been chosen as one of the honorary presidents of the Women's college alumnae, of Richmond, Va., according to news received here Saturday.

Honorary vice presidents were selected from various section of the country at a meeting held at Richmond last week.

justment of the street level at Decatur and Pryor streets, where the viaduct approach will strike the level of Pryor street again.

The Central avenue viaduct approach will strike a level of between five and six feet at Hunter street, and will be about 21 feet at Alabama street. The tracks will be approximately 22 feet below the top of the viaduct as the latter crosses them, and the level at Decatur street, over which the approach will extend will be about eight feet higher than the present street level.

Straight-Away Street.

At Decatur street the Central avenue and Ivy street offset will be made into a continuous and uninterrupted street by a revision of the general layout of the streets. It is the plan of those in charge of the work to purchase property on the west side of Central avenue, rounding out a sweeping curve to join the streets into a traffic thoroughfare.

Access to the Atlanta joint terminals will be easy for concerns having businesses located along the viaducts. Freight and storage warehouses will be conveniently situated and will have a clear road with traffic congestion almost negligible. Street levels of Pryor at Alabama and Central avenue south of the railroad tracks will be retained as secondary street levels after the viaducts are completed, and at virtually the same levels as at present.

Streets that will be double-level or two-decked streets after the viaducts are completed are Alabama from Central avenue to the first alley east of Whitehall street; Central avenue and Pryor streets from the southern line of Kenney alley to a point slightly north of the north line of Wall street, but these will be closed on the lower level.

A new street will be opened from Decatur to Wall street to reach from the lower level of Wall street and those portions of Pryor street and Central avenue lying north of the railroad tracks.

Separate Naval Arms Conference Asked by Japan

Geneva, May 22.—(AP)—The idea of having a separate naval conference, results of which only enter into force when suitable agreements have been made as to reductions in land armaments, has been informally broached at Geneva. The suggestion presumably is the outcome of the Japanese proposal for a three-cornered naval disarmament conference by the United States, Great Britain and Japan.

This Tokyo suggestion apparently caused surprise, if not consternation, in British circles because of the difficulty the British say they would find in making reductions in small craft like submarines without simultaneous reductions by France and Italy.

The British are described here as wishing to keep the navy in the Mediterranean equal to the combined strength of France and Italy, as Great Britain is forced to maintain the safety of the sea route to India against any possible naval combination of European powers.

M. Matsuda, representing Japan, had an informal discussion today with Hugh S. Gibson, the American minister in Geneva, on the three-power conference suggestion.

Now that there is partial security through the League of Nations covenant and the Locarno accords, make it a real and effective help on disarmament by arranging immediately for the swift operation of mutual assistance in war-time—such is France's latest contribution to the disarmament studies, announced at Geneva today.

Considered Important.

France's initiative in presenting this proposal through M. Paul Boncour, to the drafting committee of the preparatory disarmament commission is deemed of vast importance to the success of the limitation of land armaments in Europe, because many European nations have insisted that they will disarm only in proportion to the security actually achieved.

Calling attention to the fact that the recent Grace-Bulgar conflict was quickly settled largely because the parties ceased hostilities at the request of the League of Nations council, M. Paul Boncour recommended that the league study the advisability of giving power to the league council to impose as armistice immediately a conflict breaks out. He also urged that the council be authorized to exercise this power without the necessity of a unanimous vote.

Unanimity, France held, should obtain in deciding upon a flagrant aggression, but quite contrary to the existing custom, the burden of unanimity should rest upon the shoulders of a nation that pretended aggression did not exist.

This is regarded in league circles as France's answer to the provisions of the recent Russo-German treaty, that Germany, as a member of the League of Nations council, will remain neutral in any coalition movement against Russia. In plain words, the French explanation is taken as meaning that if Russia, for example, should commit a flagrant aggression against another nation, Germany, or any other member of the council, would be obliged to secure a unanimous vote, not to prove that Russia was guilty, but to prove that she was not guilty.

Causes of Conflicts.

M. Paul-Boncour further asked that permanent organizations be created by the league to function immediately to determine the causes of conflicts when they break out, and to agree upon what economic and financial help should be given a state attacked—help which is obligatory under the covenant. The French spokesman held that permanent commissions should determine in advance the needs of all countries in raw material and foodstuffs, munitions, transports and credits, and that when war broke out the council should decide which nations should come forward with the necessary help.

Hugh Gibson, the American minister to Switzerland, left the conference hall when the French project came up for discussion, though some other members of the American delegation remained. Apparently quick to see that the Boncour document could not be discussed by the Americans, because the United States is not a member of the league, Viscount Cecil, the British delegate, objected that the project could not be debated by the preparatory disarmament commission, but only by purely legal organisms. He called attention that three countries represented on the commission—the United States, Argentina and Germany—are not members of the league and might be embarrassed by discussion of matters which concerned the league only.

A lively debate ensued, with M. Paul-Boncour insisting he wanted to get the French views before the commission, as he believed they would help toward attainment of a reduction in armaments. The question went over until Monday.

JEALOUS OF WIFE, HUSBAND SLAYS HIS BROTHER

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Chicago, Ill., May 22.—"I was jealous of my wife, and that's why I shot my brother."

Thus did Fred Kutschke explain to the police today why he killed Otto Kutschke, his brother, when he came home last night and found him with his wife. Kutschke's wife, who is the mother of three children, denied that she had any improper relations with the slain man, but admitted that he had frequently visited the home.

Atlanta Dancers and Singers Toil Unceasingly To Make Annual Light Opera Season Big Success

Above is a bevy of 19 Atlanta girls who are working diligently at rehearsals for the municipal light opera season which opens June 21. The group is composed largely of college girls who have cast aside their student activities and social activities to participate. The lower group shows Stage Director Lewis Morton, left, instructing seven nonresidents in the latest chorus steps. Music Director Charles Breton is seen at the extreme right. The girls are Misses Velma Hollingsworth, Anniston, Ala.; Edith Nelson, Thomaston; Ruth Thomas, Bedford, Va.; Margaret Newman, Gainesville; Elizabeth Jennings, Cordele; Imogene King, Louisville, Ky., and Roberta Barr, of Columbus, Ohio.

BY MAINER LEE TOLER.

In preparation for Atlanta's brilliant light opera season which begins the night of June 21, amateur artists fresh with the merry spirit of youth, assemble each afternoon and night at the Ivy Street garage for strenuous rehearsals.

The boys and girls have cast aside their college songs and social activities for the advantage of professional training, but they smile continuously as the monotonous hours pass. Such are the trials of the younger generation, and each girl knows that only 50 chosen candidates will compose the local players and dancers.

First glimpse of the handsome belles and beaux manifests the difficulty Lewis Morton and Charles Berton, stage and music directors, will experience in selecting the desired number. A veritable array of beauty and talent appear clad in bright-colored knickers, bloomers and silk blouses.

The chorus will be composed largely of college boys and girls, members of glee clubs and aesthetic dancing classes. Having completed rehearsal for song and dance numbers in the "Chocolate Soldier," the premier opera, the chorus is working on the brilliant military opera, "Her Regiment."

Director Morton inspires them to action, and they do not lack punch, which professionals lack at times. Professional stars will assume the "heavy parts," as they say backstage.

Director Breton declares he has never heard voices of sweeter timbre or quality more admirably suited for light opera than this chorus. Mr. Breton should know, for he has directed leading musical productions in London and New York and served with the original Gilbert and Sullivan Opera company. It was he who produced "Iolanthe" for Winthrop Ames, now a big New York success, as well as many other tuneful musical plays.

Music-lovers no doubt anticipate with renewed interest the coming season. Association officials predict the season will gain in momentum and the public will receive each offering with enthusiasm.

Don't forget the players are Atlanta's own.

the Atlanta theater, stating just what they desire. These letters will be numbered in order of receipt and patrons notified that reservations of certain seats have been made. Only season reservations will be made at this time.

Dialogue and comedy will "go over" much better this season in the more intimate Atlanta theater, it is said, than in the big auditorium where the first season of summer entertainment was given last year. Lou Powers' fun will have a much greater opportunity there, and the singers will not be required to strain their voices.

Powers Highly Praised.

In writing last season of Mr. Powers' comedy work in "Sally," the reviewer of The Atlanta Constitution said:

"They didn't put the name of Lou Powers in caps on the program, but they should have done it. He is easily as funny as many stars whose names have occupied half the space on the billboard. He is little, and the possessor of an exertuiatingly mobile countenance, a natural comic voice, and the technique requisite to 'putting across' every line of his stuff."

Although the season will not open for four weeks, the big chorus and dancing corps are being drilled as intensively as though the first night were this week. In the scenic studios near the theater, the massive "sets" for the opening performance are nearing completion, and when the principals arrive in two weeks to begin rehearsals for "The Chocolate Soldier" they will find the "Atlanta end" of the productions in tip-top shape.

RIN TIN TIN OWNER IS FOUND NOT GUILTY

Chicago, May 22.—(AP)—Lee Duncan, owner of the film dog actor, Rin Tin Tin, today was found not guilty in municipal court of a charge of contributing to the delinquency of a 17-year-old girl. On May 11, one of the occassions when the girl said she was with Duncan, he produced evidence to show that he and the dog were in Rockford, Ill., most of the day.

STANFIELD BEHIND IN OREGON VOTE

Portland, Ore., May 22.—(AP)—Frederick Steiwer, Pendleton grain grower, maintained his substantial lead over Senator Robert N. Stanfield for the republican nomination for United States senator as additional returns from yesterday's primary election were tabulated today.

Reports from 1,051 precincts out of 1,847 in the state, gave Steiwer 25,737; Stanfield 17,192; A. W. Clark 11,638; L. B. Sandblast (wet) 8,109; J. J. Crossley 5,532; A. R. Shumway 3,040; Rose W. Barrett 1,882; C. F. Evey 783.

Steiwer profited from the split-up of the republican vote of Oregon due to the fact that there were eight candidates in the field. Political observers recalled that the race for the nomination for senator became sorter free-for-all among republicans after the incident at Baker, Ore., a year and a half ago when Senator Stanfield never appeared in court to answer the charge.

Senator Stanfield was a supporter of President Coolidge, but that did not enter into the campaign.

Bert E. Haney, former member of the shipping board, was leading Elton Watkins, former congressman for the democratic nomination for United States senator. With 944 precincts reported the count stood, Haney 2,691; Watkins 7,497.

I. L. Patterson won the republican nomination for governor, according to tabulations from 1,055 precincts which gave him 36,209; Jay H. Upton had 22,720, and W. A. Carter 13,094.

Governor Walter M. Pierce had a big lead over Mrs. Louise Palmer Weber, advocate of prohibition law modification, in the race for the democratic gubernatorial nomination.

With 950 precincts reported, Pierce had 11,055; Weber 4,713.

Sandblast, a comparatively unknown figure until he entered the senatorial race with the platform of government control of the liquor traffic, drew a heavy proportion of the republican vote. His support was interpreted solely as an expression of wet sentiment, as he had no political following.

The regular republican organization deserted Stanfield in the campaign and threw its support to Steiwer, also backing I. L. Patterson, who won the republican nomination for governor.

The figures on the republican gubernatorial race from 1,231 precincts were: Patterson, 48,022; J. H. Upton, 29,760; W. A. Carter, 16,949.

Elton Watkins, former congressman, kept pressing Bert E. Haney, former shipping board member, for the democratic nomination for United States senator as additional returns were tabulated today. With 1,443 precincts counted, Haney had 14,600; Watkins, 14,137.

Governor Walter M. Pierce maintained his big lead for the democratic gubernatorial nomination over Mrs. Louise Palmer Weber, an avowed champion of modification of the Volstead act. In 1,170 precincts, Pierce had 17,067; Weber, 6,411.

M. E. Crumpacker, representative of the third congressional district, handily won the republican nomination. Complete returns gave Crumpacker 33,470; B. F. Mulkey, 10,950; Norman Richards, who made a campaign on liquor law modification, had 5,861.

SILVER WEDDING HELD BY LYONS COUPLE

Lyons, Ga., May 22.—(Special.)—Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Findley celebrated the 25th anniversary of their wedding Sunday, with a host of their friends present. A short address was made by the pastor of the Primitive Baptist church at Vidalia, followed by a talk by Colonel G. W. Lankford.

$500,000 Given For Research In Oil Industry

Washington, May 22.—"Divine curiosity fortified with cash" is setting out to make more efficient the nation's $9,000,000,000 petroleum industry.

Dr. Benjamin T. Brooks, New York, of the American Chemical society, tonight announced plans for carrying out oil industry research with the $500,000 provided by John D. Rockefeller and the Universal Oil Products company. He paid a tribute to research as "divine."

A study of the oils obtainable from shale rock in Colorado and other states, and of the oil obtainable from coal carbonized at low temperatures also should be made, Brooks' report said.

"When the time comes when oils from these sources are needed and their market value justifies their manufacture, it will undoubtedly be the petroleum industry that will be called upon to commercialize them," the report commented.

"The magnitude of the industry is such that even slight technical improvements affecting any of the major products would result in saving of virtually large sums of money, important even in the oil industry, for contrary to the public opinion, the business of petroleum refining is not carried on with a large margin of profit."

Annual production of petroleum products now includes 390,000,000 barrels of gas and kerosene fuel oil, 213,000,000 barrels of gasoline, 18,000,000 barrels of petroleum asphalt, 000,000 barrels of petroleum asphant, it was said.

Curios Found Inside Buddha Sold at Auction

(Copyright, 1926, for The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

New York, May 22.—A colossal buddha, made of brass and weighing nearly half a ton, which formerly belonged to Richard Mansfield, the actor, was sold at auction on Friday morning on a Greenwich Village auction room to Jan W. A. Kleykamp, a dealer in Chinese art.

When it was lifted up, the hollow chest of the Oriental god was found to be stuffed with manuscripts. There were seven large Chinese prayer books, each containing several hundred feet of invocations in Chinese script, illustrated with pen pictures. The binding of one contained remains of fine Chinese silk worked with endless knots, a buddhist symbol. In addition to these were many prayer rolls. Yards and yards of supplication to buddha had been written on very thin paper and then rolled into tight cylinders which looked like large Chinese firecrackers.

When the manuscripts were dumped out, small glittering objects of various sizes rattled out upon the floor. There were handfuls of Chinese coins, rice, bits of wood, chunks of silver ore, a bit of mica, a few blister pearls, chips of cedar, fragments of highly wrought gold and brass jewel mountings, crystals, moonstones and an assortment of colored bits which may or may not be precious stones.

Montezuma Kiwanis Meet.

Montezuma, Ga., May 22.—(Special.)—Observing ladies' night, the Montezuma Kiwanis club delightfully entertained guests Thursday night. A program full of wit and merriment had been arranged by Dr. R. E. McGill and attractive features of the evening were piano selections by Marion Reid and Mrs. Cullen Richardson, vocal solos by Lawrence McKenzie and readings by Mrs. Jack Reid.

JOHNSTON QUITS MACHINIST POST

Washington, May 22.—(AP)—William H. Johnston has resigned as president of the International Association of Machinists and Arthur O. Wharton has been appointed to succeed him.

The changes will be effective July 1.

Mr. Johnston has been in ill health for several months, a statement issued by the association said, and it was added that the executive council accepted it with regret. He had held the office since January 1, 1912.

Although the office is an elective one, the executive council has power to make appointments for vacancies caused by resignations and it acted under this authority in naming Mr. Wharton. He is former president of the railway employees' department of the American Federation of Labor and former member of the railroad labor board.

Mr. Johnston was active in the La Follette campaign for president in 1924.

G. M. A. JUNIORS WIN IN ANNUAL DEBATE

Cadet Dan Gilmer, of Lavonia, Ga., a member of the junior class of Georgia Military academy, won highest honors between upper classmen in debating at the College Park institution Saturday night in the annual senior-junior debate. Cadet Gilmer was presented with a handsome gold medal.

"Resolved, That the United States should enter the League of Nations" was the subject of debate. Junior class debaters represented the negative side of the question.

Judges were Oscar Palmour, general agent of the Connecticut State Mutual Life Insurance company; J. A. Northcutt, of the D. C. Heath company, and George P. Whitman, attorney.

A musical program was presented in connection with the exercises. Miss Maybelle Barrett and Byron Kibler gave several vocal selections, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Dixon Barrett.

The annual school oratorical contest will be held Monday night at 8 o'clock in the school auditorium and all winners in the various class elimination contests will compete for school honors Monday night.

M'RAE TRADE BOARD TO HEAR SPEAKERS

McRae, Ga., May 22.—(Special.)—A big meeting is planned by the McRae board of trade for Friday evening, May 28, at which time Dr. H. R. McKeen, executive manager of Greater Georgia, Inc., Macon; F. H. Abbott, secretary of the Georgia association, Atlanta, Ga., and Charles A. Stanton, president of the Agricultural Appraisal company of Columbus, Ohio, will be the principal speakers at a mass meeting of citizens of Telfair and Wheeler counties to be held at the American Legion clubhouse.

This meeting will be the second of a series of meetings of this kind, a former meeting having been held on Friday, April 30, at which time a plan for the organization of the Telfair-Wheeler County Land company was submitted by Mr. Stanton.

As an outcome of this meeting, a charter for the land company has been applied for and further plans regarding the company will be discussed at the meeting to be held on the 28th.

Scientists To Spend Years In Measuring Rays of Sun

:: DISCOVERIES TO AID IN WEATHER FORECASTS ::

Washington, May 22.—Down in the land of the Hottentots—where it's hot—two Americans will pitch camp for the space of three years in an attempt to measure the sun's rays accurately and thereby work out a method of forecasting the world's weather weeks in advance.

The two scientists, W. H. Hoover and F. A. Greeley, of the Smithsonian institution, will leave here in July for their outposts on Mount Brukkaros, a mountain which rears its chocolate-colored peak 5,200 feet toward the South African sun. The site was selected by Dr. Charles G. Abbott, of the Smithsonian, who has done considerable research in connection with his theory that the strength of the sun's rays has much to do with the weather.

Success in forecasting a week ahead is claimed by use of this method in Argentina, but the U. S. weather bureau has rejected it as unsound, holding to the present system of forecasting for 48 hours in advance.

The two scientists, who will be almost completely isolated from the world, will take measurements on the bolometer invented by Dr. Abbott for sun heat computation and will cable daily reports here to Dr. Abbott, who will use the information in working out a formula for forecasting.

The two men will live in a natural cave on the peak of the mountain. Their retreat is inaccessible except by a climb on foot for several hours up a dry river bed. The annual rainfall there averages three inches. It all falls within two months.

The scientists will keep in touch with the outside world by a radio set, which will enable them to listen to Johannesburg and Capetown. During their leisure they will hunt springbucks, koodoos and leopards.

Master Violin Craftsman Leaves Dingy Little Shop

:: NEW BADGETT QUARTERS RESPLENDENT ONES ::

Completing 25 years in the high art of violin making, Mays Badgett, affectionately known to professional musicians throughout the country as "the Stradivarius of Dixie," has celebrated the occasion by taking measures to add to the general well-being of his friends, the fiddlers.

In other words, Badgett has moved his famous Five Points shop, formerly at the top of several rather difficult flights of stairs, down to elaborate and easily accessible quarters on the second floor. He figures that the energy thus saved the countless musicians who have worn the old steps quite smooth, will, when transmuted into melody, add considerably to the joy of nations and, incidentally, to the Badgett budget.

When Emerson spoke about the world's beating a track to the door of the perfect mouse-trap maker, it is possible that he did not have Mr. Badgett in mind. It is possible he was really thinking about mouse-traps instead of violins. Be that as it may, the little Badgett shop has lured up those mountainous stairs many of the foremost figures in the world of "those who play on catgut with horsehair." Eugene Ysaye, Jan Kubelik, Gustave Prinits and other masters have lauded the magic with which the Atlanta craftsman fashions his wonderful new instruments or makes the old ones sing again. Members of the Metropolitan Opera company orchestra almost invariably have dropped into the little shop to have a fiddle, viola or cello tuned up. The little room, dusty, crowded, disordered, was in a way a shrine which few violinists passing through Atlanta failed to visit.

But now all this has been changed. The entrance, it is true, is still at 28 1-2 Peachtree, at Five Points. But at the head of one short flight of stairs there bursts on the eye a large reception room glittering with showcases and mahogany fixtures. Countless violins and accessories are on neat display. Oil paintings adorn the wall, rugs cover the floor. Through a door to the right is the work room, with all the necessary equipment for making and repairing violins. And, most remarkable of all, everything is as neat as a pin.

Mays feels rather strange in the midst of all this splendor. He is more accustomed to the little old shop upstairs. But he intends to stick it out.

"Emerson may have been right," he says, "about the world beating a track, but he never figured on the terrible amount of cussin' done about coming up those stairs."

:: FOUND ON PEACHTREE STREET TIRED AND HUNGRY ::

Five little children, the oldest seven, and the youngest a month-old-babe nestling in the curve of a mother's arms, began a long, weary walk from Marietta last Wednesday with a point six miles below Decatur as their destination.

When found on Peachtree before 8 o'clock Thursday morning, in front of Herndon's Barber shop, the one and only garment covering their half-starved bodies was fastened with horse-shoe nails, not a morsel of food had passed their parched little lips for several days, and little bare feet were sore and bleeding.

In ten minutes after, Mrs. Katherine Weathersbee, executive secretary to the Atlanta Humane society discovered their pitiable condition, sympathetic passersby had contributed $10 to the worthy cause. Food and clothing were bought for them by Mrs. Weathersbee, who, after caring for the bodily comfort of mother and children, placed them on the Stone Mountain street car, with sufficient funds in the mother's possession to reach the objective point.

Old people, children and unfortunates in dire distress, in need of assistance and attention are given aid by this society, which is striving to enlist the interest of Atlantans so that the work can progress without financial handicap.

Mrs. H. S. Wagner read a creditable report from the ... nts Humane society at the meeting of the Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs held at Druid Hills club last Wednesday, which received most favorable comment from the president, Mrs. Robert K. Rambo, as... the federation members to join the society and help carry on its charitable program.

Ancient Egypt Offers Story Of Cinderella

Chicago, May 22.—(AP)—Ancient Egypt had a Cinderella for a queen in Tiy, Professor James H. Breasted, noted Egyptologist of the University of Chicago, recently returned from Egypt, disclosed today.

Interpreting the inscription on a scarab stone, he reported that Queen Tiy, who, in spite of her lowly birth was taken to wed by King Amenhotep III, who reigned from 1411 to 1325 B. C., was snubbed by the aristocrats of the court. The king ordered the snobbish courtiers to wear around their necks stones inscribed with the warning that they should remember that Tiy was his wife.

The stone bore the name of Tiy's parents, but the inscription recited that "she is the wife of a victorious king whose southern boundary is Karoy and whose northern boundary is Maharin." It was explained at the university that Karoy was in the heart of Africa and Maharin near the Euphrates river.

PREDICT SURPLUS OF $200,000,000

Washington, May 22.—(AP)—A treasury surplus of more than $200,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30 was declared assured today by treasury officials on the basis of increased revenue collections last month over a year ago.

Despite the tax reduction which is now in full effect, revenue for April totaled $112,809,642, or $6,305,000 more than was collected in April, 1925.

Income tax receipts provided for the increase, returns from miscellaneous taxes, most of which were repealed, effective April 1, showing a decline. The income tax collections were $54,670,335, an increase of $10,000,000 over last April. Miscellaneous tax receipt totaled $58,139,307, a decrease of $4,397,000.

The total of internal revenue receipts for the first 10 months of this fiscal year amounted to $2,225,679,822, an increase of $190,193,460 over the same period of the previous fiscal year.

Constipation! How to Keep Bowels Regular

To Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, it seemed cruel that so many constipated men, women, children, and particularly old folks, had to be kept constantly "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

While he knew that constipation was the cause of nearly all headaches, biliousness, indigestion and stomach misery, he did not believe that a sickening "purge" or "physic" was necessary.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin he discovered a laxative which helps to establish natural bowel "regularity" even for those chronically constipated. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement, but, best of all, it never gripes, sickens, or upsets the system. Besides, it is absolutely harmless, and so pleasant that even a cross, feverish, bilious, sick child gladly takes it.

Thousands of Pilgrims From All Over World To Attend Catholic Meet

Chicago Will Assume Cosmopolitan Aspect During Four-Day Eucharistic Congress.

Chicago, May 22.—(AP)—A cosmopolitan aspect that Chicago has never assumed since the world's fair was held here will be afforded June 20 to 24 by the International Eucharistic Congress of the Catholic church.

From furthermost parts of the earth, and from some of the most ancient seats of ecclesiastical power, pilgrims will come—Gallileeans will rub elbows with American Indians and Africans with East Indians and Hindus, and all about them devotees of all modern nations will add their prayers and renew their vows "to labor to extend in the world His social reign."

Count Henry D'Yarrville, a distinguished French Catholic layman and a royalist, the secretary of the permanent committee of international eucharistic congresses, arrived here from Paris yesterday.

He gave The Associated Press today an idea of the world-wide character of the congress.

"From all over the world," he said, "we have the most encouraging news about your great American congress. The recent trouble in Poland may interfere with the fine delegation which had planned to come to Chicago from that country, but from all sides we have nothing but finest reports.

"Pilgrimage groups will be here from Ireland and England, Holland, Belgium, France, Germany, Lithunia, Czecho-Slovakia, Austria, Hungary, Jugo-Slavia, Italy and Spain. I understand, too, that a substantial representation will come from Central America and another from South America and groups from India, China, Japan and the Philippines.

"This congress will typify the universality of the Catholic church.

"I feel that we shall witness here the greatest of all the Eucharistic congresses."

Interpreters and confessors for this great gathering of devout Catholics that will fill all Chicago's hotel space for five days, is one of the administration problems.

One delegation will provide Chicago a new experience. The Most Rev. Maximos Said, archbishop of Tyre and Syria, whose see was founded when Christianity was still fighting Paganism in the first century, will chant the Melchite rite, instead of the Latin in celebrating mass.

The Melchites used their peculiar rite since the time of Saint Basil and Saint Chrysostum.

African pilgrims will be headed by an Irishman, the Right Rev. Hugh MacSherry, bishop of the province of the Cape of Good Hope, whose family founded the town of MacSherry, Pa. Other Africans will come with the Most Rev. Augustine Leynaud, archbishop of Algeria.

From India the pilgrimage will come with the Most Reverend Anselm E. J. Kinealy, archbishop of Simla, a Welchman, and Right Rev. Bishop Rossillon, of Vizagapatam.

Right Rev. William F. O'Hare, a Jesuit, will bring a group from Jamaica, and the American Indians will come with a Chippewa priest, Rev. Philip Gordon, of Centuria, Wis., and another with Rev. Sylvester Eisenman, a Benedictine from the Sioux reservation, Yankton, S. D.

His Eminence Henry Cardinal Reig y Casanova will be the first Spanish cardinal to set foot on the shores of the new world, when he comes here for the Eucharistic congress. Five Spanish bishops and a body of laymen will accompany him

Preparations for the Eucharistic procession at Mundelein, are now almost complete. Landscaping of 1,200 acres of ground and providing accommodations for 750,000 persons has formed part of the task that has occupied hundreds of men for the last six months.

Five bridges over which the Eucharistic procession will pass, terraces, walls, a lake pier, miles of woodland roads, much statuary, drinking fountains every hundred feet are all included in the big piece of construction that is now virtually finished.

TWO CANDIDATES OPPOSE T. M. BELL

Winder, Ga., May 22.—(Special.)—Hon. Herman P. de la Perriere, prominent farmer and business man of Jackson county, has formally announced his candidacy for congress in the ninth district, against Hon. Thomas M. Bell, the present representative. Mr. de la Perriere has served for a number of years in the Georgia house of representatives, and is at present state senator from the 33d district.

While in the lower house he was chairman of the appropriations committee of that body. He has not yet given out a definite platform on which he will base his candidacy, but will announce his platform later. In his formal announcement he cites his record as a practical farmer and business man, and his long legislative experience in both houses of the general assembly of the state.

Colonel Joseph G. Collins, of Gainesville, has also announced his candidacy. Colonel Collins was formerly solicitor general of the Gainesville judicial circuit for a term of four years, not offering for reelection. He is a graduate of Hiawassee, Mercer university and the University of Virginia, and has practiced law at Gainesville for a number of years. He bases his candidacy on more federal aid for state roads, legislation favoring better farm and labor conditions, and a more aggressive policy on the part of southern congressmen.

Honorable Thomas M. Bell, the present representative, has been a member of congress since 1904, having served continuously since being first elected. He always has had opposition, but has never been defeated. He has not yet announced for reelection, but it is certain that he will be in politics again for this office. He was born in White county, but for a long number of years has made his home at Gainesville.

BALL PLAYER HELD ON ASSAULT CHARGE

Albany, Ga., May 22.—(AP)—A warrant charging Tom Gheen, star hurler of the Jacksonville Southeastern league baseball team, with attempted criminal assault has been sworn out here and Sheriff O. F. Tarver of Dougherty county has requested the arrest of the pitcher by the Jacksonville authorities.

The alleged crime is said to have been committed Thursday afternoon at a local hotel where the Jacksonville players were staying while playing Albany in a four-game series. Gheen is charged with having entered the room of a young married woman and attempted to attack her.

The Jacksonville team left the city about 30 minutes after the alleged assault and Sheriff Tarver was unable to take Gheen in custody. Yesterday Gheen hurled for the Jacksonville team, defeating the Montgomery Lions. Gheen has been one of the mainstays of the Tars all season. He pitched part of one game here.

HURLER ARRESTED DENIES CHARGES

Jacksonville, Fla., May 22.—(AP)—Tom Gheen, 27, pitching ace of the Jacksonville team of the Southeastern league, was arrested by police here today on request of authorities at Albany, Ga., who telephoned that they held a warrant for Gheen's arrest on charges of assault with intend to criminally attack a white woman.

Authorities here said the Albany sheriff held a warant for Gheen's arrest issued on complaint of R. E. Hill, of Albany. Lieutenant Francis Smith, of the Jacksonville police department, said the sheriff at Albany told him an investigation of the case had been made there and that it had been found that the woman was badly beaten.

The Jacksonville team began a four-game series at Albany last Monday and returned to Jacksonville yesterday.

Gheen denies the charges. He told police, however, that three members of the Jacksonville team had been on a "party" with an Albany woman and that they had been drinking. Gheen was arrested at a hotel here this morning. He gave his home address as Lincoln, N. C.

Gheen was held for service of the warrant without bail but later was released in custody of Charles B. Griner, president of the Jacksonville club.

Probe Is Planned Of Convict Labor In Banner Mines

Birmingham, Ala., May 22.—(AP)—The Jefferson county grand jury has "just started" to probe convict conditions in this county, authorities in charge of the inquiry said here today after plans had been made to delve into many complaints coming from Banner mines, a property owned by the Alabama By-Products Corporation. At this property the state delivers coal at so much per ton aboard cars. The convicts are worked under ground by the state.

The grand jury today heard a report on the finances of Flat Top prison from C. C. Brooks, state examiner of accounts. When the jury investigated conditions at Flat Top recently in connection with the deaths of James W. Knox and other convicts, allegations were made concerning the camp's financial affairs. The inquiry into the system at that camp brought six indictments for first degree murder.

The grand jury will on next Wednesday resume the examination of witnesses in the banner mine complaints. As its solicitor Willard Drake declared that he had unearthed there a reign of terror that surpassed conditions at Flat Top. Meantime the jury will work on Flat Top.

ALBANY IS QUIET AFTER ELKS' MEET

Albany, Ga., May 22.—(AP)—Albany this morning presented an appearance in marked contrast to that of yesterday and the day before, quiet and business-like order following the riotous laughter and parading of the streets which prevailed throughout the 12th annual convention of the Georgia Elks association, which came to a close here last night.

The special trains from Atlanta and Savannah left after midnight last night, bearing their loads of Elks back home after what has been called "one of the best conventions ever held."

Although rain Thursday morning interfered with the festivities and forced postponement of the grand parade which was a feature of the convention, the remainder of the time was marked by clear skies and warm sunshine and the Elks made up for lost time in their orgy of jollification.

J. S. Billingslea, local chairman, declared this morning that he had received in the name of the local lodge and the city enthusiastic assurances from all prominent visitors that the convention had been a great success and would ring down through the history of Georgia Elkdom as one of the most enjoyable of them all.

Americus took first prize in the parade of magnificent floats yesterday with Savannah carrying off second place honors and Griffin coming third. Thousands joined in a monster street dance and "11 o'clock toast" ceremonial which officially closed the convention last night.

$1,385,000 Gift Made for New Chicago School

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Chicago, Ill., May 22.—A $1,385,000 gift by the Carnegie corporation for the establishment of a graduate library school at the University of Chicago was announced today by President Max Mason.

While the new school will be housed for the present in one of the quadrangle buildings, a special building may be devoted to it in the future. The school will emphasize the broad principles of library work and its relation to society as well as the technical fundamentals. Opportunities for study and research, leading to advanced degrees, will be offered to library students. There will be part-time courses for experienced librarians.

The school will supervise research in the library problems in Chicago and elsewhere utilizing the facilities of the American Library association and other library organizations for field work.

The restricted educational opportunities of the youth of the late Andrew Carnegie made such a lasting impression on his adult life that he gave millions for public libraries all over the United States. His Scotch blood led him to see that gifts are seldom highly valued for long so he made each gift contingent on the raising of a certain sum by each community. The new gift to the University of Chicago completes the cycle from the library as the poor man's university to the university acting in promotion of better library service.

ALABAMA GROWERS SELL STRAWBERRIES

Guntersville, Ala., May 22.—(Special.)—The Guntersville Strawberry Growers' association has sold its entire output of strawberries for this season to a Cincinnati produce house. The price is said to be $6 a crate this week, $5 a crate next week and $4 for all production thereafter.

Approximately 500 acres in Marshall county are planted to strawberries, it is estimated and at the contract price of the sale all of the growers will make good money.

WOMAN IS HELD IN HOTEL DEATH

Thomaston, Ga., May 22.—(AP)—Mrs. Cleo Stringfield, 25, will remain in jail here until a coroner's jury can have the aid of Solicitor Owen, of Zebulon, Ga., in further investigation of the death of George Bostick, 35, who died from a pistol wound last Tuesday at midnight. It is expected that Solicitor Owen will come here early next week so that the probe of Bostick's death can be completed. In the meantime, Mrs. Stringfield is held without bail.

An investigation of the shooting was started by a coroner's jury Thursday and the investigation continued until today. After the jury reconvened this morning, it was decided not to go further into the case until Solicitor Owen could be present and for this reason the probe was deferred until next week.

Sheriff S. S. Lee, of Thomaston, expects to bring out all the facts possible in connection with Bostick's death although it is believed here that the woman had nothing to do with the shooting.

Mrs. Stringfield maintains that she had nothing whatever to do with the shooting. She claims that Bostick fired the shot himself. The shooting occurred in a boarding house in the mill village here.

Chile To Demand Selection of Date For Plebiscite

Arica, Chile, May 22.—(AP)—Chile intends to demand that the Tacna-Arica plebiscitary commission select a date for the determination of the plebiscite on the disputed territory as soon as possible.

The Chilean delegates assert that the registrations, which ended yesterday, were carried out regularly and that there is now nothing further to do but to proceed accordingly to a selection of the date for the plebiscite. They maintain that the Peruvians, who did not participate in the registration acted entirely on their own will.

The possibility of reopening the registration books is denounced by the Chileans who assert that it is impossible to do this under the electoral law and that in any case such a procedure would be unfair to Chile.

Peruvian and American claims that conditions in the territory render a free and fair vote problematical, the Chileans contend are refuted by the fact that no concrete suggestions for a more fair plebescite have been offered.

The Chileans are also opposed to the maintenance of the status quo in the territory pending Washington negotiations. They assert that the arbitral proceedings cannot be interrupted by activities of the department of state in seeking a compromise.

BOOK REVIEWS IN TABLOID

DONN BYRNE.

Hangman's House. By Donn Byrne, author of "Messer Marco Polo," etc., is all that is necessary to convince the reader that another splendid story has been published. The setting is in Ireland. "Once more had come the miracle of the Irish June. Yellow of Grose; red of clover; purple of Dublin mountains. Everywhere the white of the hawthorn," etc. The description of Ireland as expressed by Mr. Byrne in the first chapter is beautiful and inspiring, and of which is said: "One of the most beautiful love stories with its setting in the author's beloved Ireland presented in that golden singing prose which has won the acclaim of readers and reviewers in both America and England."

A charming girl, Connaught O'Brien and Dermot McDermot, a gallant young man, a scion of the Irish kings, furnish the material for the beautiful love story. Then comes John D'Arcy, who is lacking in everything that makes a real man, but Connaught's father forces his young daughter to marry him. This is the outline of a splendid story which love, after many obstacles, comes into its own.

As to the author, he is not only a writer of romance, but a soldier, poet, sportsman, and a man who seems born to be of use and pleasure to his world, and of which is said "A nobler Byron, a more musical Dumas, a more vital Meredith, a swifter moving Scott," etc. After all, he is Donn Byrne. He is a true story teller as the reader of his five splendid books well knows. The Century Co., New York.

Judy's Man. Helen Berger must have selected the name of Judy because of its real appeal to grown-ups as well as children. The tale begins with the childhood of Judith Betts, so christened, but everybody called her Judy.

The story has a Washington setting with its social and political side, and the little girl whose background was one of shabby and unattractive gray surroundings, slowly but surely rises above to where the sunlight begins, and finally she finds herself seeing the beauties of life and at last the "gate to her garden of dreams is opened wide for her entrance into another land"—the land of romance. Penn Publishing Co., Philadelphia.

The Devil. By Lee Tolstoy, translated by Aylmer Maude, is attracting attention, and of which is said, "It is a literary event of singular importance. There is an additional interest attached to this book, for not only is it characteristic of Tolstoy's, but it reflects an experience which profoundly influenced his life and his writing."

Mr. Maude, Tolstoy's translator, in an interview says of Tolstoy and his book:

"The posthumous novel, 'The Devil,' by Leo Tolstoy which has just been published by Harpers was the last novel that the great Russian completed before his death, and has never been published anywhere except Russia. It is translated by Aylmer Maude, was for years Tolstoy's authorized English translator and interpreter. In his preface, Maude tells the incident which prompted Tolstoy to write "The Devil," his temporary attraction to the servants' cook, adding: 'It is so characteristic of him, and so closely connected with an event that influenced him, that it would be a pity for it not to be known, especially as it is one of the few posthumous works he left in a completed state; even in this case we do not know which of the two endings he wrote he would have adopted had he published it himself.' Both endings are included in the novel so that the reader may take his choice.'"

A Sporting Chance. By Margaret Cameron. How strange that parents would give their baby son the name of Percival Galahad Brazenose—the family name being bad enough without adding the given names. When he started to school the boys called him Nosey, then Bray, and sometimes Muley, until he decided the only way to stop it was to thrash out the whole bunch. And this he did. He resented the name and even up to the time he entered college, for he was a millionaire's son, he was made to blush many times on account of it. He finally used his initials then the college boys decided that it would be easier to call him "Piggy."

So it was as "Piggy" Brazenose that he laid the foundation for his future life, and despite his name he became a most likable young man, a popular athletic star, and anything but a prig.

The story of his life and adventures which are nicely balanced "between comedy and melodrama" adds keen interest to a well written romance. It is a tale of youth, laughter and love. Harper and Brothers, New York.

The Valley of the Stars. By Charles Alden Seltzer, author of "Channing Comes Through," "Last Hope Ranch," etc., and other books which have made him very popular as a writer of western stories.

The author has located this story in Montana and it is woven around Edna Pendleton and Ross Nevins who are very much surprised to find that they are partners in the same ranch. The story of their partnership is full of thrills and the reader will find plenty of entertainment up to the last chapter. The Century Co., New York.

Miss Blake's Husband. By Elizabeth Jordan who stages the scene of her new story in New York and California, and the following are the character who make up this delightful story: Marjorie Blake, who possesses the three most charming 1926 qualities—young, beautiful and rich, and yet in her case can be added intellect and education. Then comes Kate Kennedy whose pathway up to this time has not been as smooth as her friend's. David Osgood, whose friends compare him in good looks to the "golden Hellene god." Horace Kemp and Bob Kennedy, Marjorie's brother, who is like a faithful watch dog when it comes to his sister, make up the most interesting party.

This is a charming romance by a most popular writer who knows how to hold the reader's attention and who in this story adds a dash of mystery which makes it unusually entertaining. (The Century Co., New York.)

The Bat.

The Bat is a novel made from the play by Mary Roberts Rinehart and Avery Hopwood. In doing this it is a case of party of the first and second parts having written a play that each year gives the people an opportunity to receive the same old thrills, but in a new way.

The novel just published is made from this thrilling play that refuses to be sidetracked—this work having been done by the party of the third part who almost suffered a nervous collapse before it was finished, and the advance predictions are that it will be a great success.

It is filled with comedy, mystery and romance—in fact in an interview with the critic who was the first to be favored with a reading, he said, "I saw the play some dozens of times; yet when I read the book I sat up untill .... and so on. The story contains everything but masked Russian princes and a beautiful collie dog. If any other thrill is lacking it is due to an oversight."

What Is to Be. By J. S. Snaith, author of "The Undefeated," is a beautiful love story which will appeal to the many readers who have become so interested in his writings heretofore.

The story opens with the curiosity of John Chandos, a most affable Englishman, being very much aroused over the arrival of two ladies at his lodging house in post-war London. He noticed that they had every appearance of being not only foreign but of royal blood. They proved to be grandmother and granddaughter and fugitives from the court of a Balkan kingdom, overthrown by revolution. The grandmother finally becomes friends with Chandos and confides more and more in him as to her affairs, even asking him to become the guardian of her young granddaughter, after her death which seems to be near.

This is the beginning of a most interesting romance in which he marries the young princess and not very long afterwards on account of conditions in her country they are forced to leave England for the Balkans where she becomes the queen and he prince consort.

"What Is to Be"—this is destiny. One event follows another at a rapid pace and the close of the story leaves the reader in breathless excitement. (D. Appleton & Co. New York.)

The Golden Beast. By E. Phillips Oppenheim, who is a master when it comes to mystery stories, locates his new story in London and it is based on the following words from the gamekeeper's daughter to the Baron Honerton:

"For the deed which you have permitted to take place this morning you and your race will suffer. My father killed your son by accident; you murdered my father with foul and beastly premeditation. You bought his death with your money. The fear of it is in your heart. You will never lose it."

It is a strong story, well written, and like his other stories, baffling to the readers until he slowly leads up to the climax. (Little Brown & Co., New York.)

Between Fate and Ak Uas. By Maude Kino-Ole Kinney, who writes of society life in Hawaii, (Dorrance & Co., Philadelphia.)

POETRY BOOKS.

Sayings in Verse. By J. Adam Bede. It is a little volume of verse but every line breathes good will and kindness.

Dreams, and Other Realities. By Lysle Tomerlin, whose poems always deal with the human elements, and the reader will find them very appealing.

Songs of the Sanctum. Legends and lyrics of newspaperdom. By James C. McNally, which the sanctum and its daily occupants will find of real interest as they themselves become of many moods and many minds while thinking and yawning in the news departments of a daily newspaper. Publishers, Stratford company, Boston.

MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS.

Home Town Sketches. By Dr. Emile R. Paillou. In the state of Missouri is a little town called Boonville, and these are sketches of the interesting people and the quaint characters who lived there during 1870 to 1900. The author, who claims it also as his home town, knows his characters all personally and uses their correct names in discussing them and shows his interest in them.

While this book is of especial interest to all natives of Missouri who have wandered away, the large number of people who were reared in the small town will thoroughly enjoy its originality.

Adam and Eve. A probable origin of the Garden of Eden tradition. By Oscar T. Crosby, who in the winter of 1913 and 1914 explored the regions in which lies the probable site of the Garden of Eden, and evidently this was the inspiration that came to him to write this book. The Stratford company, Boston.

Intellectual Vagabondage. An apology for the intelligensia. By Floyd Dell, author of "Were You Ever a Child?" All readers will welcome with a great deal of pleasure Doran's Modern readers' Bookshelf. The preface is most interesting in its explanation of certain 18th and 19th century attitudes toward life, one question especially is worthy of thought and discussion, and that is "Can the literature which we as an intellectual class evoked to meet our own special needs be of use to the young people who are now growing up?"

It is a very attractive little volume and as usual with Floyd Dell's books it will be widely read and discussed. George H. Doran Co.

The Glamour of British Columbia. By H. Glynn-Ward. The illustrations are from photographs made by the author, who does not call this a travel book but a story of the thrilling experiences of a courageous and sport-loving woman who made her dream come true of a trip through the great Canadian west.

Mrs. Ward's story will be interesting, for it is filled with valuable information as she describes the rich territory which she covered in her long hike into British Columbia, having gone even into its wilds. She studied the fisheries and the canneries, and traveled with trappers, guides and prospectors. The different subjects she discusses in this wonderful country on to the "Great Divide," is so realistic that it is like taking the trip with the writer. There are 300 pages which, with the illustrations, makes it a worth-while book for entertainment. Price $3.00. The Century Co., New York.

CHILDREN'S BOOKS.

Jungle Joe. Pride of the Circus. By Clarence Hawkes. The picture jacket and frontispiece are in colors and are the work of L. J. Bridgman. What can soud more interesting to the little folks than a little boy and a trained elephant, and this clever writer of children's books has woven a wonderful story around Ali, a little Malay boy, and Joe, th eelephant.

Sportcraft for All the Year is another interesting book on making and doing, by Dale R. Van Horn, with frontispiece and 180 text illustrations, with just the instructions that boys of all ages delight in trying. The handsome volume is divided into two parts, Summer and Winter Sports—for there are things for the boy to do in the winter as well as in the summer.

When I Was a Boy in Armenia. By Manoog Der Alexanian. The illustrations are from photographs taken in this wonderful country, for there is no more interesting nation than that of the Armenians, whose country is called the "Cradle of the Human Race," containing the Garden of Eden with its four rivers and the historic Mount Ararat, and they claim to be the earliest Christian nation.

The writer of this story for the young is a senior at Harvard. He tells in a language simple and earnest of the Armenian customs, education, industries and festivities. It is a well-written book and is full of information for children. (Lothrop, Lee & Shepard company, Boston.)

The Happy Though Story Book. By Bertha M. Hall, with picture jackets in full color and two-color illustration by Florence Liley Young is a beautiful book for the little folks, containing twelve stories written for children about children who are happy and joyous. They are for children from seven to twelve who will be delighted with the home atmosphere of the stories. (Lothrop & Lee, Boston.)

The Happy Thought-Story Book. By Bertha M. Hall, with picture jackets in full color and two-color folks containing 12 stories written for children about children who are happy and joyous. They are for children from 7 to 12 who will be delighted with the some atmosphere of the stories. Lothrop & Lee, Boston.)

Mrs. Burr has a number of important books to her credit, including "Alaska, Our Beautiful Northland of Opportunity" (Page company, Boston), and is traveling under commission from Messrs Page to prepare two additional volumes for "The Spell Series"—"The Spell of India" and "The Spell of Greece."

Archie Bell, the well-known critic and writer, is also sailing abroad at once, and as the result of his journeyings, will no doubt add another to his several volumes in "The Spell Series."

R. L. Paget, editor of The Cocktail Book, a sideboard manual for gentlemen—now in its ninth printing, has just returned from Washington, where he was summoned as a witness before the wet vs. dry congressional investigation. He reports that he agress thoroughly with President Butler, of Columbia university, who stated in his recent address before the Psi Upsilon club that the activities of the Anti-Saloon league had resulted in a tremendous increase in the number of private stills and homebrews.

Kathleen and Charles G. Norris, the novelists, whose laters book, "The Black Flemings" and "Pig Iron," were published on the same day, are both great lovers of the outdoors and have a special affection for their ranch in California.

Mrs. Norris is an excellent cook, and finds a pleasant relaxation from writing in broiling chops over a crisp brush fire.

ROYALTY FLOODS POLAR EXPLORERS WITH TELEGRAMS

(Copyright, 1926, by The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Nome, Alaska, May 22.—Captain Raold Amundsen and Lincoln Ellsworth are being flooded with telegrams of congratulations on the success of their flight from Spitzbergen to Alaska in the airship Norge. Captain Amundsen received wires from King Haakon, Queen Maud and Crown Prince Olav of Norway, and King Victor Emmanuel of Italy; from Secretary Wilbur of the United States navy department; the geographic societies of the important cities and the following message from Dr. Fridtjof Nansen:

"Sincere thanks for the telegram and hearty congratulations on your singular pioneering deed for the future of research."

BANDITS CAPTURED BUT LOOT OF BANK IS LOST IN FLIGHT

Detroit, May 22.—(AP)—The Bank of Romulus was robbed of approximately $20,000 today by three men who later were captured by a posse. The robbers threw away the money as they fled before the villagers and it had not been recovered at noon, although the brush through which the men fled was being carefully searched.

Columbus, Ohio, May 22.—(AP)—The United States army will lose its oldest enlisted man Monday when Staff Sergeant Otis C. West, 76, stationed at Fort Hayes, here, will be retired after 30 years unbroken service. Sergeant West retires to civilian life with two distinctions seldom attained by any soldier. New Home Bought in Garden Hills

Beautiful new home at 239 Rumson road, Garden Hills, recently purchased by W. H. Schroder. Mr. and Mrs. Schroder and family are returning to Atlanta after having resided in south Georgia for the past three years. The sale price of the above residence was given at $17,500.

W. H. Schroder, of Atlanta, has purchased the beautiful Dutch colonial home at 239 Rumson road, Garden Hills, according to John H. Owen, sales manager of the Garden Hills corporation. Mr. and Mrs. Schroder and family expect to move to the home within the next few days. The purchaser who has been living for a number of years in south Georgia where he was an official of a cottonseed oil company, recently returned to Atlanta to become secretary-treasurer of the Garden Hills corporation.

Sales in the fashionable northside development are increasing steadily as the steam shovels are opening up the Country club and Brentwood sections so the public can see the possibilities of the heavily wooded area lying between the Peachtree division and Piedmont avenue, Mr. Owen stated. The dense groves of pine and hardwood, and the rolling land there, makes every lot a choice home site, he added.

Construction of a large private swimming pool, which will be one of the many recreational features, began Friday.

"We have augmented our original plans to the extent of equipping this pool so that it will be as sanitary as modern science can make it," said Mr. Owen. "The plans call for a costly filteration plant. The fresh water flowing continually into the pool will be filtered four times and then chlorinated, making it absolutely safe."

Mr. Owen stated that Charles Case, well-known Atlanta contractor, would design and build the pool proper, while Hentz, Ried and Adler, prominent southern architects, will have charge of laying out the approach and designing of the English type bath house. The wading pool for children will be designed and built by Mr. Case. It will be located within a short distance of the main pool and in the midst of a shady pine grove. Mr. Owen said that Sunny Brook park is ready for use. This five-acre area, just beyond the entrance to the Country club section, is equipped as a playground for children.

"It has swings, slides and see-saws," said he, "and we have tried to equip it with everything calculated to intrigue the children. It is stocked with gold fish, perch and bream and there are rabbits, guinea pigs, pigeons, ducks and fancy water fowl."

Sunny Brook park is open to the public for the present, said Mr. Owen, and Atlantans are invited to visit it and bring their children with them so they may enjoy the park, too.

Saturday the park will be the scene of the society horse show, at which Vendetta, Frank Adair's champion rider, and other notables in the horse world will be exhibited.

Taylor Explains Tennessee River Bed Ownership

Washington, May 22.—(AP)—The war department made public today extracts from a letter by Major General Taylor, chief of engineers, replying to inquiries as to any action taken by the state of Alabama in connection with the construction of Wilson dam on the Muscle Shoals project.

General Taylor said that no grants of property on the Tennessee river had been made by the state, the easements required in connection with lands to be overflowed having been either purchased from private owners, donated or obtained by condemnation.

"The ownership of the bed of the Tennessee river on which the dam is built is understood to be in the state, but such ownership is qualified by an easement in favor of the general government for the benefit of navigation," General Taylor said. "The federal government has a right to the full flow of the river and the right to occupy and use for the improvement of navigation the whole body of the stream and the soil thereunder between ordinary high water lines, and this right is paramount and exclusive of any state or private rights in such areas."

Cecil and Boncour See Little Hope For Disarmament

Geneva, May 22.—Proportional disarmament among the nations of the world is impossible, it was decided today by Lord Robert Cecil and Paul Boncour, British and French representatives, respectively, who are attending the preliminary arms conference here.

Proponents of the proportional scheme had suggested that a scale of armaments could be fixed arbitrarily and applied to all countries. Cecil and Boncour have agreed this is not practical and instead each nation will be asked to submit a statement indicating the minimum armaments it must maintain for national security.

Each nation must justify its demands from the standpoint of its geography, political situation, population, vulnerability of its frontiers, the time required for it to mobilize and convert its peace effectives on a war footing, and other factors.

DEMOCRATS CLOSE PRE-PRIMARY MEET IN CALIFORNIA

Santa Cruz, Calif., May 22.—(AP)—The democratic state pre-primary convention closed here today without indorsing any candidates for nomination to state or federal elective offices and without allowing the question of modification of the 18th amendment to come to a vote.

The platform recommended the construction of the Boulder Canyon dam project and urged democrats in congress to support the measure.

The convention authorized the appointment of a committee to obtain revision of the direct primary law.

Society Women Will Appear in Charity Show Sponsored by Junior League in Garden Hills

Society and military leaders of Atlanta will ride the finest saddle horses in the south in the Garden Hills charity horse show sponsored by the Junior League next Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Left, above, Mrs. J. E. Bracewell, popular society matron, is shown on "Sleepy Time Gal," owned by Edgar F. Dunlap, and at right, Miss Eleanor Moffett is shown with "Cherry Lee Rose," which she owns.

A group of leaders in Chattanooga's society and military circles, headed by Mrs. Robert Purse, Jr., of Lookout Mountain, will come to Atlanta and enter their prize mounts in the Garden Hills society horse show of the Atlanta Junior League, it is announced by Miss Alice Stearns, chairman of the league's horse show committee. Proceeds of the affair will go to the Junior League charity fund.

Visiting exhibitors will include army officers from Fort Oglethorpe whose mounts will be seen in the three-gaited, the jumping and the officers' chargers classes. Other entries are expected from among the troop of cavalry at the University of Georgia. Colonel James E. Ware, commandant, has telephoned from Athens that several members of the troop expect to attend and ride horses of the unit in drills similar to those which proved a spectacular event last year in the Southeastern Fair horse show.

Among Atlantans expected to ride in the events are Mrs. Robin Adair, Mrs. Orme Campbell, Miss Doughty Manley, Miss Telside Pratt, Miss Mary Jimmie Pattillo, Miss Eleanor Moffett, Mrs. Willshire Riley, Miss Janie Howell, Mrs. Dana Belser, Mrs. Carl Ramspeck, Miss Lois Thompson, Miss Jennie Robinson, Miss Allene Lonsdale, Miss Isobelle Hunter, Mrs. T. Trophies, including several handsome loving cups, have been offered by leading Atlanta enterprises. Twelve events are on the program and silver cups will be given winners of all major events. The program begins at 2 o'clock.

Work was being pushed Saturday on the new track of the Garden Hills Riding club at Sunny Brook park in Garden Hills. A stand to accommodate a large throng is being erected. The club has just been formed and is becoming the center of north side equestrian sports.

Hughes Denies He Is Candidate In New York Race

New York, May 22.—(AP)—Charles E. Hughes, former secretary of state and one time governor of New York state issued a statement today saying he was not a prospective candidate for the republican gubernatorial nomination. His name had been put forward informally yesterday at a meeting of the republican state committee here.

KITCHENETTE PLAN OF LIVING SCORED BY HEALTH EXPERT

Atlantic City, N. J., May 22.—Kitchenette apartments—the joy of the newlyweds—have come up for criticism before the first annual American health congress now in session here.

"The small apartment," said Dr. Christine M. Leonard, of the Philadelphia child guidance clinic, "does not give sufficient outlet for excessive energy, and the close association of the family, dwarfs and cramps the personalities of its members."

DRY REFERENDUM IS URGED IN OHIO

Cleveland, May 22.—(AP)—Maurice Maschke, republican national committeeman for Ohio and W. B. Congwer, democratic county chairman, today united in expressing themselves in favor of a state-wide referendum on prohibition.

"The liquor question is with us once more," Maschke said. "The question ought to be settled. Until it is, people will be elected on the basis of whether they are wet or dry, instead of their merits as candidates. The state ought to hold a referendum and take the question out of politics."

Congwer was equally positive in his espousal of a referendum.

Meridian Hearing.

Washington, May 22.—(AP)—Application of the Meridian & Bigbee River railway for authority to construct a line from Meridian, Miss., to Myrtlewood, Ala., has been assigned for hearing in Washington June 9.

Princess Militza Is Suing Germany For Big Fortune

Neu Strelitz, Germany, May 22.—(AP)—Former Crown Princess Militza of Montenegro, sister of the late ruling grand duke, Adolph Friederich of Strelitz, has filed suit against the German republic for a claim of 14,500,000 marks, representing one-fourth of her brother's estate.

This announcement by Dr. Mustaedt before the executive committee of the Mecklenburg diet today, caused a sensation, stirring up indignation even among the parties of the extreme right, especially as Militza is basing her clam on the Versailles treaty.

The case is to be tried before a joint German-Jugo-Slav arbitration court in view of Militza's present citizenship. M. Paul-Boncour, French League of Nations delegate, is acting as her counsel.

The local newspapers declare that if the German republic is compelled to pay the claim it will hold the grand Duchy of Strelitz responsible.

SUTTON SAYS WORD OF CHEER TO PUPILS

"Let's Finish the Job!" is the slogan contained in the weekly news letter of Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of schools, to students. Mr. Sutton refers specifically to attaining 100 per cent teeth of scholars and to the last-minute sprint towards promotion.

MUSSOLINI RULES AGAINST DISPLAY

Rome, May 22.—Premier Mussolini aboard the liner Esperia is traveling over the Tyrrhenian sea tonight, carrying a message to the seafaring folk of Genoa and the Nigurian coast that the new Roman empire intends to restore its predecessor's sea power.

The voyage, on the occasion of the eleventh anniversary of Italy's entrance into the world war, is for the purpose of proclaiming to a city, which once was the world's greatest naval center, the motto of Mussolini—"Italy's future lies at sea."

The Esperia sailed from Naples this morning carrying Augusto Turati, secretary general of the fascist party, and several hundred officials and notables. Mussolini boarded the vessel this evening at Fiumicino.

Although Premier Mussolini, on learning that arrangements were being made at Genoa for another "triumphal procession," sent a hurried message to the prefect advising against unnecessarily elaborate festivities, the welcome will be far from unostentatious.

"I am told," his message read, "that you are preparing arches, illuminations and other displays which seem to me to be excessive. Everything which means unnecessary waste of money should be avoided. The moment requires sobriety and discretion. Flags will suffice."

A short distance off Genoa early tomorrow, the best vessels of Italy's merchant marine will pass in review before Mussolini.

After the ceremonies tomorrow and Monday the premier will stop at Pisa and Prato.

Royal Reception Planned For Constitution's Orator

COOLIDGE TO RECEIVE CONTESTANTS AT WHITE HOUSE

Washington, May 22.—(Special.)—Contestants for the national oratorical prize, including Joseph A. Mullarky, of Augusta, Ga., who represents The Constitution and the south, will be entertained royally while in the capital.

The round of receptions by high officials will begin on the day of the contest, Friday, June 4, when the young men and women will be received at the white house by President and Mrs. Coolidge at noon.

In the afternoon, they will go to the capitol. Vice President Dawes will leave his place on the rostrum as presiding officer of the senate to welcome the orators. After a visit with Dawes, whose pleasing personality has made him a popular favorite here, the contestants will call upon speaker "Nick" Longworth, of Ohio, who presides over sessions of the house at the other side of the capitol.

From the galleries, the young men and women will watch for awhile the proceedings on the floors of the two legislative bodies. After their visit to the capitol, they will have a short rest before the big hour of the day, the contest Friday night at the new City Auditorium. President Coolidge will deliver the address of welcome, and cabinet officials will have places on the platform.

The contestants will be guests of honor at a luncheon Friday at Eastern High school, the institution attended by the winner of the contest in the District of Columbia, Miss Myrtle Posey.

When Joseph A. Mullarky, of Augusta, Ga., representing The Constitution, steps from the orator's platform after completing his oration he will be greeted with the yell and song of the Richmond Military academy.

Students of the Eastern High school of this city have been sent copies of the school's favorite yells. A special section on the platform will be reserved for students of the Washington school in order that they may have part in the program. The cheering will be conducted on a basis of fairness to all the participants, and will be a means of paying tribute to the speaker.

Saturday will be a full day.

The program begins with a trip down the Potomac to Mount Vernon, the home of George Washington, in the morning. The party will be carried to Mount Vernon on the U. S. S. Sylph, the naval vessel assigned to Secretary of the Navy Wilbur. The secretary will be host on this trip. Luncheon will be served aboard the Sylph on the return journey to the capital.

Saturday evening, the young orators will be the guests, at a dinner given by John Hays Hammond, internationally famous mining engineer and prominent in public life. Hammond was in South Africa with Cecil Rhodes during the stirring days of the Boer war.

Sunday will be given over to sightseeing in the capital. In the morning places of interest in the city will be visited, while the tour in the afternoon will include Arlington National cemetery and the tomb of the Unknown Soldier, across the Potomac in Virginia.

This sight-seeing tour will end the entertainment for the orators, all of which will be under the auspices of the Washington Star, and the contestants will leave for their homes, preparatory to the trip to Europe which begins a month later. Picture collections will be enriched during the trip to the capital, as a corps of photographers will accompany the visitors at all times.

RUMANIA'S ROYALTY LEAVES ON CRUISE

Bucharest, Rumania, May 22.—(AP) King Ferdinand and Queen Marie have left on a 12-day cruise on the Danube, pending the completion of the elections, which begin Tuesday.

Before their departure the king and queen talked for an hour with the correspondent of the Associated Press. They assured him that all reports abroad concerning the insecurity of the throne, unrest and revolutionary tendencies and the return of former Crown Prince Carol were wholly false.

"You have seen for yourself," said King Ferdinand, "that the country is completely calm. There is not the slightest indication of revolution. The peasants were never better off or more contented.

"The election preliminaries are being conducted without disorder. Our dynasty is as secure as ever. The country is solidly united. It is a mistake to classify Rumanians as Transylvanians, Bessarabians, Saxons or Magyars. We are all Rumanians, united under one flag and striving for one ideal—the good of Rumania.

"All talk abroad that the country is split into irreconcilable factional groups which threaten to take things in their own hands is nonsense. Of course strong political differences exist among various regional party groups and politicians, but any Balkan country would indeed be dull without its political strife and differences of opinion."

Queen Marie spoke about her projected visit to America early in the fall. She said she was looking forward to it with keen pleasure.

"I hope to stay there three or four months," said the queen. "My American friends want me to see every phase of American life. I shall travel from coast to coast. I also may visit Canada. My contact with the poor and lowly of my country will make me feel just as much at home in the humble logger's hut as in Mrs. Vanderbilt's mansion."

FEARS NOW FELT EVANGELINE BOOTH CONTINUES GRAVE;

New York, May 22.—(AP)—Grave apprehension was felt today over the condition of Commander Evangeline Booth, of the Salvation Army, who is critically ill at her home near White Plains.

Although an operation is urgent, her physician stated, "the various complications leave the likelihood of recovery too much in doubt to warrant it."

The statement follows:

"The commander suffered a relapse the night before last of the old walled-off appendix. She needs an operation, but the various complications, when given consideration, leaves the likelihood of recovery too much in doubt to warrant it."

Adjudged Sane, Scott Ordered In Court Tuesday

Chicago, May 22.—Legal machinery to hang Russell T. Scott was set in motion again today.

Chief Pustice William V. Brothers ordered the former Canadian millionaire returned to the custody of the Cook county sheriff.

On Tuesday he will appear in criminal court. At that time he may be sentenced to the gallows again for murdering Joseph Maurer in a Chicago drug store hold up.

Scott is now an inmate of the asylum for the criminally insane at Chester, Ill. He was committed to that institution eight months ago after a jury had passed on his sanity.

The insanity verdict saved him from hanging but the death sentence remained, to be carried out should he regain his mental health.

This week a board of alienists examined him and reported that he had regained his sanity. The report was made to Attorney General Oscar Carlstrom.

The attorney general in turn forwarded the board's findings to Judge Brothers, who issued a writ of habeas corpus directing the superintendent of the Chester asylum to deliver Scott to Sheriff Hoffman here.

Legal procedure in the case is without precedent. The law under which Scott's execution date is to be set, is an old one but has never been tested.

William Scott Stewart, the attorney who obtained three last minute delays when Scott was in the shadow of the gallows here a year ago, said he would appear in court Tuesday in Scott's behalf. He said nothing would be spared to save the murderer from hanging.

CHORINE SUED FOR POSSESSION OF ANOTHER'S BABY

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Kokomo, Ind., May 22.—Audrey Altschaft, of Buffalo, has started habeas corpus proceedings here against Lillian Brown, chorus girl appearing in a local theater, asking for the immediate possession of her baby, Howard Robert Altschaft, age 20 months.

Mrs. Altschaft says she gave the baby into the keeping of the defendant while her husband was ill, to be returned to her when the husband's health improved. Instead, the complaint alleges, the defendant left Buffalo and Mrs. Altschaft has spent many months in search of her and the baby.

Miss Brown, it is understood, will offer the defense that she was to have permanent possession of the child.

Freight Rate Group Asked For Southwest

Washington, May 22.—(AP)—The fourth day of oral arguments before the interstate commerce commission as to whether an increase in freight rates should be granted western railroads was marked today by a plea for creation of a separate rate group in the southwest and a further attack by representatives of state utilities commissions on the method of valuation used by the railroads.

In addition, the commission was told in arguments against the proposed increase that agriculture should be helped "a little here and a little there," instead of trying to iron out the farmers' difficulties through legislation.

Paul Walker, special counsel for the corporation commission of Oklahoma, and R. C. Fulbright, of Houston, Texas, argued for a separate rate group taking in Arkansas, Texas, Oklahoma, and parts of Louisiana and Missouri, declaring shippers in that section were suffering from discriminatory rates.

An increase in the southwest 5 cents for every 2 1-2 to 3 1-3 cents in the northwest. Class rates in the southwest, he added, were so high that they defeated the purpose for which they were established. Live stock and grain rates also were described as far out of level with the same rates in the northwest.

The Oklahoma attorney declared that the southwestern cases before the commission presented an "emergency" far more serious than that upon which the carriers based their request for a rate raise, while Mr. Fulbright argued the last three years had been the most prosperous in history for southwestern roads and that those who sought an increase were not primarily southwestern carriers.

DR. GRICE TO ATTEND TWO-DAY BIBLE SCHOOL

Dr. Homer L. Grice, of Nashville, Tenn., secretary of the vocational Bible school work of the Southern Baptist convention, will be principal speaker at the two-day vocational Bible school which will be conducted at the Gordon Street Baptist church, Monday and Tuesday.

The Bible school will be under direction of the Rev. W. H. Faust, pastor of the church and president of the Atlanta Baptist Sunday School association, and Mrs. W. L. Blankenship, educational director. The school will be sponsored by the association.

Daily classes start at 3:30 o'clock and 7:30 o'clock and lunch will be served just before the night classes.

RESCUE OF FRANC MAY BRING ACCORD ON FRENCH DEBT

Paris, May 22.—(AP)—Yesterday's reaction in favor of the franc which was maintained in unofficial quotations today, is believed to improve the chances of ratification of the Washington debt accord.

Members of parliament who are still in Paris believe that ratification is far more probable with the franc at 30 to the dollar than at 35. The franc now is hovering around 30.80 to the dollar and 150 to the pound.

The apparent simplicity of the operations by which French money was rescued on the edge of the precipice to which it had slipped during the past week, has convinced the general public that the slump was due entirely to artificial circumstances and that there is reason to hope that the danger is passed.

It is believed that the alarm caused by the short intense crisis will impress upon parliament the fact that completion of financial renovation begun in passing bills to balance the budget fully is an urgent requirement in order to avoid a repetition of the slump.

Premier Briand and finance Minister Peret are understood to have agreed on the voluntary conversion of interior loans as a basis for a plan to provide resources for a sinking fund.

The stabilization of the franc through settlement of all foreign obligations also will be urged, an argument that will be used in favor of ratification of the Washington debt agreement.

YOUTH CONSTRUCTS HOME-MADE BOMB; BLOWN TO PIECES

Providence, R. I., May 22.—A home-made bomb killed E. W. Bradbury, 16, former technical high school student, here Saturday.

The boy had been told by a high school youth that a bomb could be constructed by the mixing of certain chemicals. Bradbury procured these, went to his room, and was filling a hoHow iron ball with the mixture when the explosion occured.

Bradbury was virtually blown to pieces by the blast.

Black Mountain Line.

Washington, May 22.—(AP)—The Black Mountain railway applied to the interstate commerce commission today for authority to abandon a 12.5-mile portion of its line between Eskota and Pensacola, in North Carolina. Practically all the timber and forest products in the region, for which the line was built, were said to have been removed, making it unnecessary to continue its operation.

Stock Market Was Dull Affair During Past Week For Buyers on Upswing

Some Money Could Have Been Made on Short Side By Anybody With "Nerve," Says Platt.

BY C. H. PLATT.

New York, May 22.—(Special.)—There is little good to say about the market for the past week. It was a dull, disgusting affair from the standpoint of the great majority, that is, the traders who want to buy for an upswing. There was some money to be made on the short side, but hardly anyone had the nerve to tackle it, with many stocks selling at levels to show yields from 7 per cent to 11 per cent and with extra fine earnings records behind them, as well as a fair outlook for the future. Under such circumstances, it is contrary to the average trader's nature to look upon stocks as being in a selling position. And still, with all these favorable factors, stocks continued to be weak.

The plain fact is that the public is not buying and until the public does come in there can hardly be a sustained rally. There might be a temporary advance, as was witnessed last week in a few issues, but such moves are usually mere feelers to see if the public will take hold of a moving stock. Such attempts to stimulate interest did not meet with any great amount of success and most gains were lost again promptly. It has always been a mystery to outsiders, and particularly to individuals who wanted to borrow money in the "street," why they could not find some quick takers for entirely legitimate propositions where they were willing to pay 6 per cent interest, backed by liberal security. The trouble is that the "wise" money wants from 15 to 25 per cent or it will not play. That is exactly the reason that good stocks can go to a 10 per cent basis of yield and not find any professional buyers for the long pull. It is absolutely no criterion of a stock's value or lack of value, that it is selling on a high yield basis in a market like the one through which we are passing.

There are plenty of reasons in booming times why a stock on which $20 net was earned for a year, sells at $200, but the only reason for its selling at $45 is given in the foregoing sentences. The hardest drives were aimed against the motor shares and they showed little if any resistance to attacks. There was plenty of selling in the specialties, including the packers, store stocks, irons, sugars and some of the public utilities. The oils and rails made the best appearances, but they did not sparkle by any means. The board rooms were comparatively vacant and the general flow of conversation pessimistic.

Traders Make Vows.

There is one infallible cycle in connection with trading in securities, although the time that it takes for such a cycle to be complete is indeterminable. After a break in the stock market, innumerable traders and investors, particularly, take solemn vows never to buy anything except bonds thereafter. This brings a rush of funds into the bond market and results in higher prices for those securities. After bond prices have reached a level where the yield is no longer attractive, attention becomes directed towards good preferred stocks, and the overflow of money from the bond market goes into this class of issues.

In due time, preferred stocks advance and as they advance they attract more attention, and in some instances, bonds are sold to take advantage of the movement in preferred stocks. Ultimately, preferred stocks reach a level that seems to be too high for the prospective investor and by that time common stocks which have been in the ruck are purchasable at prices seemingly out of accord with their dividend returns. Funds gravitate then to common stocks and we see another bull market. It lasts its short or long day and the inevitable crash comes, which is followed by resumptions of the above outlined procedure. Just at this time, because of high bond prices, preferred stocks are being looked up assiduously.

The oil stocks continue to be in the strongest statistical position of any division of the list. For the full year of 1925 they made remarkable earnings showings, and so far this year, they have done even better than during the same period of 1925. The use of automobiles is not being curtailed even though there may be some slowing up in the sales of cars, and with prices of crude oil and gasoline advancing frequently it looks as though this would be the banner year for all times for oil companies. There has been continual buying of oil stocks, but not on a large scale. The biggest wire houses report that oils are the favorite of out-of-town buyers. These stocks have managed to hold fairly well, while all others were sometimes crashing, sometimes declining easily, but consistently seeking lower levels. There was considerable activity among the tropical oils led by the newest recruit to the big board. One of the companies operating in California was traded in heavily in expectation of an announcement of merger terms for it.

Motor Stocks Attacked.

The motor shares were under almost constant attack. A feeling of uncertainty has been built up in the minds of both investors and speculators as to the future trend of business and earnings for these companies. So far, they have all done exceedingly well, but even extra dividends do not allay the fearful feeling that they are going to the bow-wows. There is hardly a legitimate reason for finding fault with the situation of the motor companies, except the general opinion that the well-known and much-advertised "saturation point" is near at hand, and that same cry has been broadcast for several years now. Much of this comment is based on active solicitation of foreign business by the larger builders, but this seems to be rather an indication of efficiency than a sign that no more cars are to be sold in the United States. Lower Canadian tariffs opens up new territory for our cars. It has been stated that Ford intends to select strategic positions for building garages to be rented at low figures and through which to take care of that huge potential demand believed to exist among flat and apartment house dwellers who could and would buy cars except for the expense of upkeep.

Money was in plentiful supply, although there were a number of loans called. The calling was presumably the result of withdrawals from New York banks by out-of-town bankers, who are dissatisfied with low rates and with the charge recently inaugurated for placing such loans. The market has undoubtedly been somewhat affected by the situation in Europe as illustrated by weakness in foreign exchanges. Sterling stood up when it had every reason for being weak, while French and Belgian francs sank to new low levels. The bond market was dull but steady. Bond buyers do not care much about paying present prices, but bond sellers are not inclined to make any concessions. There is a tremendous amount of money available for bond buying and naturally that makes for higher prices and more steadiness. According to Federal Reserve bank reports, member banks are doing more investing in securities than for a long time.

Road Earnings Good.

Reports emanating from railroad circles are to the effect that the earnings of the roads are good. Official reports coming out during the week were excellent. Traffic figures and carloadings were better than expected. In the face of these cheerful conditions the stocks just barely held their own and are still down a great deal from their high levels of the year. Next month there are to be arguments on railroad valuations before the interstate commerce commission. This is a question of vital importance to the roads, and is likely to precipitate a general argument in the newspapers on the desirability of immediate mergers in order that the question may be more readily cleared up. Investors are buying the rails for the dividend returns, but also have their eyes on the possible developments in June.

Paper stocks lack any sign of life, due to a general belief that the producing capacity of the industry is far in excess of normal needs. The farm machinery stocks held steady during the week and optimistic statements on the outlook for them this year were among current reading. The chemical fertilizers continued to sag, and there is a spreading opinion that they are yet too high on their prospects. The electrical stocks were inclined to weakness, following the issuance of a report by the second largest company showing a decline in earnings per share last year. Some of the sugars maintained a sort of an equilibrium all through the week, but the undertone was poor. One Cuban stock took quite a spurt, but it is more of a railroad than a sugar and it benefits from heavy production. The public utilities were notably weak, and seemed to be seeking levels where the dividend return on them will be more in line with the yield obtainable from high grade industrials. One soured trader remarked, "The more I look them up the less I know about them and the more I wonder why I ever bought them in the first place." The tobaccos are above their lows for the year, but quite a ways from their tops; however, they always have a good following and support is usually encountered right close below ordinary levels. The picture stocks were traded in lightly and inclined to drop off.

It is understood that there is a moderate increase in the rate of steel orders, and the big company continues to operate at about 90 per cent, although most of the rest of the industry is under 80 per cent. The stocks did not act well in the periods of small activity, and prices slid off slowly. The odd lot houses report more selling than buying in these shares.

The cotton market was dull with prices see-sawing. There was no great amount of selling, but bids were also at a minimum. Weather conditions continue favorable.

PRICES HIGHER ON CURB MARKET

New York, May 22.—(AP)—While a firm tone was maintained in the different groups on the curb exchange today, the trading failed to develop any marked movements of outstanding importance. Price changes were slightly higher in the main list but the demand was held within limits around recent trading levels.

Alabama Great Southern preferred attracted attention at the start by a sharp advance of 2 1-2 points. Electric Bond and Share rose about 1 point, selling at 66 1-2 and Brooklyn City Railroad scored a partial recovery of yesterday's late reaction. Baking shares held steady around the improved quotations reached on yesterday's brisk upturn.

Higher priced oil shares were neglected but dealings in this group were enlivened with renewed buying in some issues that have recently found favor, among these being Wilcox and Warner Quintan. Quotations in those issues lifted to new highs for the movement.

United States of Brazil $35,000,000 6 1-2 per cent external sinking fund gold bonds due October 1, 1957, were admitted to unlisted trading privileges on the curb exchange today. Sales were reported about the offering price, at 90 3-8.

Price movements and trading during the week included a falling off in business and declines in prices in the first few days, but in the last half of the week the situation suddenly changed, buying power again being in evidence on a large scale and a number of stocks were in brisk demand at substantial advances. The industrials then developed the greatest strength, the widest movements being in those issues. Chief among them were Gillette Safety Razor, which rose 4 points to 96 and Glen Alden Coal, which moved up 4 points to 165. Tubise made a gain of 10 points in all to 184. Before these upturns occurred, however, a number of generally inactive specialties were down from 5 to nearly 20 points from their previous sales, in some cases, made a long time ago.

Petroleum stocks had a few intervals of activity and strength, and there were irregular movements in the utility issues. Bonds generally showed a steady tone with activity toward the end of the week.

MONTGOMERY RATES FOUND REASONABLE BY COMMERCE BODY

Washington, May 22.—(AP)—The interstate commerce commission has dismissed a complaint by the Montgomery cotton exchange and others against rates charged on cotton from stations south of Montgomery, which is concentrated and compressed at Montgomery and reshipped to Mobile, Pensacola and New Orleans. The commission found the rates not unreasonable and legally applicable.

It found not justified, however, proposed increased rates on cotton, cotton linters and re-gins, from stations south of Montgomery and Selma, Ala., which is concentrated and compressed at those points and reshipped to Mobile, Pensacola and New Orleans. The new schedules, which were under suspension, were ordered cancelled.

Cotton Letters.

HUBBARD BROS. & CO.

New York, May 22.—It is unquestionably true that the weather has been better the last few days than has the general run of weather for the last few weeks, but this improvement in the weather has not been of long enough duration to cause any activity on the selling side, because the trade fully realize that the market is in a position to respond quickly to any further bad weather and they realize also that the lateness of the crop may be a very serious factor later on in the season. As a consequence of the conflicting ideas, the trade are standing off, doing little or nothing, and there is no particular interest shown in the market. Tonight the predictions are for cloudy weather in the southwest again, where they are in sore need of good, clear, hot weather, but the crop is particularly backward in that locality.

FENNER & BEANE.

New Orleans, May 22.—Spot sales according to reports of daily sales are running three times as high as last year and the export movement is picking up. If weather is still good when trading is resumed Monday we are likely to see a lower market.

JNO. F. CLARK CO.

New York, May 22.—Fluctuations continued extremely narrow in the cotton market today as a result of scalping operations by local professional interests. Very little outside business was evident, the bulk of the transactions being traced to floor brokers and local spot firms. Weather conditions continued favorable over practically the entire belt.

LIVINGSTON & CO.

New York, May 22.—The outlook was for partly cloudy weather in North Carolina and Florida with probable showers but generally fair for South Carolina and Georgia while fair and cooler weather was predicted for the southwest, although some map readers thought the drop in temperatures might bring showers in Arkansas and Oklahoma. The most unfavorable feature in the outlook appeared to be the prospect for lower temperatures at a time when warm weather is needed all over the belt. There was a little flurry at the start of small local covering late in the morning which seemed to be led by July shorts and sent the market some 5 to 10 points above Friday's closing figures. Owing to the Whitsuntide holidays, Liverpool was closed and will not be opened until Tuesday.

H. & B. BEER.

New Orleans, May 22.—Private returns indicate planting to be progressing in the south and in the eastern portions of the belt. In other words, crop accounts denote some improvement, except in the dry areas of the Carolinas where moisture is needed. Weekly trade reports were generally rather varied, with full retail trade and more especially crop reports, more favorable than at any previous time this spring, whereas wholesale and jobbing trade orders are of a fill-in character, with future buying conservative as a rule. Washington reported that the number of spindles operated in the United States during April was 37,043,763 or at 98.2 per cent capacity on a single shift basis, vs. 102.1 per cent in March of this year and 100.2 per cent for April of last year.

Stock Letters.

FENNER & BEANE.

New York, May 22.—Initial trading was fairly active with evidence of profit taking particularly in the motor issues which were somewhat lower. Rails held generally firmer than industrials, but not so active as during yesterday's session. During the last trading the market showed a tendency of again advancing and there was particularly good buying going on in United States Steel, which had a steadying effect upon the whole market. The market gave evidence that the short position will require further revision.

JNO. F. CLARK CO.

New York, May 22.—Sentiment was more cheerful in response to the improvement started yesterday in the face of higher money rates. Evidence was noted of institutional buying for investment as well as short covering. Railroad shares were the strong spot during the entire session. For several days there has been evidence of important accumulation of high grade and speculative rails was in progress. It is scarcely necessary to reiterate the reasons why such accumulations would be a perfectly natural thing to expect.

H. & B. BEER.

New York, May 22.—The demand for stocks in the loan crowd was the greatest in years. The natural outcome of the situation was the development of a rally which began after the declaration of the Hudson dividend. We do not think this had anything to do with the rally any more than the passing of the tumor dividend influenced selling today. Indications are that the improvement will extend further but it is likely to be highly specialised. Atlantic Refining looms up as the one oil stock that is not burdened with a large public long interest and is logically the leader of the current improvement. Among industrials, Can. Famous, Biscuit and others of this type where earnings can be expected to be maintained, seem to offer the best opportunities. The railroad group is naturally interesting as here also earnings are very high and give promise of continuing.

LIVINGSTON & CO.

New York, May 22.—The market opened strongly today but ran into profit-taking near the end of the first hour, particularly in the motor shares. Hudson, Mack and General Motors were inclined to sag somewhat but any chance of the selling move spreading was checked by a big burst of strength in the rails under the leadership of Atchison which carried through to the close. Atchison sold close to 139; N. Y. Central 126; C. & O. 125.

Grain Letters.

H. & B. BEER.

Chicago, May 22—Early weakness in wheat was followed by important buying and a substantial rally. Towards the finish, however, realizing found support indifferent and full gains were not maintained. Buenos Aires closed 1c to 1½ higher. New York said there was considerable foreign inquiry more than expected in view of the holiday, but that bids were a little under the market. Cash trading basis was steady. Weather conditions generally favorable with additional showers over spring wheat territory, but our own northwest continued to complain of poor crop prospects. Southwest was credited with sales here and it was reported that 15,000 No. 2 hard had been bought at Kansas City and Omaha to come here.

FIRM UNDERTONE IN BOND MARKET

DAILY BOND SUMMARY.

	Sat.	Fri.
10 first grade rails	92.45	92.35
10 secondary rails	94.72	94.70
10 public utilities	94.56	94.53
10 industrials	100.15	100.13
Combined average	95.47	95.43
Combined month ago	95.10
Combined year ago	93.08
Total bond sales $6,288,000.

New York, May 22.—(AP)—Prompt oversubscription of the $35,000,000 Brazillian government 6 1-2 per cent bond issue overshadowed all other developments in today's bond market. Listed bonds displayed a firm undertone, the combined average being lifted to within 1-100th of the record high established on May 13.

Except for a drop of 1 point in Brazilian 8's of 1941 there were few changes of consequene in the foreign group. Italian sinking fund 7's of 1951 were in brisk demand, having a substantial fractional gain on the day.

Railroad liens rallied in sympathy with the advance in railroad stocks, heavy institutional buying being reported for both classes of securities. Net gains, as a rule, were held to fractions, but they were distributed over a broad list.

Weakness of Wilson company convertible 7 1-2's of 1931, which broke 4 points to a new low at 40 as compared with a high of 71 1-2 earlier in the year, contrasted with the strength of other industrial mortgages.

The absence of any large amount of new high grade industrial and railroad offerings, bond dealers reported there was a growing disposition on the part of investors to take second grade rails and public utilities. Large sums are reported to be available for investment but there is a reluctance on the part of many buyers to take high grade listed issues at current low yields.

MOODY'S REVIEW

New York, May 22.—Moody's weekly review of financial conditions in its current issue says in part:

"Money rates are drifting lower in the face of the daily withdrawals of funds from the call money market. These withdrawals are merely incidental, and the main point is that general trade is releasing working capital which is seeking employment.

"Stock prices are doing what is called backfiring and filling, just as they do at the real bottom of a bear movement. Probably, however, the stock market went down in February and March so much faster than general trade receded, that now the stock market is waiting to be overtaken by the trade recession.

"Bond prices advanced rapidly in April under a sharp investment demand, but have since receded as much as a point or two in some cases. No substantial general decline is anticipated, however, and upon slight reactions between now and autumn good long term bonds even of the medium grades would look definitely attractive."

Gate City Guard Prepares

HISTORIC ORGANIZATION REPRESENTS GEORGIA

For Visit to Philadelphia

Atlanta's "Gate City Guard," famous in war and peace alike since its organization in Atlanta in 1857, has been invited and will participate in the mammoth three-day program of the sesquicentennial in Philadelphia between June 12-16.

Atlanta's historic organization is one of 13 similar outfits composing the military legion of the sesquicentennial, one outfit having been selected from each of the 13 original colonies. The "Gate City Gaurd," therefore, will be not only Atlanta's representative but the state's official representative, it is pointed out.

The guard is composed of representative Atlantans, all of whom have seen actual military service, and is probably one of the best drilled outfits in the United States. In the somber gray uniform which the Confederate soldier, with cap and other articles of wear in the same style and general scheme, Atlanta's representative to the Philadelphia celebration is expected to attract unusual attention.

Plans Are Completed.

Practicall yall details of the trip have been arranged, including special cars to and from Philadelphia, and quarters in the centennial city, it is announced by officers of the guard. More than 30 members will attend and these are going through special drill maneuvers semi-weekly in preparation for the part they will take in the big celebration.

Few organizations in the country have played as conspicuous a part in the history of the nation than Atlanta's "Gate City Guard," the beginning of the local organization dating from 1857. During the war between the states, in the Spanish-American war, Mexican border service and in the world war, the "guard" played brilliant roles. During its long service its ranks naturally have been wiped out on many occasions, but always again formed and kept up at war strength as nearly as possible at times.

Membership is gained only through invitation and usually a member is chosen because of some unusual deed in military duty or special service in some other phase, it is said.

List of Members.

Eugene Oberdorfer, Jr., is commandant, Harry A. Heins, adjutant, and Roy LeCraw, platoon commander. Honorary and active members of the old organization include the following:

Honorary members — Lieutenant Colonel James M. Kimbrough, U. S. A.; Major General Johnson Hagood, U. S. A.; Colonel Thomas H. Darrah, U. S. A.; Captain Charles A. Wright, Lieutenant Edwin F. Booth.

Special honorary members—Major Emanuel Furth (old guard state fencibles), Captain James A. B. Franciscus (old guard state fencibles), Captain George M. Hope (old guard of Atlanta), Major Charles P. Byrd (old guard of Atlanta), Captain Peter F. Clarke (old guard of Atlanta).

Associate members—Captain Basil Stockbridge, Captain Robert B. Ennig, U. S. A.

TWO CHORUS MEN AND TWO SISTERS HELD FOR TRIAL

Chicago, May 22.—(AP)—Arraigned in morals court after they had been arrested in the apartment of two chorus men, Mrs. Thelma Budd Wallace, 19 and Marjorie Budd, 18, daughters of a wealthy eastern hotel owner, were put under $1,000 bond today and their cause continued until May 27. The two chorus men, David Morton and Jack Delys, appearing in a musical comedy here, also were released under similar bonds.

Continuance of the case came after Jack Wallace, husband of the elder sister, and Mrs. A. C. Budd, of Buffalo, their mother, had testified that the chorus men were not in the apartment when it was raided and that both young men were well known to the family.

Police said the raid was made at the instance of the mother and husband, on complaint that the pair had vanished from their Buffalo home.

Bathtub Girl Party May Reach Jury This Week

(Copyright, 1926, for The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

New York, May 22.—At least a dozen witnesses remain to be called by the government in the trial for perjury of Earl Carroll, in which Joyce Hawley, the girl in the bathtub, plays so important a part.

It is not possible to foretell the duration of the trial, but it will last longer than was at first believed, owing to the length of cross-examination of every witness by Herbert C. Smyth, Carroll's counsel. It is thought, however, that it will reach the jury by Thursday.

The defense has not disclosed whether Carroll will be put on the stand. It is believe the defense's answer to the charge that Carroll committed perjury before the grand jury when he swore there was no champagne in a bathtub at his party in the Earl Carroll theater, February 22, will be that it was not champagne but a non-intoxicating beverage well-known, that has a name similar to a brand of champagne, with the exception of one letter.

The defense in cross-examination has sought to show that none of the witnesses thus far heard can tell champagne by tasting it. Also it brought out that whatever the beverage was in the tub, there must have been about 140 gallons, or 560 quarts, which, if champagne, was worth at prevailing prices at least $4,000.

GIGLI TRIUMPHS BEFORE PRESIDENT IN CUBAN CONCERT

Beniamini Gigli was enthusiastically received Saturday night when he sang before President Machado, of Cuba, and a large audience in the Havana national theater, according to a cable message from Joseph Pennino, of Havana, who has made frequent visits to Atlanta in the past to attend grand opera.

The message was: "The great Gigli sang 'Andrea Chenier' last night at the National theater before President Machado, Genaro Papi conducting. Gigli brought his audience to enthusiastic approval, being considered Caruso's successor. 'Tosca' will be sung tomorrow night."

120 Persons Leave Seattle When Indicted By Federal Grand Jury

Seattle, Wash., May 22.—(AP)—The Seattle Times said today that because of a federal grand jury leak, more than 120 persons out of about 200 who were indicted in prohibition cases have fled. The grand jury investigated conspiracies extending into Canada and eastern United States. The newspaper says the indictments call for the arrest of men in the navy, coast guard, state and peace officers.

Names of Seattle policemen indicted, including a captain and a lieutenant, were said to have been known at police headquarters more than a day before the indictments were returned.

CORN LIQUOR CACHE FOUND BY OFFICERS

Carefully hidden beside a fence in Lowe's alley, in the "Peters street district," 29 gallon cans filled with corn liquor were discovered early Saturday night by Patrolmen Henry Donchoo and W. B. Maynard.

The officers reported that no one was seen near the store of contraband and that a thorough search of the neighborhood failed to reveal a suspect.

It is believed that the whisky had been brought in only a few minutes before officers appeared.

GILMER HIGH SCHOOL HEARS REV. JENKINS

Ellijay, Ga., March 22.—(Special.) Rev. J. H. Jenkins, superintendent of the public schools of Vienna, Ga., preached the baccalaureate sermon of the Gilmer County High school here last Sunday to a large audience.

Rev. Jenkins took for his theme "The Purpose in Life." His conclusion was that, in his age of doubt and skepticism, every person's purpose in life should be to go about teaching by his life that God exists.

Health Congress Urges Uniform Healing License

(Copyright, 1926, for The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Atlantic City, N. J., May 22.—A resolution advocating establishment of uniform requirements for license for all "practitioners of the healing art" was adopted here today at the closing sessions of the first annual American Health congress.

By this resolution the various classifications of "practitioners of the healing arts," such as allopaths, homeopaths and chiropractors, would be eliminated, all being required to possess the same educational qualifications.

The congress, in a resolution, also approved the action of Governor Smith, of New York, in signing the Webb-Lummis bill, an act designed to have the above effect.

Another resolution adopted by the congress called on parents to protect their children from diphtheria by the anti-toxin treatment. This resolution declared that by the immunization process diphtheria would be banished among children.

In another resolution the convention called on the federal government to coordinate the governmental public health activities, placing them under one control.

The following officers were elected for the National Health council, which calls the convention to convene: Dr. Lee K. Frankel, New York, chairman; Dr. William F. Snow, New York, vice chairman; Dr. Ellis N. Alder, New York, recording secretary; Dr. Linsly R. Williams, New York, treasurer; Dr. Thomac C. Edwards, New York, acting executive officer, and Elizabeth G. Fox, registered nurse, Washington, D. C., as representative at the capitol.

'CANDY KID' ASKS FOR SECOND TRIAL

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Baltimore, Md., May 22.—Motion for a new trial for Richard Reese ("Candy Kid") Whittemore who was convicted yesterday of murder in the first degree for the killing of Robert H. Holtman, a Maryland penitentiary guard, was filed today in the criminal court here by Edgar Allan Poe, Whittemore's counsel.

The motion will be heard before the supreme bench of Baltimore, which is composed of 11 judges. In the absence of Chief Judge James P. Gorter, of the supreme bench, who is ill, Judge Henry Duffy, the acting chief judge, announced this afternoon that the court would not hear the motion before the last week in June.

Under the Maryland law, sentence cannot be passed upon the defendant until the motion for a new trial has been heard, so that Whittemore will not know until that time whether the punishment for his crime is to be death by hanging or life imprisonment. The jury having returned an unqualified verdict, it is left to the discretion of Judge Eugene O'Dunne who presided at the trial, to decide what the sentence shall be. Judge O'Dunne will sit as a member of the supreme bench, which includes all judges in Baltimore city courts.

Asking a new trial, Mr. Poe charged the verdict was against the evidence, against the weight of the evidence, and there was no evidence to support it. He also asserted that new evidence had been discovered and charged errors in the ruling of the court.

RICH DEPOSITS OF GOLD FOUND NEAR ARCTIC CIRCLE

Stockholm, May 22.—(AP)—New gold deposits, which in centures are classed by Dr. Axel Gavelin, head of Sweden's geological survey as fourth in the entire world, have been discovered by electrical prospecting methods developed by Hans Lundberg and Karl Sundberg, mining engineers, at Boliden, in the province of Vesterbotten, not far south of the Arctic circle.

Altogether 34 ore bodies have been located in this region, all covered by glacial drift, swamps or lakes. One deposit was traced through the ice at the bottom of a lake 30 feet down.

Besides gold these ore bodies have been found to contain copper, silver, arsenic, sulphur and pyrites. The arsenic deposits are declared to be the richest in the world and it is said that the sulphur will make the Swedish pulp mills independent of the imports of this chemical. The borings just completed by the official geological survey indicate that for each mined meter the minerals to be extracted will amount to 350 kilograms of gold, 2.5 tons of silver, from 1,300 to 1,400 tons of copper, and over 2,000 tons of arsenic. How deep the deposits are no one knows as yet, because no borings have struck bottom.

All mining concessions have been awarded by the government to a Swedish company and preparation for the construction of a railroad to the Baltic coast at Skelleftea, about 50 miles away, have been started.

PEACH CROP SET AT 13,680 CARS

Macon, Ga., May 22.—(AP)—The Georgia Peach Growers' Exchange tonight made its official estimate of the peach crop for this season, showing a total of 13,680 cars. W. C. Bewley, general manager of the exchange, in announcing the official estimation of the probable crop, stated that a careful survey had been made of every orchard in the state and he believed that the figures were accurate.

The estimate is slightly above the total shipments of last season, but it is under the estimate of the Georgia Crop Reporting Service of a week ago.

The estimate as to variety and number of cars follows:

Mayflowers, 43; Uneedas, 379; Red Birds, 27; Early Rose, 491; Arp Beaty, 37; Queen of Dixie, 17; miscellaneous early, 22; Carmen, 897; Riley, 3,454; Georgia Belle, 1,916; Elbertas, 6,233; J. H. Hale, 136; miscellaneous late, 28. Total, 13,680 cars.

The survey shows that the shipping period will extend from May 22 to September 1.

Eventual Union Of Presbyterian Bodies Discussed

Pensacola, Fla., May 22.—(AP)—The general assembly of the Presbyterian church in the United States today continued a committee on relations with the Associated Reformed Presbyterian church, renewing briefly discussion of possible eventual union of the two churches.

The matter came before the assembly in a statement from Dr. S. L. Morris, Atlanta, who with the late Dr. R. G. Reed, Columba, S. C., formed a committee in existence 16 years for service in connection with the necessary negotiations and correspondence between the two churches.

Dr. Morris directed attention to the fact that the death of Dr. Reed since the last general assembly had reduced the membership of the committee to one.

Dr. J. J. Hill, Memphis, told the assembly that a prominent clergyman of the Associate Reformed Presbyterian church had told him recently of a disposition in some parts of that church for a union with the Presbyterian church in the United States.

The assembly voted to continue the committee to consist of Dr. Morris and another member to be named.

Two othe Presbyterian churches were greeted by the assembly, Rev. J. Keir Frazer, Ontario, representing the Presbyterian church in Canada, being introduced, and fraternal greetings transmitted in a message to the general assembly of the Cumberland Presbyterian church in session at Columbus, Miss.

Dr. W. S. Campbell, Richmond, Va., southern secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance, addressed the assembly in behalf of that organization, stressing the efforts of the alliance enactment of Sunday laws in the District of Columbia.

Dr. S. H. Chester, Nashville, Tenn., for more than 30 years a foreign missions secretary, told the assembly of the Stockholm Universal Christian conference on life and work.

Reporting to the general assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States here today on his visit as a representative of the church to the Stockholm conference on life and work, Dr. S. H. Chester, of Nashville, Tenn., spoke in passing of the beauty of Nordic girls. Dr. Chester, who has been a foreign mission secretary for more than 30 years, revealed that in spite of his advancing years he is a judge of pulchritude.

Girls of Norway and Sweden, he said, are able to carry over their rare beauty into middle age without the necessity of depending on the cosmetics that American girls find so essential.

Dr. Chester's address, hailed as brilliant by many commissioners, was a feature of the assembly.

Pointing out that every country in the world was represented at the conference, Dr. Chester said that someone at the great gathering suggested that Pentecost was a linguistic sideshow when the problem of language was considered at the conference.

Illustrating in lighter vein the oratory of Stockholm, the speaker recalled an incident in his career, as a young preacher when he had a distinguished doctor of divinity occupying his pulpit. A deaf man in the congregation declared, "I could not hear him, but it looked like he was preaching a monstrous sermon."

Tomorrow the pulpits of a score of Pensacola churches will be occupied by visiting Presbyterians.

A dozen committees worked a portion of the morning and throughout the afternoon preparing reports to be submitted at next week's sessions. Much business was whipped into shape for consideration by the commissioners and the next week will bring action on a number of problems regarded as vitally important to the church.

Irish Poor Want Liquor Same as Rich

Protests Made Against Closing of "Pubs" on Sunday.

Belfast, Ireland, May 21.—The hours for selling liquor to the rich of Ireland should be made the same as those for the poor, in the opinion of J. Gyle, barkeeper to many members of the Irish parliament.

Gyle challenged members of the Irish government Friday over the rule which forces the closing of all Irish "Pubs" on Sunday. He maintained that if the poor were to be denied liquor on Sunday, then members of the government and the rich people of Ireland should be denied it as well.

"I hereby pledge to the people of Ireland that I will drink no liquor on Sundays," said Premier Craig in answer to this.

But other members of the government are remaining discreetly silent despite numerous taunts.

MONDAY'S PROGRAM.

Young Stribling, Atlanta, vs. Ray Neuman, Jersey City, 10 rounds.

Benny Touchstone, Miami, vs. Ernie Perrin, New Orleans, 10 rounds.

"Farmer" Joe Cooper, Terre Haute, Ind., vs. Larry Avera, Atlanta, 10 rounds.

"Honey Boy" Snipes, Macon, vs. Benny Regan, Atlanta, 8 rounds.

Eight exponents of the knuckle whirling industry, trained to the proverbial minute, have arrived in Atlanta for the greatest boxing card seen here in many moons. They will display their skill at the auditorium Monday night on a program scheduled for 38 rounds, under auspices of the Gate City A. C.

Due to the heavy sale of tickets, Matchmaker Watson announces that the fans can purchase ducats Sunday at Chess' Place. Many choice seats are still left, but Watson requests the fans to avoid a congestion at the auditorium Monday night by purchasing tickets in advance.

Young Stribling, fresh from a decisive victory at Tex Rickard's new Madison Square Garden over the sensational Johnny Risko, of Cleveland, will feature the bill in a 10-round decision match against Ray Neuman, of Jersey City. Stribling will make his first appearance in an Atlanta ring in over 18 months, and it will be his final ring appearance previous to meeting Paul Berlenbach for the world's light-heavyweight title at Yankee stadium June 10.

Neuman is doped to extend the youthful Georgian to the limit. He has met some of the toughest boys in the business, including Berlenbach and Gene Tunney, and never yet has been knocked kicking.

Extended Berlenbach.

Neuman fought ten torrid rounds at Philadelphia with the Greenwich Village lad, receiving the verdict. Newspaper accounts say that Neuman was the strongest at the finish and that in a 15-round battle Tunney would have fallen a victim to the powerful body attack that kept the marine on the defensive in the closing rounds of the fray.

Neuman's sensational 12-round encounter with Champion Paul Berlenbach at Hartford, Conn., six weeks ago is the talk of the east. Neuman waged one of the most vicious fights against Berlenbach that Paul ever appeared in. Ray staggered the light-heavyweight champion on several occasions and the notorious Punching Paul was a happy champion when his imported referee hoisted his hand at the end of the struggle.

Neuman has also beaten Jack DeMave, Jim Maloney, Young Marullo, Lee Anderson, who stopped Tiger Flowers; Young Bob Fitzsimmons, Wolf Larsen and a host of other contenders in the east.

Stribling can offer no excuses in the event the invader wins over the Georgia Peach. He has finished his hard training grind in Dempsey's camp at the Cave Indian Lodge, near Hendersonville, N. C., and is in the best of shape for the mill.

Watson calls his card a Tex Rickard attraction, as he has lined up three other bouts that would be main attractions in themselves.

Touchstone Is Comer.

Two light-heavyweights will precede the Stribling-Neuman clash. "Pa" Stribling sends Benny Touchstone, light-heavyweight champion of Florida, to the test of his career when he engages Ernie Perrin, of New Orleans, in a 10-rounder to a decision.

Touchstone made Florida a very uncomfortable place for light-heavyweight fighters during the past winter. His last two starts found him taking the measure of Dan O'Dowd and Wild Bill Reed, two veterans.

Perrin comes from a town that has produced many good fighters. New Orleans has turned out stars like Pete Herman, Joe Mandot, Eddie Coulon, Al Pettingill, Young Marullo, Happy Littleton, and others. Harold Buckley, Perrin's manager, says that the lad from the Crescent City will add Touchstone to his list of victims.

In another 10-round attraction "Farmer" Joe Cooper will meet Larry Avera, of Atlanta. Cooper will go on record as being the highest paid boxer to ever appear in a bout other than the main attraction in Georgia.

Cooper was matched with Mickey Walker for a decision go at Indianapolis July 5. Latzo beat the Indiana youth to the title by lacing Walker a few nights ago. Johnny Cox, who handles Cooper's affairs, has offered

The game was played just before the contest between the Atlanta Crackers and Nashville with "Mule" Haas, Cracker outfielder, umpiring.

In the other games in the Sandlot loop, North Side Crackers beat the Little Bulldogs in a close game, 7 to 6, after a hard battle. Marthar Brown Eagles slipped a 7-to-3 beating to the Trinity Bearcats and the English Avenue Aces took the Chestnut street clan in camp with a 16-to-15 score.

Yale Track Men Down Harvard

Cambridge, Mass., May 22.—By only one-third of a point, Yale defeated Harvard here Saturday in the 33rd annual varsity track meet.

Yale scored 67 2-3 points and Harvard 67 1-3 points in the track classic, which was marked by the breaking of three dual meet records and the tying of a fourth.

The two-mile record of 9:34 was broken by Tibbetts, of Harvard, who, running the last race of his college career, covered the distance in 9:31 3-5.

Going over the bar at 13 feet, Carr, of Yale, shattered the record, which had been 12 feet, 6¼ inches.

A new javelin record, 187 feet, 11¼ inches, was established by Davison, of Yale. The previous record was 181 feet, 11 3-8 inches.

Miller, of Harvard, equalled the 100-yard dash record of 9 4-5.

KICKER TOURNEY AT PIEDMONT LINKS TODAY

Another kicker handicap golf tournament on the same order of the one held last Sunday will be held at Piedmont today with all amateurs of the city eligible for play.

This is the second staged by Wallace Lindquist, professional. The first one met with great success and it is expected that this one will draw an even greater field. A fee of 75 cents will be charged for entry.

Jack to Train In Colorado

Colorado Springs, Colo., May 22.—(AP)—Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight boxing champion, will do part of his training here for his title bout next fall with an opponent yet to be named.

The champion, accompanied by his wife, will come here July 1 to establish a training camp for at least 30 days, Spencer Penrose, Colorado Springs capitalist, was advised tonight in a telegram from Gene Normile, Dempsey's manager. Penrose extended the invitation to the champion last week while in Louisville, Ky., for the derby.

DEMPSEY BOOKED TO BOX BURKE.

Cleveland, May 22.—(AP)—Jack Dempsey, heavyweight champion, has been signed to box a six-round exhibition with Marty Burke, formerly New Orleans heavyweight, who recently gave Young Marullo a one-side beating. The bout will be at Taylor Bowl May 31.

U. S. NET ACES INVADE PARIS FOR TOURNEY

BY HENRY WALES.

(Copyright, 1926, by The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Paris, May 22.—Vince Richards and Howard Kinsey invaded Paris today and wore off a bad case of sea-legs in preparation for the first games of their European tennis campaign, the Franco-American tournament on May 28, 30 and 31 and June 1, preceding the French hard court championships.

The two racquet aces were given a great welcome on the courts by Helen Wills, Mary Browne, Elizabeth Ryan, Marion Zinderston Jessup and Eleanor Goss, who are going to be their teammates.

The biggest match is scheduled for Sunday between Richards and LaCoste, who is ranking member of the French team, since Borotra still is suffering from a strained tendon, though he may be able to play in the doubles.

There is a chance of Suzanne Lenglen entering the doubles, but she will not give Helen a chance to come back until after the French championships the following week.

The trouble between the French and American associations is over and the number of games allotted to the men and women is settled, with three women's and four men's singles; two mixed doubles, and one ladies' and one men's doubles.

Didi Vlasto carries the burden of the French defense against the overwhelming invasion of American women stars. Contastavos and Didi's sister comprise the rest of the team. The arrangements for the matches are not yet settled, though it is decided that Miss Wills and Miss Ryan will be first and second on the American.

83 IN FIELD FOR AMERICAN DERBY CLASSIC

Chicago, May 22.—(AP)—Eighty 3-year-olds, including Bubbling Over, winner of the Kentucky derby, Carlaris, Bagenbaggage and Pompey, were announced today by the Illinois Jockey club as entrants for the eighteenth running of the $100,000 American derby over the Washington park race course here July 10.

Revived after 22 years, the race will bring together the aristocrats of the Churchill Downs classic and three-score more thoroughbreds whose stables were unable to condition them for the Louisville event.

Ten of the 1926 Kentucky derby starters are entered for the Washington park race—all but Rockman, Rhinock and Canter. Mrs. Payne Whitney has nominated Navigator, Lancaster and Nurmi and Harry Payne Whitney has entered Macawa, Color Sergeant, Acrostic, Blondin, Croyden and Rapture. Clifford A. Cochrane, winner of the 1925 Kentucky derby with Flying Ebony, will send Flat Iron to the barrier, and Willis Sharpe Kilmer, whose Exterminator wore the bluegrass wreath in 1923, has named Alladin.

Among the stables unrepresented in the Kentucky derby this year but with entrants for the American derby are Chula Vista of W. T. Anderson; Rancocas of Harry Sinclair and Sam T. Hildreth; Glenn Riddle farm of Samuel D. Riddle; Greentree stables of Mrs. Whitney, and LaBrae of Payne and West.

G. Frank Croissant's Roycrofter, second to Carlaris in the Tia Juana derby and the Coffroth handicap, but unplaced in the Kentucky derby, is a nominee.

Once the greatest race event in the nation, the American derby will be run this year for the first time since 1904, when it was held without betting and then discontinued because of official intervention. It will be run this year over the new course of the Washington Park club, some 15 miles south of the old site, adjacent to the park from which it got its name.

Inaugurated 40 years ago by a club made up of 500 turf followers of Chicago, the American derby was in its prime the greatest race classic in the country. In 1893, the "world fair year," when Boundless won, the purse of $50,000 was the biggest ever given on a race.

In the heyday of the race, a familiar figure in the judges' stand was General Phil Sheridan, always an ardent follower of horse flesh.

HORNSBY DAY IS CELEBRATED AT ST. LOUIS

St. Louis, Mo., May 22.—(AP)—Rogers Hornsby, manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, and leading batsman of the National league for six consecutive years, was formally honored this afternoon at Sportsman's Park as the most valuable player to his team in the league.

A committee of baseball writers from the eight cities comprising the league voted, after the 1925 season, that Hornsby deserved the medal and $1,000 prize as the most valuable player and today was set aside as Hornsby Day. Attendance was 14,000.

The ceremonies started with a parade to the park in which civic clubs, drum corps, and boy scout troops participated, led by a band.

John Heydler, president of the Nation league; Kenesaw Mountain Landis, commissioner of baseball; Sam Breadon, president of the Cardinals, and James M. Gould, president of the Baseball Writers' association, were in the line of march.

After marching about the field, the officials and players stood at attention while the flag was unfurled to the tune of the national anthem.

Then the players gathered at home plate and Gould presented the medal and Heydler the gold to Hornsby. Commissioner Landis added a little humor to the occasion by taking the gold from Hornsby and starting away with it, but he soon turned back and returned the gold. There were cheers for Hornsby and then the field was cleared for the ball game with the Phillies.

Durant Trains For Auto Race

Havana, Cuba, May 22.—Sailing into this port on the waves of a graceful gale, a 90-foot auxiliary schooner came to anchor and a sunbronzed young man with the salty air of an ancient mariner stepped ashore.

He was Cliff Durant, son of the multimillionaire automobile magnate, W. C. Durant, and a wealthy business man in his own right.

Durant, who came to fame as an automobile racing driver, but who has not been behind a steering wheel for nearly two years, is now in training for the 500-mile race to be held at the Indianapolis motor speedway, May 31.

"I have been sailing 49 days," Durant said, "and I plan to remain aboard the boat until I go to Indianapolis, join my mechanics and begin final preparations for the race."

A personal physician, a trainer, a companion and a crew of twelve are aboard Durant's yacht. Every day he goes through a complete routine of exercises designed to place him in the most perfect physical condition for the long Indianapolis drive.

"I'm going to leave nothing undone to win the 500-mile race this year," he declared, "and I am going to have my body, as well as my car, ready at the start of the race to go through the entire grind. My car, I am positive, will be properly prepared. Engineers and mechanics have been working on it for months. In the last two races relief drivers have been necessary on the winning car. If my car goes through the coming race no relief driver will be necessary, and I hope to be able to nod an assent to the starter's checkered flag of victory as well as to the red starting flag."

Gilbert and Niehoff Lead Local Tossers In Hitting Attack

BY KENNETH SAPP.

Behind the sterling pitching of Howard Merritt, recently acquired southpaw, who Saturday went the full distance for the first time since joining Atlanta, the Crackers extended their winning streak to two games—quite a streak for the Crackers these days—at the expense of the Nashville Vols. The final count was 5 to 2, and the hurling of Merritt, combined with three innings of ineffective twirling by Jake Killeen, who graduated from the Sally league this spring, tells the story in detail.

Merritt held Jimmy Hamilton's aggregation to seven scattered bingles, and kept getting stronger as the game progressed. In fact, nary a hostile spike was planted safely on first base during the last four stanzas.

Apparently having recovered their equilibrium after having been battered from pillar to post all week, the Niehoffians rose up and smote the Vols Friday. They played the same kind of baseball Saturday, hitting when they needed to, fielding always well and at times sensationally, and playing smart, heads-up ball at all stages.

Boss Still Hitting.

Bert Niehoff continued the padding of his batting average, started Friday, and on Saturday poled out a pair of clean singles and drew two walks in four tries. He was ably aided and abetted by Johnny Brock, who bagged a couple of bingles in three times at bat.

The invaders bristled up right at the start of things, and affairs looked none too auspicious for Brother Merritt. Neitzke started the first inning trouble by smacking a clean single to right. Partridge forced him, but Redfern came through with a whistling single to center, and McLarry's infield hit loaded the bassocks. The Crackers elected to play for a double killing, and on Sikes' grounder McLarry was forced at second, but the relay to first was late, and Partridge counted. Bates skied out to relieve a distressful situation.

The home guards promptly got that run back in their half, however. With one down, Niehoff drew a free ticket, scampered to third on Good's single, and scored when, in attempting to break up a double steal, Mackey pegged poorly to second. Good reached the keystone on the play, but died there when Haas and Smith expired without much fuss.

Count Three in Third.

Atlanta's big guns were trained on Killeen in the third, and, with a few errors of commission on the part of the Vols, did plenty of damage. Niehaus scratched out his second hit of the series—a single—to start the ball rolling. Gilbert smashed a hit to center, and Brock followed with a wallop between third and short that scored Niehaus. Merritt advanced both Gilbert and Brock with a pretty sacrifice, and Gilbert counted a moment later when Neitzke and Sikes both went after Murphy's drive, and then let it fall between them for a double, Brock taking third. Niehoff walked, and Wilbur Good came through with a long fly to Ruble that let Brock register.

In the third, Smith crashed a double to the left-field bleachers, went to third while Patridge was throwing out Niehaus, and scored on Gilbert's sacrifice fly.

The Vols got rambunctious in the fourth and filled the bases on an error, single and hit batsman, but Alton, sent in to bat for Killeen, banged into a double play that broke down Jimmy Hamilton's playhouse.

Morris Going Strong.

In the fifth, however, Nashville broke through for the last counter of the matinee. Neitzke picked out one to his liking and parked it on the center-field bank for a triple, crossing the plate when Niehaus mussed up Partridge's easy roller. McLarry singled, but Merritt settled to his task and not another Vol hitter ever saw first base.

Eddie Morris, who took up the hurling task where Killeen left off, also was pitching some baseball, and permitted only three hits in the five innings he worked, never letting the Crackers get near the plate.

Atlanta had runners on the paths in every minute that Morris worked, however. In the fourth, Niehoff singled, but died on first. Smith drew a walk in the fifth, but was immediately picked off the sack. Niehoff led off the seventh with his second single, only to see the next three batters fall before Morris' shoots. Undiscouraged, Gilbert poked out a double in the eighth, but Morris had enough reserve for the pinch.

The Cracker hits were well distributed, Niehoff and Gilbert being the only ones to get more than one. Neitzke, with a single and a triple, and McLarry, with two singles, led the Nashville assault.

At Nashville Today.

Smith and Niehaus turned in the fielding features—both coming in the seventh inning. Smith backed up against the stands to take in Neitzke's drive after a long run, and on the next pitch Partridge slammed one toward right, only to have Niehaus make a beautiful one-handed stab to pull it down.

The teams adjourn to Nashville for

YANKEES LEAD BOTH LEAGUES IN STICK WORK

Chicago, May 22.—(AP)—Any reducing on the part of George Herman Ruth during spring training is not reflected in the shadow the Babe again is casting wherever three strikes are an out and a ball drive over the fence or into the bleachers on the other side of the field is good for four bases.

After all, smart hitting brings the fans to their feet more often than does smart fielding, and the Yankee slugger is the outstanding batsman among the several major leaguers currently chasing pennants.

Ruth's remarkable home run hitting is part of a batting performance seldom seen. When he hit his thirteenth and fourteenth circuit drives in last Wednesday's game he jumped 'way ahead of his homer slugging in 1921 when the record of 59 was made. The thirteenth put him on a par with his total on May 25 in 1921.

Additionally, the Babe ranks second in the American individual batting with a percentage of .393, and so far has averaged considerably more than two bases per hit, with a total of 98 bases on 44 bingles, which is pretty efficient. In Wednesday's game he crossed the plate with his fourteenth run, and that total in 31 games.

Leading Leagues.

The Yankees generally are showing both leagues how to hit, leading the American team averages with .324. Chicago has clung to a .294 percentage to stay in second place and Washington continues third with a rating of .291. The Chicago Cubs forged ahead to lead the National teams with hitting of .296 variety, the Reds having slipped into second place with .286. The Giants finished the first five weeks with an average of .281.

Joe Dugan leads the individual hitting in the majors with an average of .414, with his teammates, Ruth and Meusel, ranking just below in the junior league. Southworth, of the Giants, tumbled from his wide margin lead over everybody to lead the National batsmen with .406. Otherwise, a number of new faces show among the leading hitters in both leagues, although the veterans hold their own. Rogers Hornsby, slugging playing manager of the Cardinals, whom St. Louis honors today, is hitting .355 in the National, slightly below the batting of the veteran Cobb with his .388 to date.

Cuyler Leads Stealers.

Cuyler of the Pirates continues to out-steal them, his ten pilfered sacks being two above the total acquired by Muesel in Yankee games.

Bottomley of the Cardinals leads the consolation race for home runs with seven, closely pressed by several players in each league who have collected four and five apiece.

The White Sox have made the best fielding record in either league so far this year, the St. Louis Browns looking worse than any other team, on paper, but in spite of that having the lead in one-two putouts with a total of 42 doubles.

Donohue of the Reds rates the most effective pitcher in the National league with Keen and Rhem, both Cardinal flingers, close behind, among the hurlers who labor often. Pennock, Hoyt and Shocker, of the Yankees, and Quinn, of the Athletics, closely followed by Walter Johnson, lead among American moundsmen. Both Donohue and Pennock have so far won six and lost one game.

Leading American hitters in 15 or more games: Dugan, New York, .414; Ruth, New York, .393; Meusel, New York, .392; Bennett, St. Louis, .390; Cobb, Detroit, .388; McNeely, Washington, .385; Goslin, Washington, .376; Simmons, Athletics, .355; Burns, Cleveland, .352; Neun, Detroit, .350.

:: 38-YEAR-OLD RUNNER MYSTIFIES DOCTORS ::

Boston, Mayy 22.—(AP)—The secret of the speed and endurance of Clarence Demar, marathon champion, is being sought by four doctors at the Massachusetts general hospital. Demar, 38-year-old Melrose printer, won the Boston marathon four times in seven starts and this year won the national marathon championship at Baltimore.

He is the subject of daily scientific experiments at the hospital. A clip is placed on his nose to close it and his mouth is covered with a rubber shield connected with a breathing apparatus. Then he rides a stationary bicycle in the laboratory for half an hour. His heart and blood reactions are carefully measured as he exercises.

In order to obtain a basis for comparison, experiments have already been conducted with other men. It is expected that the tests may show the advantages of athletic training.

KING, PRINCESS AND CAPTAIN WIN AT CHURCHILL DOWNS

:: NAGS WITH ROYAL NAMES LEAD FIELD ::

Louisville, May 22.—(AP)—A king, a princess and a captain fought a battle of the turf at Churchill Downs this afternoon and the monarch, King Nadi, won the prize, the $10,000 added Grainger Memorial handicap. Princess Doreen finished second and Captain Hal third. The time for the mile and a quarter was 2:04 3-5.

Captain Hal took command of the field at the rise of the barrier and with King Nadi furnishing the opposition, raced about a length ahead for three-quarters of a mile. King Nadi, given a clever rider and under stout restraint for the first three-quarters, demoted the captain on the back turn and at the turn into the stretch drive the princess moved forward to second place. In this position they came down the home stretch and King Nadi won by a length and a half. It was his second successive victory in the Grainger, the King James-Nadinette colt having won it as a three-year-old in 1925.

Princess Doreen was five lengths ahead of Captain Hal. Chittagong, Deeming, Lavsen and Moonraker also ran.

The race was worth $11,350 net to J. J. Troxler, owner of the colt. Princess Doreen won $1,500. Captain Hal, $800 and Chittagong saved his stake of $225.

Corbett Marvelous Boxer Without Punch---Edgren

Famous Pugilist Wore Victims Down Then Landed K. O.

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

Old-timers, talking about cleverness in the ring, often talk about the cleverness of Jim Corbett.

"The cleverest big man that ever lived," they say, and cut off all argument.

Jim Corbett, who beat John L. Sullivan when Sullivan was a physical wreck, fat and old and dissipated, made a reputation by that one fight—a reputation that lasts today. Sullivan, who was a bellowing, roaring terror in his younger fighting days, had such a reputation that it was impossible to believe he could be beaten. So Corbett's feat paralyzed the world with astonishment. Corbett's style of boxing became all the fashion and remained the fashion until Fitzsimmons, who didn't dance and duck and tap, knocked Corbett out.

Having seen Corbett in action in some of his big fights, and having spent five weeks boxing with him while he was training for the title fight with Fitzsimmons at Carson, Nev., March 17, 1897, perhaps I can speak of Corbett's skill from first hand knowledge.

Marvelous Boxer.

Jim Corbett certainly was a marvelous boxer. I've never seen any other just like him. Some have qualities he lacked, some lack qualities he had. Jim Corbett was pastmaster of footwork. There was no other boxer in his day who could judge distance so perfectly and make his twinkling legs carry him in and out and around danger without letting a blow graze him. He was the hardest man in the world to hit. In fact, he made it a point not to be hit even in training bouts, and was inclined to be very much annoyed if a sparring partner managed to land on him. The idea that he could be hit at all, by anybody, was almost an insult to Corbett.

I think I landed one solid punch on Corbett in five weeks, and that was through sheer awkwardness. Jim was feinting with his left. He had a trick of drawing his left arm back, nearly straight, and then dropping his glove neatly on your chin. Drawing that left back and feinting quickly invariably brought one's guard up. At any rate, it brought mine up, and each time Corbett stepped in and rammed into my body. After a few of these blows he stepped back and asked: "Does that distress you?"

"Not at all," I said. "Go on."

Outguessing Corbett.

At the moment I didn't realize that Corbett was trying out a punch he hoped to worry Fitzsimmons with, and that he thought it was a hard punch. It was a sharp, jarring punch, but I weighed 212 stripped, was in fine athletic condition, and didn't feel it. Corbett seemed a little exasperated. He wasn't half as much annoyed as I was. It seemed to me I was extremely stupid to let him feint me into the same opening time and again and always hit me with the same blow, and he was doing it much too often to please me.

I made up my mind to hit with him the next time he started that right—to try to beat him to the punch. But somehow I couldn't do it. Always he feinted, made me bring my guard up in an instinctive movement, hooked his right into the soft spot just below the edge of my ribs on the left side and slipped away before I could move. At last in sheer desperation I jumped forward just as Corbett feinted, swung my left at his head and hit him solidly on the chin. Homer Davenport, the cartoonist, standing among the spectators, wrote of that punch that "the sweat from Jim's pompadour sprinkled the whole crowd."

Accident Punch.

I'll say it was a good punch, but it was an accident. Probably I shut my eyes, and probably the only reason I hit Corbett at all was that my extreme awkwardness made him careless. Certainly I never hit him again, in a couple of weeks more boxing. And from that day on Corbett never hit me anywhere but on the mouth. He cut me to pieces with light, swift jabs and was always floating away, beyond reach, by the time I thought of countering. I was boxing with him for fun, I had plenty of it.

In the next two or three years I spent months with Bob Fitzsimmons, and often boxed with Gus Ruhlin, Tom Sharkey, Frank Erne and other fighters for the fun of it and to learn something about boxing so that I could write and draw "fight pictures" with some knowledge of my subject. I learned quite a bit about boxing and could get along fairly well with the other fellows. I boxed with Jim Corbett once afterward, in old Wood's gymnasium in New York when I thought I knew something and hit him with a handful of birdshot. He was always jabbing and floating away out of range. Knowing more about boxing, then, I could appreciate Corbett's "cleverness." He could outclass the world at boxing. Where he fell down was against a wily fighter with a savage punch, like Fitzsimmons, or a wildly rushing erratic swinger like Tom Sharkey, or against a fellow like Jim Jeffries, who was too rugged to feel Corbett's jabs, a hard straight hitter, and too fast of foot and persistent to be eluded all the time.

Wore Sullivan Out.

If all boxers in Corbett's time had adopted his style of boxing, jabbing and jumping away, he could have lasted as champion until he grew long whiskers. Anybody who tried to outbox Corbett soon outspeed him was in a tough spot. He boxed over sixty rounds with Peter Jackson and was still dancing around Peter when the spectators were asleep on the chairs or had gone home to breakfast, and the referee stopped it and called it "no contest," and then called it a "draw." He outboxed and beat Joe Choynski, who was clever, a hard hitter and much lighter than Corbett.

In those days fights were usually to a finish. Some fights went over a hundred rounds. The style of fighting was entirely different from that today. Fighters were content to box a dozen rounds, jabbing and feinting and waiting for good openings before they really got down to work. Corbett was a kingpin at this style. Even when he fought Sullivan, knowing because he'd boxed an exhibition with John L. in Frisco that John couldn't lay a glove on him in a week, he danced and jabbed and smiled at the hoots of the crowd while Sullivan dropped his hands and begged him to "stand and fight like a man." Corbett knew what he was doing. He kept Sullivan moving until the fat old champion was too leg weary to take another step, too tired to lift his arms and too winded to hit or to take another blow. And then Corbett "mixed" for the first time and quickly finished his man.

In the long distance, take-your-time sort of fighting in the old finish-fight days, Corbett was a wonder, because in his style of fighting he could jab and run and keep going longer than the other fellow—keep going as long as he was unhurt.

Corbett dazzled Jeffries through 22 rounds, big Jeff having a foolish notion that he could outbox Corbett and that he was doing it. Then Brady told Jeffries he would lose the championship unless he knocked Corbett out and Jeff ran at Corbett, cornered him and finished him with two terrible blows. In their last fight Corbett changed his boxing style and after practicing heavy hitting on a sand bag for months tried to slug with Jeffries, and that fight was a joke. Jeffries could have finished him in any round from the first round on and held back the knockout to the tenth just to annoy Bob Fitzsimmons, who was in Jeff's corner and wildly anxious to see his old enemy come to a quick finish.

Yes, Corbett was a master at boxing. The only reason he wasn't to be classed with fighters like Fitzsimmons, Jeffries and Dempsey was that he had no punch to compare with theirs. He was no battle ax warrior. His weapon was the rapier—the swift, tantalizing jab.

In these days of six, eight, ten and fifteen-round fights Corbett could win a stack of decisions, but he wouldn't be listed as a champion. The popular fighter today is the Benny Leonard, who can box or slug and who wins with a knockout in a few rounds. Dempsey is the ideal fighter—when he fights. He has the terrific spectacular punch that wins in a hurry. I doubt that a Corbett would go very far with a Dempsey, although he'd fool Dempsey for a while. Dempsey would have the speed to get within range sometime, and that would be enough. Gene Tunney would go well with Corbett and might force the fighting and put over a knockout, but chances are Corbett would make Tunney box, and outpoint him. He wouldn't make Dempsey box. Dempsey doesn't know how. Dempsey is a crafty fighter, like Fitzsimmons and Ketchel—not a boxer. The rest of the present day heavies would probably be easy picking for Corbett. Yet his long range, jab and run-around Marathon style couldn't be popular now as it was a quarter century ago. Short fights have made the spectators appreciate nothing but hard hitting and quick action.

Corbett was as game as anyone. He had a tremendous pride in his boxing. He was proud of the skill that sent him through many fights practically untouched. He never got a mark in the ring. But it would be jarring to Jim Corbett, if he could come back today in his old best form, to hear the galleries hooting and stamping and the ringside jeering and yelling "Why don't you fight?" It would probably sting Corbett into standing close and trading blows—and that would be his finish. At any rate, it would be his finish if he were fighting Dempsey.

What a whale John L. Sullivan would be today, age 22 or 23 and in his prime willing to fight anybody on a barge or in the woods or in the New Garden, never asking how much money there was in it and trying for a knockout with every punch he let go. John was the original fighting type and modern boxing favors the caveman every time.

New Ball League Will Open Monday

Anderson, S. C., May 22.—(AP)—Four teams of the Georgia-Carolina Independent league, successor to the old Carolina Independent league which operated continuously since 1922, will flash away Monday afternoon. Major S. M. Martin, of Clemson college, is president of the new four-club circuit.

Anderson's Electricians will meet Seneca's Chieftains at Memorial field, this city, while Greenwood will entertain Toccoa, Ga., at the Emerald park for the opening contests. The first day's schedule will be repeated Tuesday, while the scenes will be reversed on Thursday and Friday. Through agreement, the teams will play but four games weekly.

While the pace of the league this year will not be up to that of last season, it is indicated that a fast brand of independent ball will be offered the fans of this section. All of the clubs have had the benefit of two weeks of daily practice and report themselves as ready for the start next week. The names on the four rosters include a number of old Carolina league stars, as well as Clemson college men.

Seneca is expected to make a strong bid on their initial entry into the league. For two weeks Manager Miller has had more than a score of men at work. The same holds true of the Anderson squad, headed by Dopey Major, old Clemson star, and former Carolina leaguer, who is playing third base. Greenwood and Toccoa are also reported to face the start with confidence.

WALLIS NAMED HEAD OF TIGER DIAMOND TEAM

Auburn, Ala., May 22.—(Special.) Joe Dallis, Talladega, Ala., was elected to captain the 1927 Auburn Tiger baseball team, at the annual election held by the letter men of the baseball team immediately following the annual "A" club banquet held at the Auburn Inn, Monday night. Pat Moulton, pitcher, from Mobile, Ala., was elected alternate captain.

Wallis is a member of the junior class in the academic college and besides his athletic ability holds one of the best collegiate records of his class and possibly of the student body. The captain-elect is first baseman on the Tiger varsity where he has made an enviable record. During the 1925 season he played at first base, but at the beginning of the season he was shifted by Coach Morey to right field, where his playing was equally effective. Later in the season, when F. James absented himself to try his hand in the motion picture world, the Talladega lad received instructions to come in to his old place at the initial stop, where he again gave a good account of himself in the infield.

Wallis has proved himself very reliable in hitting when hits are badly needed and many times this season he has taken the initiative in hitting sprees that has proven valuable to the Orange and Blue. He has a hitting record of the season well above the .300 mark.

Ernest P. Garrett, of Collinsville, and Hadden Smith, of Livingston, were elected by the "A" club as assistant football managers for the '26 grid season.

The "A" club banquet program was featured by an address by Dr. A. A. Murphree, president of the University of Florida. Dr. Murphree is a native Alabaman and was greeted by the assembled athletes with hearty applause. He spoke briefly of the athletic training of college men and the part athletics should play in college scheme.

The Floridian president stressed the importance of the athletic teams making up the athletic system and emphasized in no uncertain terms the value of clean hard fighting athletic teams in all lines of college sports. Other pointed addresses were made by Will Patterson, Montgomery; Coach John Pitts, "Shorty" Wrenn, former football stars; Professor Roy Dimmitt, director of student activities; "Bobby" Locke, former star pole vaulter; Wilbur Hutsell, track coach; "Buck" Spinks, president of the "A" club, and other guests and members of the club.

Bear Athletes Beat Princeton

Princeton, N. J., May 22.—(AP)—The Golden Bears of California warmed up for the intercollegiates at Cambridge next week by defeating Princeton in a dual track and field meet here today, 70 to 56. The coast athletes romped away with ten first places in the 14 events and firmly established themselves as potential victors at Soldiers' field.

Captain Phil Barber, California's crack sprinter, shared the honors of the afternoon with his teammate, Elmer Gerken, and Alfred Lawrence. Princeton's crack hurdler. Each of the three turned in two winning performances, Barber copping first in his specialties, the 100 and 220-yard dashes, Gerken showing the way in the shot put and discus throw while Lawrence led the field in the two hurdle events.

GEORGIA TEAM BEGINS TRIP INTO NORTH

BY MARCUS BRYANT.

Athens, Ga., May 22.—Georgia's baseball team left Athens late today for a road trip which comprises six games. Games will be played with Notre Dame, Ohio State and Kentucky on the invasion into foreign territory and ends the 1926 season.

Thirteen players made the trip, including Captain Nolan Richardson, Johnson, Keating, Kain, Waller, Tully, Nash, Satlof, Middlebrooks, Shiver, Moore, Arenowitch and Sherlock.

Manager Fred Kent and Charles E. Martin accompanied the team. Due to the tragic death today of little Joe Downs, Coach William P. White did not make the trip, but will join the team Tuesday at Columbus, Ohio. Captain Nolan Richardson will be in charge of the team until Coach White joins the squad. Monday and Tuesday the Notre Dame Irishmen are played at South Bend and Wednesday and Thursday the Red and Blackers journey to Columbus, Ohio, for a brace of engagements with Ohio State. The road trip will close with games Friday and Saturday of next week with the Kentucky Wildcats. The Kentucky games are only conference games scheduled for the invasion. Both Notre Dame and Ohio State have appeared here this season, the Bulldogs sweeping both the Ohio State games by scores of 8-2, and 9-1. The Notre Dame series was split, the Bulldogs winning the first, 5-2 and dropping the final game, 7-6. The season has been highly successful, only one series being lost, this to the Auburn Tigers. Kain, Waller and Tulley were the pitching aces making the trip and will alternate in games, it is expected.

Black Crackers To Meet Albany

Albany Giants, leaders of the Colored Southern league, will be the guests of the Black Crackers Monday afternoon when they clash in the first game of a three-game series.

To add more strength to their club, they have purchased three new players who will start in soon, two of them being pitchers and one an outfielder.

Tickets for the game may be purchased at either 41 West Mitchell or Milton & Yost at the corner of Auburn and Butler streets. The 41 West Mitchell street office is for the white people and the Auburn avenue office for the colored.

Boston, May 22.—A bunch of bases on balls off Connally in the seventh inning helped the Red Sox to conquer Chicago today to the tune of 18 to 14. With the bases full Connally let enough men go to first to force in three runs for Boston. Rigney had a perfect day at bat. Hunnefield, of Chicago, was put out of the game in the seventh for excessive protesting.

HURDLE MARK DUE TO STAND, SAYS EXPERT

Hanover, N. H., May 22.—When he sped over the 120-yard high hurdles in the world's, as well as intercollegiate record time of 14 2-5 seconds at Philadelphia in 1920, Earl J. Thomson of Dartmouth set a mark which is not likely to be equalled nor surpassed "for a long time," in the opinion of Harry L. Hillman, Dartmouth track and field coach.

"It will take an athlete of Thomson's type to make such a performance and the hurdler will have to have similar conditions to make it possible for the chance to equal this record," said Hillsman, in commenting on the intercollegiate championships at the Harvard stadium, May 28 and 29.

"The day Thomson made his record he was in his best physical condition; he had an exceptionally good bunch of hurdlers to force him; and the day was ideal for record-breaking performances.

"In 49 meets the high hurdles have been won by athletes from 14 colleges. Yale in the olden days had a monopoly in the high hurdles but in recent years it has changed so that any college may turn out the winner.

"Hurdling has changed considerably since the first intercollegiate meet in 1876 at which time there was practically no technique. The record then was 18 1-4 seconds. H. Mapes of Columbia was the first college athlete to negotiate the distance in better than 17 seconds, his performance in 1889 being 16 4-5 seconds. L. H. Williams of Yale in 1891 was the first college athlete to better 16 seconds in the intercollegiate meet, doing 15 4-5 seconds. In 1895 Steve Chase of Dartmouth did 15 4-5 and later did 15 3-5.

"Alvin Kreanzlein, of Pennsylvania, probably one of the best hurdlers ever developed in America, did 15 2-5 in the big meet and later in other competition did 15 1-5 seconds. John Garrels of Michigan did 15 1-5 in this meet in 1907. Murray of Stanford did 15 seconds in 1916 and Thomson of Dartmouth did 14 2-5 seconds in 1920. Thomson also did 14 4-5 seconds in the big meet and Leighton Dye of southern California did 14 4-5 last year at Philadelphia.

"The leading aspirants for this year's title are Dye, southern California, who should repeat. Ray Wolf of Pennsylvania, should be well up and if Charley Moore, of Penn State, can get going he has a fine chance of defeating Dye. Ray Hass of Georgetown is a fast runner but his technique is not good enough to defeat any of the foregoing."

Berry Grant Wins State Net Tourney; MercerCopsDoubles

BY SANDY CLOWER.

Emory University, Ga., May 22.—(Special.)—Turning loose the same brand of tennis that carried him undefeated through the conference season and then to the semi-finals of the S. I. C. tournament, Berry Grant, captain of the Georgia Tech tennis team, Saturday won the state singles championship by an easy victory over Joe Mosely, Emory leader. Tech, Emory and Mercer entered teams in the meet, which was played on Emory's courts.

Grant won by scores of 6-0, 8-1, 6-3, and never was in danger. Mosely's only threat came in the final set, when he pressed Grant in the early games. Grant had his service aces working over time, and scored many placement shots.

In fact, so well was he working that he swept through the first 11 games of the match before Mosely knew what was going on.

In the doubles, however, Andy and Emory Heyward, of Mercer, came through with an unexpected victory over G. B. Strickler and Duncan Morton, of Tech. The Jackets succumbed only after a desperate battle, the scores being 6-8, 6-4, 8-6, 6-4, 6-4.

Andy Heyward's play at the net was largely responsible for the Mercer triumph, the lanky Baptist chasing the Techites all over the court. Strickler's strong service kept the Mercer pair at bay for three sets, but the Heywards finally broke through and ran out the two final sets.

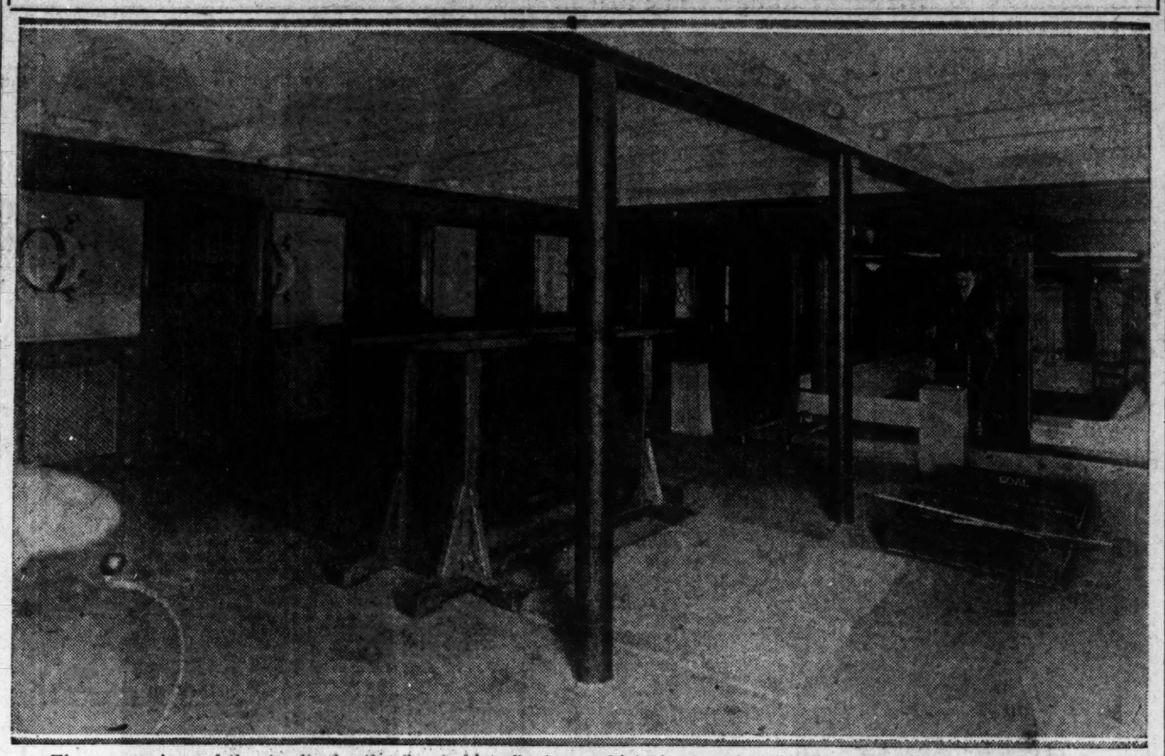

After Mercer had drawn a bye, Tech eliminated the Emory team, composed of Dr. Oh, Korean star, and Ed Branscomb, in the preliminary round of the doubles.

Crew of Penn Wins Regatta

Cambridge, Mass., May 22.—(AP)—Pennsylvania crews carried off the honors in their triangular regatta with Harvard and Massachusetts Institute of Technology, on the Charles river, winning both varsity and junior varsity events while Harvard captured the freshmen race.

The Penn senior crew finished a length ahead of Tech, with Harvard half a length back of the latter. The time was 9 minutes 26 seconds.

GOLFERS TRAIN IN FLOATING PALACE

The gymnasium of the Aquitania, the finest ship afloat, on which the American Walker cup golf team crossed the Atlantic last week. The gymnasium is fully equipped for sports of all kinds, and made ideal training quarters for the U. S. stars of the links. The gym was fitted out with "greens," several driving cages, and all other known contrivances to help the golfer confined indoors. According to word sent back by H. C. Hamilton, The Constitution's sports editor, who accompanied the team to "cover" the play in England for Constitution readers, the facilities for practice afforded on board the Aquitania helped wonderfully to keep members of the team in top form.

Twenty Local Stars Seek Southern Title; Play Starts Tuesday

More than 20 strong, Atlanta's contingent of women golfers will leave today for Charlotte, N. C., to participate in the southern women's golf tournament, which opens on the links of the Charlotte Country club Tuesday.

Included in the Atlanta party's list are two former winners of the event, the city champion, several former holders of the city title, and plenty of other golfers good enough to make things tough for anyone in the Charlotte play.

Among the Atlantans are Mrs. Helen Dargan Lowndes, Miss Rosalie Myer, Miss Jimmie Patillo, Mrs. Clarence Bradley, Mrs. J. E. Jagoe, Mrs. F. B. Porter, Mrs. T. T. Williams, Mrs. F. E. Forester, Mrs. Nora Hannah, Mrs. Jack Bothamly, Mrs. William Lohse, Miss Mal O'Brien, Mrs. Bill Doak, Mrs. L. Warren Granade, Mrs. Tommie Wilson, Mrs. Eleanor McAuliffe, Mrs. C. W. Strickler, Mrs. John Hill, Mrs. L. H. Beck and Miss Lucy Marvin Adams.

Practically every other city in the south will send strong representations, and Mrs. John Armstrong, of Jackson, Miss., who won the title last year, will be on hand to defend her honors. Birmingham, New Orleans, Louisville, Memphis, Mobile, Nashville, Knoxville and Paris, Texas, are among cities to enter teams.

Atlanta now is favored to win the team play, and there also is a likelihood that at least one Atlantan will reach the finals of the championship flight.

Monday's program includes a lot of strenuous practice for the Atlanta golfers, the extra day being expected to familiarize them with the hard course.

The qualifying round starts at 9 o'clock Tuesday morning. A business meeting is scheduled for 3:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon and at 6:30 Tuesday Mrs. Ralph Van Landingham, president of the Southern Women's Golf association, will entertain at a buffet luncheon.

The Hotel Charlotte has been named as headquarters for the Atlantans.

Dempsey Must Face Court

Merceda, Cal., May 22.—(AP)—Jack Dempsey, heavyweight champion, must be in Madera May 27 to answer to a charge of reckless driving or suffer the consequences, said Leroy Bailey, a justice of the peace of Madera, today.

"Dempsey has been granted ample time to answer the citation," said the magistrate, when informed the champion will seek an extension of his hearing. "His case will not be accorded different handling than that of any other motorist."

Dempsey and his chauffeur were arrested six weeks ago when he is alleged to have driven through Madera county at 78 miles an hour.

Tuskegee Gridders To Invade North

Tuskegee Institute, Ala., May 22.—For the first time the Tuskegee Tigers, gridiron champions of the south for the past two years, will invade the north when they meet the Lincoln Lions in the Sesquicentennial stadium in Philadelphia, October 29. Announcement was made here this week that arrangements have been completed for the game which is to be played as a part of the Sesquicentennial International exposition program which will be in progress at that time. The stadium in which the game is to be played was erected for the exposition and has a seating capacity of 100,000.

Plans at the institute indicate that the Tigers will be accompanied by a host of followers when they face the Pennsylvania team. The champions of the south have for sometime been awaiting an opportunity to test their strength with a northern team.

SALLY LEAGUE

PEACHES SPLIT DOUBLE-BILL.

Spartanburg, S. C., May 22.—After Mike Kelly's second home run of the game had broken up a pretty game in the ninth, 5 to 4, to end Spartanburg's losing streak, the Peaches came back in the second game behind the good hurling of Mallett in today's double-header to take the nightcap, 5 to 1. Winn and Williamson hurled strong baseball in the first game until the closing innings when both weakened. Four of Spartanburg's seven hits in the first game were home runs, Jimmie Jordan getting his tenth. Smith's circuit clout in the second game prevented a shutout.

'BAMA SWAMPS COMMODORES IN SLOW GAME

BY BOB MATHERNE.

University, Ala., May 22.—Alabama had little trouble beating Vanderbilt today. The score was 12 to 0. The Crimsons hit in the pinches in four innings, while Olim Hutto, the Plantersville left hander, held them to three bingles and struck out 12 men.

Hutto really "had 'em" here today. He had one bad inning, the first, when Hendricks tripled after two men were out and the next men were given free passage to first. He struck out two men in every inning except the first two, sixth and seventh.

Vanderbilt started with their hurling ace, Lefty Moss, on the mound, but he was jerked in the fifth after three men had hit safely. Creeson took up the burden for three innings and George Waller finished the game by pitching the ninth.

Alabama scored four in the third frame when Moss heaved two wild pitches in succession. Cannather's double scored Barnes and Shirley in the fifth and Vincent's double scored Connather. Moore's home run with Vincent on in the seventh added a couple more runs, while Barnes' homer in the ninth with two on accounted for the other three runs. The game was played before a fairly large home-coming crowd. The second game of the series will be played Monday with Moss due for a comeback for Vanderbilt while Tubbs will probably start the last game for Alabama.

Miami Wins Florida Cup

Orlando, Fla., May 22.—(AP)—Miami High school is baseball champion of the state tonight following its game with Bradenton this afternoon, which the east coast team won by a count of 13 to 1. The state title rests with the decision of the state high school athletic commission, following the protest of the Mulberry team against Miami yesterday. Should this protest be upheld, the turney would have to be played over without Miami, according to tourney officials.

Running Cards Feature July Races at Lakewood

Great Thoroughbreds To Exhibit Speed Over Atlanta Oval

The most complete horse racing card ever held on the Southeastern fair race track at Lakewood Amusement park was announced Saturday by Oscar Mills, secretary-manager, for July 3 and 5, the opening and closing days of a big three-day celebration of Independence day at the park.

The two-day racing program will include eight running races, three races for trotters and three for pacers, two trotting and one pacing event Saturday and two pacing and one trotting event Monday, according to the entry blanks.

The blanks, with invitations to enter, were mailed Saturday to more than 100 harness horse owners and nearly as many owners of thoroughbred racing stables, while Mr. Mills stated that he would send personal representatives to several Kentucky racing centers to secure entries.

In order to encourage a large field of competitors in all three classes of events, Mr. Mills also invited a number of prominent horse race men to use the Southeastern fair stables and race track for spring training between now and the Fourth of July races.

Great Stables.

The stables are considered the most comfortably constructed and conveniently equipped at any southern race track, while the mile track, the scene of some of the fastest southern harness meets of the past, is worked constantly by the caretakers at the park to keep it in good condition for racing events and is always ready for fast workouts.

The July races, bringing back thoroughbreds to Atlanta for the first time in a number of years, are to be preliminary to a possible six-day running race meet during the Southeastern fair in October, according to Secretary Mills.

Call for Runners.

Sports fans through the state have been urging a running race meet in Atlanta ever since he assumed management of the fair and Lakewood Amusement park this spring, Mr. Mills said, and the fair management is going to plunge on an expensive two-day card for July to determine the drawing power of runners before undertaking the heavier cost of six days of running as well as harness races for the fair.

The races are to be the Saturday and Monday afternoon features of a three-day celebration of the sesquicentennial of American independence, declared 150 years ago July 4. Patriotic fireworks displays, musical entertainments and other features are planned for the mornings and evenings and for Sunday afternoon during the celebration.

Georges Declares He Beat Huffman

Philadelphia, May 22.—(AP)—Georges Carpentier, French light-heavyweight, dropped off a train here today for a few hours' rest en route to his training camp in Atlantic City. Commenting on his ten rounds to a draw with Eddie Huffman in New York last night, Georges said he thought he beat Huffman by a comfortable margin, "but far be it from me to make what you Americans call a squawk. I was not at my best last night, but I will be right for Loughran."

Carpentier boxes Tommy Loughran, Philadelphia heavyweight, on June 17. Promoters of the bout said today that Young Marullo, of New Orleans, and Yale Okun, of New York, have been signed for a ten-round bout to precede the Carpentier-Loughran [illegible]

NAVY OARSMEN TRIM ORANGE IN EASY RACE

Annapolis, Md., May 22.—(AP)—Eight blue-tipped navy oars—daintily handled as milady's teaspoons—paddled as many boatlengths of the spurling Severn over a swamped Orange prow this afternoon. Pulling almost lazily through a swirling sea into the face of a southerly wind, Navy toyed with Tim Ten Eyck's Syracuse varsity with a disdain it has shown no other crew this season.

Moving not an unnecessary ounce of water, the oars melting into the surface as if it had been oiled, Bob Butler's eight coasted through a rough mile and through three-quarters that left the Orange breathless. A strong head wind, blowing up on the heels of the gusty rain, cut the time to 9:31.

Ten Eyck put a crew on the Severn that to all appearances was everything a crew should be. The Orange stroke was high compared to Navy's in the body of the race. The Orange rhythm was flawless—but the power that surged through every flick of the Navy sweeps behind Tom Eddy's stroke dwarfed the smooth working Syracuse machine. Navy was none the less brilliant for the tremendous power it displayed. It was a flowing, mastered energy that jerked not a single oar out of alignment.

It was Navy's first race of the year at greater than the Henley distance, and the middies' finest display of oarsmanship was in the added half mile. As in the previous shorter trials, Navy was skimming the waves with a stroke count of 40 at the finish. Navy took the lead at the gun, and increased it all the way, consting with a stroke of 34 against the Orange 36.

The Plebes in administering like medicine to the Orange freshmen, hit the water before a brewing storm broke and had the advantage of a mill pond surface. They cut six seconds from the varsity time for the same distance, winning by two lengths in 9:25.

Edgewood Baptist tasted defeat for the first time by the heavy hitting of the whole Pryor Street Presbyterian team, the final score being 13 to 5. Every player for the winners secured at least one hit in the 18 hits that they made. Edgewood's ten hits only counted for five runs. Both teams fielded well. Barker led in the hitting for the winners by getting four out of five. Reeves hit best for the losers in getting three out of four attempts.

Snappy Paragraphs

Heinie Groh, bottle bat and all, is out of the game that he has played for 18 years. He started at Oshkosh, went to the Giants in 1911, left in 1914 and returned in 1922. He was eligible for four world's series although he played in only three.

Outfielder Brainard of Wichita Falls in the Texas league batted safely in twenty consecutive games before he stubbed his toe.

Lester Claybrook of the Okmulgee team in the Western association didn't get a hit in the first game of the season. The next day he started and has run his string to 28 in consecutive games.

A homerun has decided many a game but it must be classed as a baseball freak when three runs are made and all on homers. That is what happened at St. Louis with Meusel and Southworth of the Giants and Lester Bell of the Cards, each pounding out a circuit drive, the Giants winning 2 to 1.

"Hack" Wilson of the Chicago White Sox has the unusual record of having made 30 hits for a total of 58 bases, making each drive good for almost two bases.

Speaker of the Indians and Heilmann of the Tigers are apparently marking time for the approach of the dog days. Tris is batting .242 and Harry, .264, almost their usual clip for this season of the year.

Outfielder Walker of Baltimore hit seven homeruns in seven successive days.

Art Nehf, who elected to go to the Cincinnati Reds when the Giants released him, started his baseball career with Negaunee in the Copper league fourteen years ago. He joined the Giants in 1920. Should he be anything like himself it might be well to at least count the Reds as dangerous contenders from now on.

Zach Wheat, of Brooklyn has his favorite ball parks. Forbes Field at Pittsburg is not one of them. In one game against the Pirates the fly chaser was up six times without getting a hit. He claims that his lifetime average at the Chicago Cubs' park is .500.

Pitcher Kolp, of St. Paul got the lion's share of the glory in a freak game with Minneapolis when he appeared twice in one inning and got a single each time, driving in the last two of a seven-run total, all the tallies, incidentally coming after two were out.

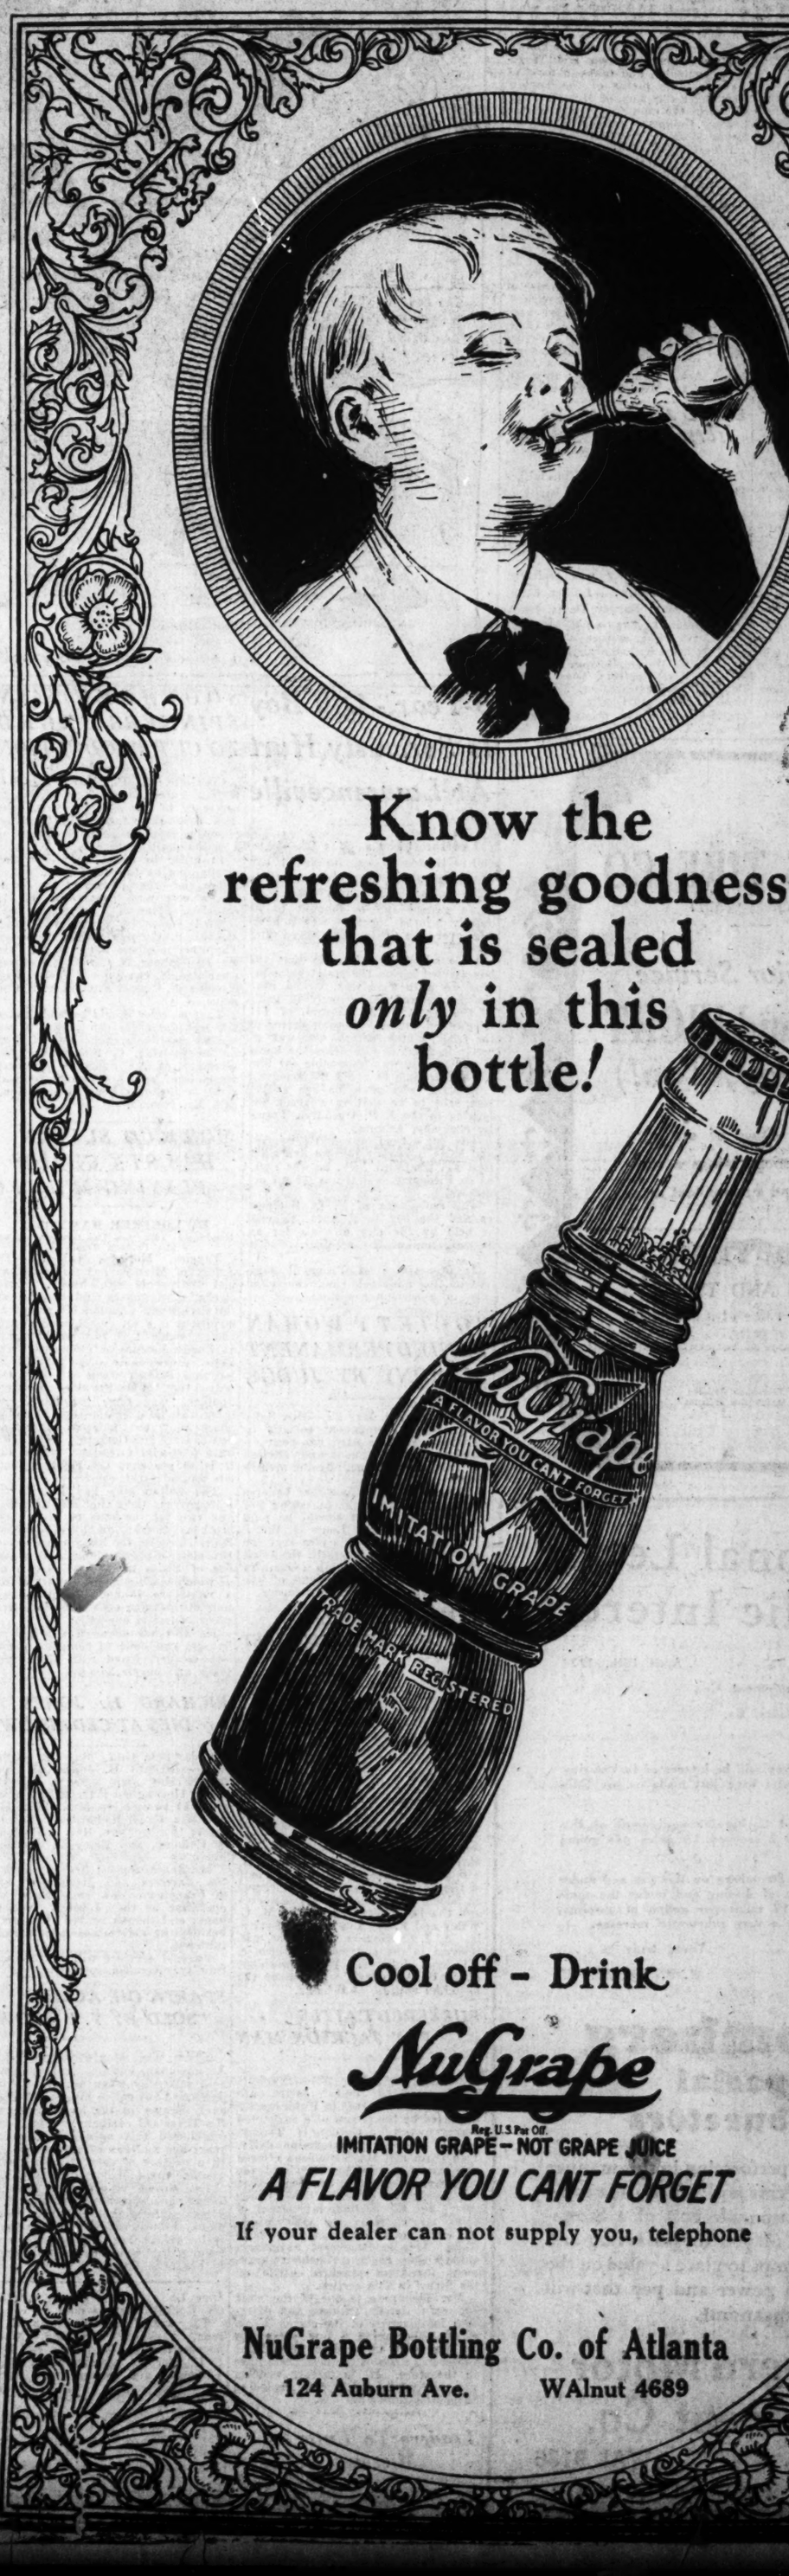

What with the old timers on the move the Giants are playing in hard luck these days. Shortstop Jackson is out with a wrenched knee, which has put it up to Eddie Farrell, the former University of Pennsylvania shortstop, to cover the position.

Ed Baecht of the Phillies, is considered the "baby" pitcher of the league. He was picked up among the semi-pro ranks of Crafton, Ill., last spring, where in a game he did not permit a runner to reach first base. He is in his eighteenth year of manhood but is already considered a regular.

The St. Louis Cardinals are still in the second division but they have two of the leading pitchers in the league in Rhem and Keen, the former with six victories and the latter with five, giving this pair eleven out of fifteen victories won by the Cards.

It happens once in a blue moon that an umpire gets an ovation from the fans. Jimmy Murray, returning to the game in the American association, got that very thing when he appeared in Milwaukee in the game with Kansas City.

Pitcher Starr, of the Danville team in the Three I league, hurling against Bloomington Monday did not allow a hit or a run but an error disfigured the performance.

DOUBLE SLAYER IS FOUND GUILTY

Warrenton, N. C., May 22.—(AP)—W. L. Ross, charged with the murder of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Odom in Warren county last Sunday, was convicted by a jury in Warren county superior court of first-degree murder tonight. The verdict was returned at 11:15 o'clock, after the jury had been out an hour and a half.

Judge Cranmer sentenced the defendant to be electrocuted at the state prison at Raleigh on June 22.

"Your honor, I want to ask that you make the time as soon as possible," Ross told Judge Cranmer, after the jury had returned its verdict, and the defendant was asked if he had anything to say.

"I have killed my best friends and I have nothing to live for, and I don't want to live. I am suffering great remorse."

After Judge Cranmer had pronounced sentence, Ross asked for the little girl, Sallie Bett Ross, his adopted daughter, whose leaving home prompted the murder, he said.

Getting down on his knees before her, he begged her to pray for him and to forgive him.

RECEIVER NAMED FOR FLORIDA CITIES FINANCE COMPANY

Miami, Fla., May 22.—(AP)—Fred W. Vanderpool today was named receiver for the Florida Cities Finance company, owners and developers of Fulford-by-the-Sea, in circuit court by Judge W. H. Price. Mr. Vanderpool, a prominent Miami insurance man, posted $50,000 bond.

The receivership followed closely after the recent arrest and subsequent release on bond of Merle C. Tebbetts, president of the organization, in federal court on charges of using the mails to defraud in connection with the development of the subdivision of which he was head.

A suit filed by E. K. Dahlman, who claimed ownership of 50 shares of stock in the finance company, requested the appointment of the receiver. He claimed the company was solvent and has assets amounting to $5,000,000.

COTTON COMPRESSES IN GREAT MERGER

Memphis, Tenn., May 22.—(AP)—Eleven cotton compresses and warehouses in Louisiana, Mississippi, Tennessee, Alabama and Arkansas were merged here today into an independent company with capital assets of approximately $2,500,000. The storage capacity of the company will be 600,000 bales.

The new organization will be known as the Union Compress and Warehouse company, and takes in most of the remaining plants of the Taylor-Newburger company, of Memphis, and a part of the plants controlled by the Lesser Goldman company, of St. Louis, Missouri.

Ernest Rice, of Memphis and Dyersburg, Tenn., will head the organization, according to the announcement made today. R. L. Taylor, of Memphis, will assume the vice presidency, and John S. King, Memphis, secretary-treasurer.

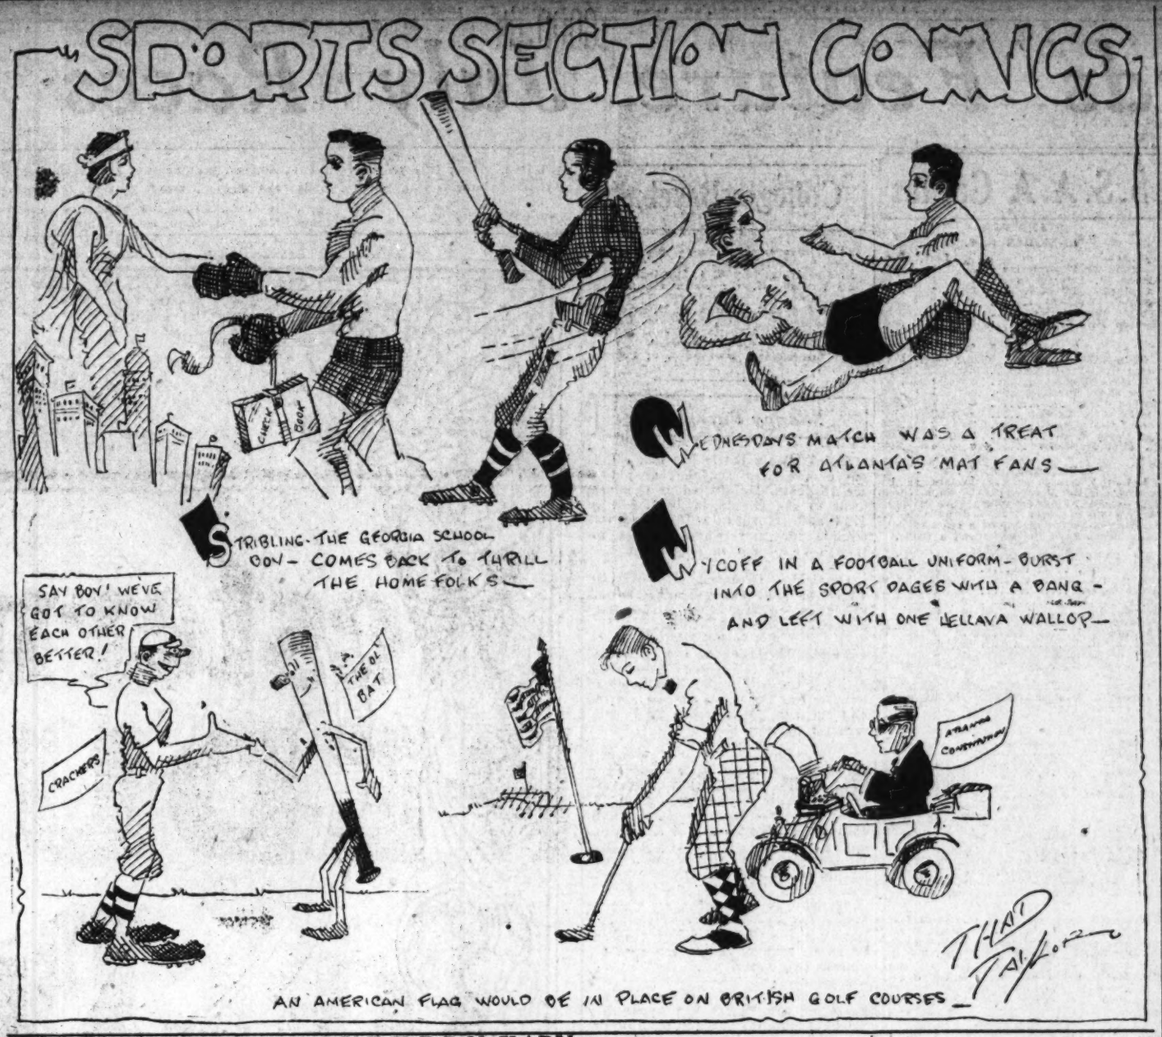

One of the largest plants taken into the merger will be the old navy yard compress in Memphis, which will be remodeled at an expenditure of $200,000, officials said. The remainder of the plants are already in operation.

Plants for which deeds have been received by the company were at Chattanooga, Greenwood, Miss.; Tutwiler, Miss.; Rosedale, Miss.; Moorhead, Miss.; Winona, Miss.; Camden, Ark.; Hope, Ark.; Decatur, Ala.; Rayville, La., and the Memphis navy yard.

MISSING PRINCE FOUND ON LINER

New York, May 22.—New York police and private detectives mopped wet brows today after a frantic search for Prince Levan Melikov De Sombetic, claimant to a nonexistent throne of Georgia, in far-away Transcaucasia, who disappeared yesterday from the exclusive Park Lane hotel.

The prince, who left a brief note addressed to his princess, the former Mrs. Francis Dixon, of Hartford, Conn., saying, "I am going away forever," is now with the princess aboard the French liner Paris, now fast leaving behind the shores of America.

The "vanished" prince of the "vanished" throne, who was badly shell-shocked during the war, caused his bride no end of worry over his disappearance, and a thorough search of New York's night clubs by police and private detectives failed to find the missing Transcaucasian.

Then the cabins of the White Star liner Homeric were inspected, but he was not there. The prince had a visa from France, a diplomatic passport, which allows him to sail at will.

Just before the Paris sailed at noon, however, the princess dashed aboard and there learned that her husband was sailing. She remained aboard when the ship left the pier.

Statesboro Presented With Park Equipment; Flower Contest Held

Statesboro, Ga., May 22.—(Special.)—In the flower garden contest put on by the public welfare committee of the Statesboro Woman's club the judges today awarded first prize to Mrs. W. O. Shuptrine and second prize to Mrs. Brooks Simmons. Mrs. W. A. Granade and Mrs. E. L. Smith tied for third place. The judges were, Mrs. Burrus Mathews, Miss Hilda Tubbs and D. N. Barron of the Georgia normal school. The contest was inaugurated last year and is to be an annual event.

At 6 o'clock Friday the public welfare committee publicly presented to the city the park improvements, consisting of swings, joggling boards and seats to be used in the park on Savannah avenue. Mrs. H. P. Jones, retiring president of the Woman's club, formally presented the ift and Homer C. Parker responded in behalf of the council and city.

Pirate Nine Wins In Ball Tourney

Emory University, Ga., May 22.—(Special.)—In the semi-final game of the Pan-Hellenic baseball tournament at Emory, the Sigma Nu Greeks defeated the Sigma Pi Pirates by the close score of 3-2. This game leaves only the Sigma Nus and the Phi Delta Thetas in the championship race and these rivals will have it out on the diamond Monday.

The game was filled with thrills, the chief feature being a home run—the winning run—slammed out by Sewell, of the Sigma Nus. Oscar Vinson presided on the mound for the losers. Ware receiving, and Matty Harper, Emory's pitching ace, was master of the hillock for the winners Sewell did the catching for Sigma Nu.

Austell Beats Almond Park

Austell, Ga., May 22.—Austell defeated the fast Almond Park team from Atlanta today by the score of 6 to 5. The game was a pitchers' battle all the way between Ransome and McHenry.

Wilder was the hitting star for the visitors with 2 singles, a double and triple. The game was tied in the ninth on Wilder's triple.

Austell came back in her half and put the winning run across when R. Smith singled and G. Causey doubled to center.

Score by innings:

		R.	H.	E.
Almond Park	300 100 001	5	10	4

CRIMINALS FREED AT FASTER RATE THAN SENTENCED

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Chicago, Ill., May 22.—Chicago criminals have been paroled, pardoned and discharged, from Joliet penitentiary at a faster rate than Chicago courts and prosecutors could send them there, was the sensational charge made to the special grand jury today by Henry Barrett Chamberlin, operating director of the Chicago crime commission.

Colonel Chamberlin revealed that in 1923, the year in which the state put up secrecy bars to parole records, there were 397 convicts sentenced to the Joliet penitentiary from Cook county and 442 felons returned to society by pardon, parole or discharge.

5-Year - Old Boy Is Seriously Hurt At Lawrenceville

Lawrenceville, Ga., May 22.—(Special.)—Hinton Jones, 5-year-old son of George Jones, was run over by a large truck this morning near Baggett's garage and is thought to be fatally injured, the rear wheels passing over the little boy's head and chest.

It is stated by witnesses that the boy started across the street from behind an auto that was parked near the garage and ran directly in front of the truck. T. J. Kincaid, of 441 Glennwood avenue, Atlanta, driver of the truck, states that the boy was directly in front of him before he knew it and that it was impossible for him to stop in time to avoid the accident.

Kincaid, who gave his age at 23, was said to be driving a truck belonging to the J. P. Upchurch Transfer company, Atlanta.

The boy's head was badly crushed and he is internally injured and after first aid treatment here, he was rushed to Piedmont sanitarium for an operation.

The ambulance of F. Q. Sammon carried the boy to Atlanta. Kincaid is held by the city officials for an investigation of the accident.

It was stated at Piedmont sanitarium at midnight that the child was in a serious condition.

SOCIETY WOMAN DENIED PERMANENT ALIMONY BY JUDGE

San Francisco, May 22.—Mrs. Sally Obear Abbott, prominent socially in California and the east, has been refused permanent alimony and advised to "learn how to work" by the divorce court.

"This court is not one that believes a strong, healthy woman, suing her husband for divorce, should be paid alimony," said Judge Louis H. Ward.

Despite Mrs. Abbott's plea that she never had supported herself, the court granted but $50 a month temporary alimony pending settlement of the suit. Her husband is an attorney.

PUREBRED CATTLE PAY JACKSON MAN

Jackson, Ga., May 22.—(Special.) That purebred dairy cattle are profitable investments in Butts county is proved by the record of a registered Jersey owned by Gordon H. Thompson, of the Sweet Jessamine dairy. Two years ago Mr. Thompson offered this cow for sale for $100 and the offer was refused. In two years' time she ha given birth to three heifer calves and the original investment of $100, not counting the milk, which is a considerable item, now amounts to $350. This is considered a remarkable showing and is a conclusive argument for more purebred cattle on the farms in this section.

Mr. Thompson is one of the most successful Jersey breeders and dairymen in this part of the state. From a small beginning a few years ago he has built up a dairy herd that represents some of the best blood lines in the state. He is rapidly weeding out his grade cattle and replacing them with purebreds.

SOUTHERN YARN SPINNERS URGED TO CUT PRODUCTION

Charlotte, N. C., May 22.—(AP)—Drastic curtailment of production is necessary to tide southern yarn spinners over their present difficulties, executive textile mills have devided in a called meeting here.

In order to effect specific recommendations as to curtailment, selling prices and other phases of the industry, a soft yarn department of the Southern Spinners' association was created yesterday. Charles Iceman, McColl, S. C., was named chairman. The other members were: A. M. Fairley, Laurinburg, N. C.; M. L. Cannon, Charlotte, N. C.; John R. Toler, Fayetteville, N. C., and F. C. Sherrill, Cornelus, N. C.

That no sales should be made unless the manufacturers can realize a reasonable profit was the sense of those in the meeting, C. Singleton Green, secretary of the Southern Spinners' association, said. "Drastic curtailment is the only hope of salvation," said Mr. Iceman.

MOROCCO SULTAN HAS SIX CHAIRS PLAYING MUSIC

BY LORIMER HAMMOND.

(Copyright, 1926, for The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Tangier, Morocco, May 22.—The Sultan of Morocco has made mechanical devices his royal hobby. Trick clocks, music boxes and bicycles are the favorites. Among his recent acquisitions is a set of six musical armchairs, made specially on his order at Zurich for use at diplomatic functions. Each chair plays a different national anthem when sat in. One plays the "Star Spangled Banner," another "God Save the King," another the "Marseillais" and the other three play the national hymns of Spain, Italy and Germany. The chairs have a special attendant, whose duty it is to see that the right diplomat sits in the right chair.

The sultan also has bought five motorcycles, three for his own sons and two for the sons of his deposed brother. In addition he has purchased ladies' bicycles for his younger wives, two electric player-pianos and a number of Swiss mechanical clocks, one of which sends a miniature train from a miniature roundhouse to make a tour of the room on a miniature track every hour and one-half.

He also has acquired a bright red hansom cab done in complete vermillion lacquer, fitted with silver trappings and purple harness.

Yours truly

W. R. VOYLES.

New Sport Ford Roadster Shown

This new Ford sport roadster, with other Ford sport models was the center of much attention at the Belle Isle-Street company, local Ford dealer, the past week. These cars are truly sport models. They are finished in two-tone paint, equipped with wire wheels and in fact everything seen on other sport cars introduced recently.

GOOD OIL ESSENTIAL TO RUNNING OF CAR

The lubrication of automobile motors has ceased to be the haphazard business it was a few years ago and is now receiving the intelligent thought, not only of those actually engaged in the oil business, but of manufacturers and individual owners of automobiles. In commenting upon this change from the days when any oil was thought good enough, Wiley L. Moore, president of the Wofford Oil company, said yesterday:

"The proper lubrication of pistons is the hardest test to which any oil can be put. During the combustion stroke the receding piston leaves a very thin coating of oil upon the cylinder walls. This film of oil is subjected to tremendous heat and unless it is of very high quality and chemically pure it cannot withstand this intense exposure. The slightest impurity means that it loses its lubricating qualities under this heat, and the returning piston rubs against the cylinder wall. But if the oil is of the proper quality this thin film remains intact and there is no wear on either piston or cylinder.

"Oil must be of not only the proper quality; it must be of correct weight for the type of motor in which it is used. Too thick an oil spreads slowly and offers too much internal resistance. It cannot completely cover the surface on the upward stroke and renew the film in time to prevent it giving away in spots. Too thin an oil is too easily spattered over the spark plugs, and may be unable to keep the metal surfaces apart. Oil should not thicken too quickly in cold weather; neither should it become too thin under extreme heat.

"But even if the oil you are using be of the very best grade, its efficiency can be very greatly impaired through careless washing of the crankcase when you change oil. Kerosene is often used for this purpose, although most oil men, as well as many motorists, know that it is impossible to get all of this kerosene out of the crankcase. The result is a badly diluted oil when you think it is perfectly fresh. By the time you have driven a hundred or so miles, your new oil is no better than the oil you just threw away. Our efforts to evolve the perfect fluid with which to wash out crankcases have resulted in the development of 'Woco Three C Crankcase Cleanser,' a preparation we have been experimenting with for some time. We find that oil put into crankcases that have been washed out with this fluid is good for a much longer time than when any other preparation that we have ever tried has been used.

"We, of course, make no charge for washing crankcases. But so long as our customers depend upon us to do it for them we naturally want to do a good job, and we have found that 'Woco Three C' enables us to do just that."

COL. PAXON URGES TOURISTS TO VISIT CITY THIS SUMMER

The approach of summer and the beginning of the tourist travel season brought out the announcement Saturday by the Atlanta tourist bureau that Atlanta is a permanent "stop over privilege" city, enjoying liberal advantages in that regard.

"This applies to round-trip tickets all the year through," said Col. Frederic J. Paxon, president of the Convention bureau. "The length of stop-over is limited only to the time limit of the ticket.

"There will be no trouble about checking baggage, as it is not necessary for a passenger stopping over at Atlanta to continue on to the original destination to validate tickets. He may stop in Atl[illegible] and return without visiting the [illegible]tion point."

REAL DIAMONDS USED IN BUILDING MOTORS

Add diamonds to the list of materials used in the manufacture of automobiles.

Such a list has frequently been compiled by those seeking to show how great an influence the motor car has on other industries, from steel and rubber, gasoline and oil, down through scores of other commodities.

Now diamonds must be included, for the Paige-Detroit Motor Car company has found them invaluable in machine operations on connecting rods to insure finishing within the close limits required for perfect operation in the engines.

In the final reaming of the bronze bushings in the small end of the connecting rods, it is necessary to prevent the least variation in diameter. for these bushings, which surround the wrist pins, are vital elements in the engine. They carry [illegible]rying loads imposed through th[illegible] pins during the power, exhaus[illegible] and compression strokes. [illegible]ust they fit perfectly, but [illegible]res must be absolutely true [illegible]hat the pistons may operate [illegible]

With the diamond ream[illegible] used by Paige, bushing after b[illegible]ng is turned out without the least variation. Other cutting materials cannot give the same results, because only the diamond—the hardest substance known—can be so used without wearing down. Any other material will wear enough to cause a diference in the diameter of the bores. As turned out in the Paige factory, the bushings, diamond reamed, are virtually perfect.

CHEVROLET EXPANSION PROGRAM ANNOUNCED

The largest expansion program in the history of Chevrolet Motor company involving the expenditure of $10,000,000 and increasing the company's production facilities to a peak capacity of 1,000,000 cars per year, will be inaugurated June 1, according to an announcement just made by W. S. Knudsen, president and general manager of the Chevrolet Motor company.

Building plans have b[illegible]n completed, machinery ordered and by January 1, 1927, the company will be fully prepared to build 1,000,000 Chevrolet cars during the coming year.

Under the new program, company employees numbering 20,000 during full time operations, will be increased proportionately.

Closed body production facilities will be 750,000 annually, constituting 75 per cent of the total production of Chevrolet cars.

Sixty per cent of the $10,000,000 will be spent in installing improved machinery and equipment of the most modern type and the remainder will be expended in erecting additions to various plants of the company in the United States.

With present equipment, capable of producing 750,000 cars a year, unable to meet the demand for Chevrolet cars and reports showing the factory production greatly oversold, the building program calls for additions to seven of the company's plants located at Detroit, Flint and Bay City, Michigan; Toledo and Cincinnati, O.; Janesville, Wis., and St. Louis, Mo.

The additions will provide greatly increased facilities at the forge, gear and axle plants at Detroit, to the motor plant at Flint, the small parts plant at Bay City and the transmission plant at Toledo. Expansion of the Fisher Body plants adjoining Chevrolet plants at Cincinnati, Janesville and St. Louis will meet the augmented demand for closed bodies.

"Facilities for building the Chev[illegible] car will be equal to those for [illegible]ucing the finest high-grade automobile made in this country, regardless of price," said Mr. Knudsen.

"The expansion is being made in line with the Chevrolet Motor company's closely followed policy in the past of utilizing the most modern equipment available, enabling us to constantly increase the quality of our product.

"Inherent quality is the most essential feature of any automobile, and must of necessity be greater in a lighter car than in the heavier types, where the factor of safety need not be figured so closely.

"This unprecedented expansion of the Chevrolet Motor company has no other explanation than that of the constantly increasing demand on the part of the public for the improved car. It is recognition on our part of this steadily growing favor of the Chevrolet car with the motor-buying public that has caused us to prepare for the future and to be ready to produce 1,000,000 cars during the coming year."

Organization of the club was completed, with all former and present male students who have met the requirements as full members. Dr. James F. Watson, president of the school, made a talk at the meeting.

Stearns Knight

Luxurious  Motor Cars

The Secret of this Remarkable Long Life

Doubtless you have heard many owners talk about the long life record of Stearns-Knight Motor cars.

One reason for this remarkable reputation is a 27-year old policy of building only a limited number of cars each year . . . but building them superlatively well.

The other reason is the powerful Knight motor that lies under the hood. This is the famous sleeve-valve motor that actually improves with use . . . "the engine that never wears out."

Thus, the phrase, "A Lifetime Car" means just what it says.

NEW THEFT LOCKS ARE BEING USED

The automobile in its development naturally introduces problems om a city standpoint, as well as from the standpoint of the manufacturers and insurance people, and it has taken a number of years of experience to develop the fact that the expense thrown on the cities in protecting automobile owners against theft is out of all proportion to what it should be. The insurance companies, on the other hand, have been faced with the problem that their customers who took out insurance contracts on automobiles were not interested especially in the protection of those cars, especially after they were a couple of years old, as long as the insurance company carried the risk. The result was that the public being careless, naturally, and the liability being carried by the insurance company, it built up an estimate that the major portion of automobiles, 80 per cent in the larger cities, were not locked with the lock that was provided for that purpose and required by the insurance companies, for the reason that it was necessary for the automobile owner to go to the trouble of taking a key out of his pocket and locking his car. Also in case of a lady operating the car, the lock would be greasy and ladies would soil and ruin their gloves.

The result of this, from practical investigation on the part of the insurance companies in the larger cities, was that probably 80 per cent of the cars on the streets were not locked at all.

As the automobile became more popular, the number of cars on the streets throughout the large American cities increased by leaps and bounds, and the city authorities, in attempting to prevent the stealing of those cars that were not locked, were faced with an increase in expense.

The insurance companies were faced with the enormous portion of these losses that mounted into the thousands. Out of all this, the insurance companies and the automobile manufacturers together realized that the natural correction of this would be some system of preventing the automobile owners from leaving their cars unlocked. This was brought about by the development of the electrolock, which is an ignition lock so arranged that when the switch is snapped off to break the circuit the car is automatically locked, making it impossible to leave the car unlocked at any place or at any time without the engine was left running.

This lock was developed by Wilson Hemingway in 1922-23, electrical engineer graduated from A. & M. college, Starkville, Miss., and was approved by the insurance underwriters' laboratory in Chicago, who changed their ruling on automobile insurance, and after January 1, 1927, the requirement of the insurance conference laboratory will be that any automobile manufacturer in order to get the best rate on cars, must have them equipped with an automatic or co-incidental lock, so when the engine is shut off it automatically locks the car without the necessity of a key.

BACK WITH FLINT

ERIC E. NELSON.

Another step in the Flint Motor company's reorganization of their sales and dealer organization is the announcement of the return to their employ of Eric E. Nelson.

Mr. Nelson returns to his former position with the Flint company after an absence of about a year. He has had considerable sales experience both in automobile and other lines, where he has built a large circle of friends who will welcome the news of his return to local sales circles.

Sedan With Auxiliary Seats, New Closed Car Idea, Very Popular

"That the obvious things are sometimes overlooked is demonstrated again by the success of a new automobile type, the five-passenger sedan with auxiliary seats," says L. B. Dodge, of the Franklin Motor Car company, local Franklin dealer, who recalls that in all the years of creating service-giving automobile body types that it wasn't until 1925 that the five-passenger sedan with auxiliary seats was conceived. To a Franklin body designer goes the credit.

"As automobile drivers know, there is a strong partiality shown the five-passenger type of sedan due to the easier handling, originating in lessened weight and size and this explains largely the quick success of the five-passenger closed car with extra seats," said Mr. Dodge in explaining the success of the new car.

"In emergency this automobile gives the accommodations of a large car without the bigness and bulk—an accomplishment in line with the present trend in automobile design.

"With large families there are occasions when the car is called upon to carry everyone, the folding seats come in handily for the children. Also on social occasions, two additional couples may be conveniently accompany the owners. The arrangement for social use is an especially desirable one since all rear compartment passengers are brought together in a companionable group.

"The quick acceptance of the idea of a five-passenger sedan with auxiliary seats is indicated by the increase in the original production schedule of the type, and even with increased production it is not uncommon for the factory to be two and three weeks behind orders on the car."

RETAIL MERCHANTS HEAR WOMEN LEADERS

General membership meeting of the Atlanta Retail Merchants' association will be held Thursday night at 6:15 o'clock at the chamber of commerce assembly hall, No. 2, and will be in charge of the business women's division of the association, assisted by the business women's division of the chamber of commerce.

Arrangements for the meeting have been turned over to a special committee consisting of Mrs. J. H. Gouedy, chairman of the women's division of the Atlanta Retail Merchants' association; Miss Lota Kelly, of M. Rich & Brothers company, and Miss Susie Wailes, president women's division, Atlanta Chamber of Commerce. Six of Atlanta's leading business women have been asked to deliver ten-minute talks on a branch of business with which they are familiar. Each one will treat the subject from the standpoint of the business woman and a woman's position in business affairs.

The committee has arranged a number of special musical features to supplement the program.

BIG DEMAND FOR ALL CHRYSLER CARS

Strong demand the country over for Chrysler cars has followed two significant Chrysler announcements made recently. One is of reductions from $50 to $200 in prices of the famous Chrysler "70" which has been followed by a flood of additional orders for this car from all parts of the country. The output of Chrysler "70" models will have to be still further increased to take care of the demand.

The reduction in price of the Chrysler "70" has been accomplished without change in the car, other than in its lower price, according to J. E. Fields, vice president in charge of Chrysler sales. "The 31 per cent increase in sales for the car to date this year, even over the record demand of one year ago, permits us to offer these substantially increased values to the public—values which we believe are unprecedented in all automobile history," says Mr. Fields.

"The car is exactly the same as before. There is absolutely no change in its performance, quality, comfort, style, equipment, design, materials or workmanship in body or chassis, which have won for it universal preference and admiration among more than 100,000 owners."

Mr. Fields also announces that demand fo the new Chrysler "60," the lower priced Chrysler 6-cylinder car, announced May 9, is already resulting in a huge output of these cars daily, with demand running far ahead of present productive capacity.

"There is every evidence that the reception given this newest car has been among the most enthusiastic ever given a Chrysler product," he said, "which in view of history indicates a very warm public greeting."

ADVERTISING AGENCY OPENS UNIQUE BUILDING

A building planned and created for the exclusive use of a national advertising organization was formally opened in Detroit, Saturday, May 15.

The structure, a beautiful adaptationof Italian renaissance architecture and quite unique in character, is the new home of George Harrison Phelps, Inc., the organization that produces advertising for such well-known products as Dodge Brothers motor cars, Graham Brothers trucks, Berkey & Gay furniture, Iodent tooth paste, Ajax, Mohawk and Racine tires, Radiantfire, Whitehead Refrigeration and others.

The new building is located at East Jefferson and Joseph Campau avenues and is set back from the Jefferson avenue street line about 30 feet on a brick walled terrace. Rising between the trees is a facade of brick and stone, not a flat box-like face, but one irregular in outline, that expresses the plan within. To the left of the public entrance is a semi-circular bay where the stair tower shows itself. To the right, extending up through the second and third stories is a double arched opening with a column of Breche violet marble forming a balcony and great window.

The public reception room is finished with Travertine marble floors, antique plaster walls and beamed ceiling treated with polychrome stencils. This room provides for an information, telephone and telegraph desk and waiting space for visitors.

The practical nature of the business for which the structure was designed received first consideration. This is observable at once in effective layout, the careful arrangement of departments and the complete facilities provided for the 106 employees. In these important respects the building is a striking example of modern departmentized agency practice.

In addition to 12 private offices for executives, a commodious conference room, mailing and magazine rooms, ample space for clerical forces, artists and production staff, the building includes barber shop, kitchenette, a regulation size squash court with dressing, locker, shower and rubbing rooms. A volley ball court is laid out in the open space at the rear.

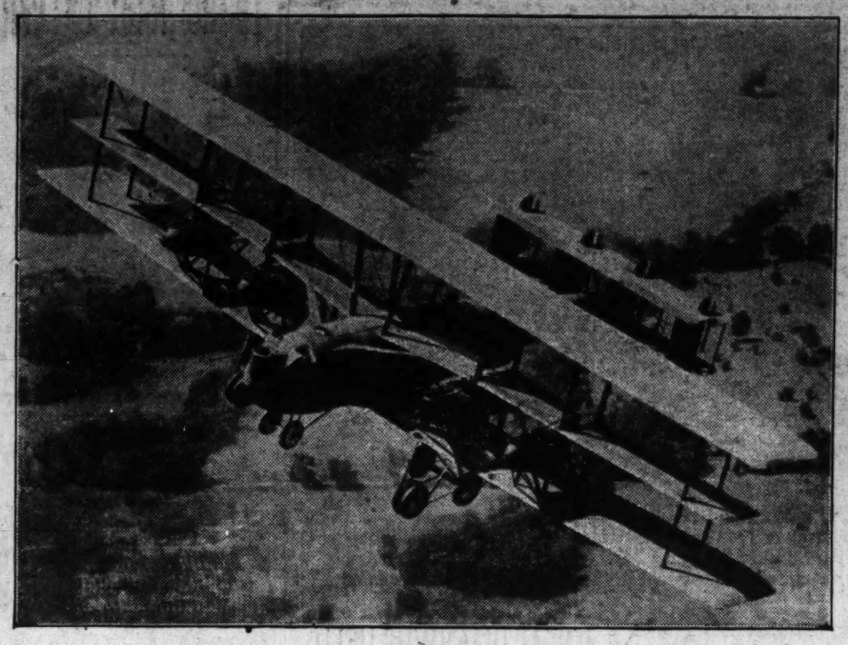

The broadcasting of the George Harrison Phelps, Inc., Radio Department continues at the former headquarters of the company, 110 Rowena street, Detroit.

Degrees to be conferred at the meeting will be royal master, select master, and super-excellent master degrees. Refreshments will be served at 7:45 o'clock.

Largest Airplane in the World Completes Trial Flight

Courtesy International News Reel—Franklin

The Barling Bomber, powered by air-cooled engines, said to be the largest internal combustion motors ever made, successfully completed its trial flight, recently at Indianapolis.

Photo shows this machine in the air, which has proved the contention of aeronautical engineers that giant airplanes with tremendous carrying capacities can be operated with safety. The elimination of water, due to the use of air-cooled motors has been an outstanding factor in the design accomplishment which along with achievements by Rickenbacker, Ford and the war department through its development of an air-cooled Liberty motor has definitely established aviation on an air-cooled basis.

The widened scope of airplane performance since the adoption of air-cooled engines focusses interest upon methods of cooling in connection with motor cars to an extent that the conventional water-cooling system now in vogue shows signs of becoming passe.

MANN HITS ENNIS IN WARM REPLY

In reply to a recent statement by J. H. Ennis, of Milledgeville, candidate for govenor, in reference to his vote on certain measures in the legislature affecting the state department of agriculture, B. F. Mann, of Brunswick, also a candidate for governor, declared Saturday that the Ennis explanation "tends to convince more firmly the people of Georgia of the Ennis friendliness to this machine-controlled department."

Mr. Mann says Mr. Ennis is "beginning to realize that more economy and more efficiency in the agricultural department is going to be an outstanding issue in the campaign," and cites instances in which he charges Mr. Ennis, as a member of the state legislature, voted in favor of "the Brown machine."

Mr. Mann declares that Mr. Ennis, in his statement, "admits that he did vote with the Brown machine for a larger appropriation and that he did untie the vote when the house bill reducing the appropriation from $100,000 to $50,000 reached the senate."

Mr. Mann then reviews an itemized expense bill covering the cost of publication of the Market Bulletin by the markets bureau of the agricultural department, showing that the actual expense for printing the bulletin in 1925 was less than $25,000 and that the other $75,000 went for salaries and otherwise.

It is stated further by Mr. Mann in discussing the question of reducing state oil inspectors from 186 to 6 that Mr. Ennis, as a member of the house in 1924, was recorded as "not voting" on this measure which, Mr. Mann said, was helping defeat the bill reducing the number of oil inspectors which he said would save the state $200,000 a year and add to the efficiency of the department.

Replying to Mr. Ennis' statement that Mr. Mann had said reduction of oil inspectors would save the state $800,000 a year, Mr. Mann declared that Mr. Ennis must have misread the Mann card as it was written in the card $200,000 a year and was thus printed in the Atlanta newspapers. Mr. Mann said Mr. Ennis "is very vociferous about not siding with this recognized political machine." He then cited records which he said showed that Mr. Ennis voted on occasions in favor of the agricultural department.

ELKS' BAND RETURNS TO LAKEWOOD TODAY

Fresh from its triumphant invasion of south Georgia at the head of the Atlanta Elks' delegation to the state convention at Albany, the Elks Royal Purple band will celebrate its homecoming with a gala Sunday afternoon concert at Lakewood amusement park at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

The band and audience will join to open the program with community singing of "America," accompanied by the band and led by Jessie Reese Calvert, dramatic soprano, as Elizabeth Ritter, daughter of the band manager and mascot of the organization, raises the American flag over the Lakewood grandstand.

The program will feature the "Poet and Peasant" [illegible] and "Dream of Childhood" waltzes by Waldteufel. Miss Calvert, making her fourth appearance at the Lakewood Sunday concerts, will sing "The Rosary," "Let Me Call You Sweetheart," "Gypsy Love Song" and "Mighty Lak a Rose," the last number in acknowledgment of nearly 3,000 written requests from audiences that have heard the previous concerts.

Other band numbers will be Sousa's "Washington Post" march, Eilenberg's "Mill in the Forest" descriptive tone picture, Moret's "Indian Summer" idyll, Tobani's "Gems of Stephen Foster" and Stone's lilting march, "Sue," interspersed with popular numbers, including "Talk About My Sweetie," "Horses," "Sliding Jim," by Losey; "How Wonderful You Are," by Terrin, and "What Can I Say After I'm Sorry."

The finale will be the "Star Spangled Banner," played with the audience standing as the flag is lowered.

The concert will be given in the grandstand, the band using the new stage erected at the park for civic, fraternal order and school benefit productions and some of the spectacular entertainments to be presented at the Southeastern fair, October 2-9.

Two street car gates on the Lakewood avenue side of the park and two automobile gates on the South Pryor street side will be opened at 1 o'clock for afternoon picnic parties. Ample parking space has been provided for automobiles. The park can be reached on Washington to Lakewood street cars, which make connections with all other lines in the city, or by automobile over South Pryor street or Stewart avenue and Lakewood avenue.

TICKETS READY FOR ANNUAL OUTING

The climax of the annual summer outing of the Atlanta Automobile association, scheduled for Tuesday, June 10, Brookhaven Country club, will be the course dinner, entertainment and dance to be given at the clubhouse, beginning at 7 o'clock. A special orchestra has been engaged for the occasion and those who expect to get in on this particular feature should make their reservations immediately, by sending remittance for $2 per ticket to the executive secretary's office 1303 Citizens and Southern Bank building.

Those who do not enjoy the evening features at the clubhouse, but who come out for an afternoon on the grounds, either to participate in the golf tournament or the variety of games and stunts to be staged, will not be required to secure tickets. Glenn Ryman, general chairman on arrangements for the outing this year, states that there is every indication that the largest crowd in the history of the association will attend. Many members are bringing their wives and children for the afternoon. Several of the dealers have already indicated their intention of purchasing a large number of tickets to accommodate all of their employees who wish to go.

The bridge party for the ladies at the clubhouse during the afternoon, at which a number of beautiful prizes will be awarded, is in charge of Mrs. C. V. Hohenstein, and those who intend to take part should telephone her for reservations at Walnut 6937.

J. R. Cheshire, W. B. Peebles and H. D. Burroughs constitute the committee having in charge the games and stunts to be staged on the grounds during the afternoon. Many excellent prizes have also been secured for these events.

But the main interest centers around the annual golf tournament for the individual and team championship of the association. Several beautiful silver trophies are awarded every year in this event.

The 1926 officers of the association are: C. M. LeRoux, president; E. G. Beaudry, first vice president; Ed Yancey, second vice president; J. R. Cheshire, third vice president; J. B. Moore, fourth vice president.

ESSEX PRODUCTION UP FIFTY PER CENT

An increased production of 50 per cent in the daily output of the Essex six coach is announced to J. W. Goldsmith, of the Goldsmith-Becker company, Hudson-Essex distributors, in a communication just received from the Hudson Motor Car company.

The May output of Essex coaches under the new increased schedule will be 16,675, or 2,080 more than the entire Essex production in May of a year ago, which at that time broke all records for volume.

"This increase of business is on the coach model, of which more than 300,000 are in service," said Mr. Goldsmith. "The Essex coach, pioneer of closed car comforts at open car cost, has led all rivals in cars of its price.

"This car, with its six cylinder motor built under famous Super-Six patents and with its closed car advantage, entered the field of low priced fours with open bodies. Its history since then has been one of increasing volume records in such rapid succession that today's announcement of expansion in output is but a natural expectancy.

"Last year the Essex was sold by 3,700 dealers. Today's representation exceeds 4,800. These dealers in all parts of the country are reporting such a rapidly growing demand that the announcement of the increased output became a necessity. The report of retail sales in April showed that the public bought 10,000 cars in excess of the factory output."

The Joyous Satisfaction That Only Cadillac Can Give

The young man who drove his first car yesterday is no fresher in his enthusiasm than the owner of a new, 90-degree, eight-cylinder Cadillac who has driven the Cadillac year after year for a dozen years.

The one extracts joy from all the delusions of inexperience—the other from the ripened realization that all of his experience has brought to him nothing so fine as this new, 90-degree, eight-cylinder Cadillac.

The Cadillac market is bubbling over everywhere with delight in this new expression of Cadillac fitness for fine manufacture—and growing in sales volume as no Cadillac before ever inspired it to grow. New hosts of owners are coming to the 90-degree Cadillac because a new buying spirit is abroad in the land—a spirit which has weighed its own less happy experience against the everlasting satisfaction of the Cadillac owner—and found that other experience lacking.

It seems strange to say at this late date that Cadillac has come into its own—but it is true because the experience of years has shown to thousands that the oft-repeated promise of equality with Cadillac has not been fulfilled.

All the millions of car owners in America have always admitted that their own private estimate of the last word in motoring was Cadillac—Now thousands are acting upon their conviction because they fully realize at last that there is no substitute for the deep satisfaction of Cadillac ownership.

GRAHAM BROTHERS NEW G-BOY TRUCK IS WELL RECEIVED

The public's reception of the new Graham Brothers G-Boy one-ton truck, recently announced, fully equalled expectations of Dodge Brothers dealers, judging by the flood of telegrams and letters received by the factory in Detroit.

There was much comment on the wide adaptability of the bodies, six complete practical body designs being available. The new G-Boy chassis, powered with the dependable Dodge Brothers engine, is offered at the unusual price of $885 f.o.b. Detroit.

The equitable distribution of the load was recognized as an important feature. The low hung chassis permits unusual ease of loading and unloading under all conditions.

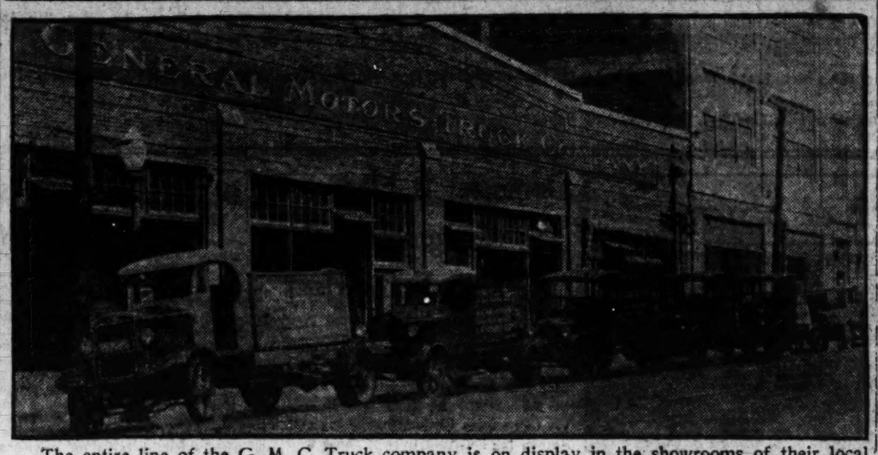

In the close inspection of the G-Boy it generally was conceded that the designers have left nothing undone for the convenience of the owner and driver. With all the new features embodied in the G-Boy no curtailment of load capacity was made.

The chassis specifications of the G-Boy stand out prominently and caused much comment on the sturdiness and the completeness of the equipment. The gross capacity is 2,750 pounds, including cab and body weights. The wheel base is 126 inches with a 56-inch tread, permitting a turning radius of 25 feet. The rear axle gear ratio is 5.1 to 1. Rated maximum speed is 25 miles an hour. The front springs are made from alloy steel, semi-eliptical, 37 inches long, two inches wide, with eight leaves. Rear springs are of alloy steel, semi-eliptical, 44 inches long, 2 1-2 inches wide and containing nine leaves.

Equipment includes improved all-steel flat back shroud with standard equipment instrument board; crowned sheet metal fenders, front and rear; full length running boards with splash shields; front bumper; tire carrier under rear of frame; spare rim; electric horn; two headlights with dimmers; tail light; instrument board light; license brackets; jack; high pressure grease gun; hand tire pump and complete set of tools.

The general verdict of the public, according to dealers, was that the new Graham Brothers G-Boy truck will fill a definite need in commercial transportation, and with the price so low, a decidedly widespread distribution is certain to follow.

G. M. C.'s Complete Line Displayed

The entire line of the G. M. C. Truck company is on display in the showrooms of their local branch, 205 Ivy street. The above shows them lined up in front of their home and includes their entire line from the G. M. C. "Big Brute" to their lightest one-ton.

TIE IN ATTENDANCE RECORDS OF SCHOOLS

An unusual situation developed in attendance statistics in Atlanta schools for the week ending May 21, when two schools tied for second and fifth place honors and Peeples Street school, with an attendance percentage of 96.6, established the high record for the week.

Moreland Avenue and Pryor Street schools tied for second place with percentages of 96.5 each, and Bass Junior High school and Davis Street school for fifth place with 95.7 per cent. Harris Street school took fourth place with 95.9. Another unusual disclosure of the tabulation is that there is less than 1 per cent difference between the winner and the fifth place.

SPRING WEATHER BOOSTS SALES

"With the warm weather actually here, the average motorist who has been driving an old car feels the urge for a new one. He wants to get out on the open road and enjoy the invigorating atmosphere and see the countryside blossoming forth in all its grandeur," states C. S. Thompson, of the Marmon Atlanta company, local Cleveland Six distributors.

"It has been said by one of the prominent motor car manufacturing officials that spring is the greatest automobile salesman the industry has. There is more truth than jest in that remark.

"Already buyers are finding it difficult to secure immediate delivery on some models. It is the same story every spring. Dealers generally throughout the country report lively buying and without a doubt many buyers of cars within the next few weeks will be unable to secure delivery upon placing an order.

"Motor car manufacturers throughout the industry report a healthy business condition; many working to top capacity to keep pace with the demand.

"The Cleveland Automobile company, manufacturers of the Cleveland Six, report keen sales for closed models, one of the most popular models of the Cleveland line being the series 31 sedan which, like all models, features the one-shot automatic chassis lubrication system. This is the lowest priced sedan in the Cleveland Six line.

"With increased buying activity reported generally at all points, wise buyers are placing orders early for new cars. If this season lives up to traditions it will be a wise practice to follow to insure early delivery of your new motor car, regardless of what make of car you decide to buy."

FULTON COUNTY HIGH ALUMNI TO BANQUET

Election of officers and formulation of plans for the ensuing year will feature the annual banquet, at 7 o'clock Tuesday night of the Fulton County High School Alumni association in the grill of the Piedmont hotel.

Members of the county board of education, County School Superinent Jere M. Wells, members of the senior class of Fulton High school, William Hopkins and Guy A. Moore, past presidents of the institution, and W. F. Dykes, principal, will be honor guests. Short remarks will be heard from a few of the guests.

Music will be furnished by the Forrest Hill Golf Club orchestra. Guy A. Moore will preside.

Officers of the association are. J. S. Heard, Jr., president; Miss Elizabeth Hudson, vice president; Miss Anise Troth, secretary; Albert Hapholdt, treasurer and Ralph Moody, historian.

Mr. Heard is in charge of arrangements for the banquet.

STEARNS-KNIGHT INCREASE PRODUCTION

Under the direction of new and powerful financial interests which became identified with the F. B. Stearns Co., of Cleveland, Ohio, late in the past year, the production plans of this organization for 1926 have been materially increased over any previous marks, and are already reaching record figures with the start into the present period of heavy buying.

While history of this organization, covering 27 years of continuous development in the automobile industry, has been one of steady growth and firm financial strength, it is only within the past four months that adequate facilities have been made available to build more than a restricted number of cars each year.

The products of the company have been as approximately custom built as could be the case with a manufacturer organized to serve the American car-buying public. This has pertained to coach construction as well as to mechanical construction. With the new and powerful financial backing which controls the operations of the organization at the present time, the past high standards of excellence and individuality are being maintained in every every way, while the manufacturing equipment is being added to materially.

Distribution, which hitherto has been restricted to the larger buying centers, with comparatively little attempt having been made to reach into the smaller but none the less responsive fields, is being rapidly expanded under the urge of buyers who want dealer facilities available and who are insisting on the qualities which this product brings to them. With the growth in favor of the Knight sleeve-valve power plant among buyers of motor cars in all fields during the past seven years has come an increase in the demand for the Stearns-Knight which has kept these cars almost at the premium point for some time.

ATLANTA TILE DEALERS TO ATTEND CONVENTION

Atlanta and Georgia will be well represented at the semi-annual meeting of the Southeastern Association of Tile Dealers at Chattanooga, Tenn., Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, it was announced Saturday by D. L. Carmichael, secretary, who lives here.

Headquarters will be at the Signal Mountain hotel, and the program will include a banquet and trips to historic southern battlefields. Automobiles will meet each train to take the dealers to Signal Mountain. Women and other guests of the association will be well entertained.

The general offices of the association are located in Atlanta and entertainments are being arranged by J. Gad Smith, of Chattanooga, and R. K. Thrower and G. K. Fackler, of the B. Mifflin Hood Brick company, of Atlanta, and Daisy, Tenn. Officers are J. R. McClamrock, of Greensboro, N. C., president; H. T. Brownell, of Birmingham, vice president, and Mr. Carmichael, secretary.

TOURIST BUREAU GIVEN HIGH PRAISE BY TEXTILE MEN

Atlanta as a convention-city and the Atlanta Convention and Tourist bureau as an agency skilled in handling gatherings and making visitors comfortable, were given high praise Saturday in messages to Frederic J. Paxon, president of the bureau, following three successful meetings in the past week.

"The American Cotton Manufacturers' association has just completed its 30th convention," said George Harris, president of the Exposition Cotton Mills and of the local association of textile men which acted as host to the visitors. "It was the expressed opinion that this was the most successful and pleasant convention it ever has held and the visitors gave great praise to the help of the convention bureau in making affairs run smoothly. The local association desires to thank you for the convention bureau's cooperation."

George Walker, president of the Atlanta Wholesale Grocers' association, and J. C. Kennedy, head of the Atlanta Retail Furniture Dealers' association, were lavish in praise of the work of "Cousin Fred" Houser and the bureau in assisting with the arrangements and in entertaining visitors to the large meetings last week.

Former Railroad "Y" Secretary Returns For Visit to City

Amazed at the growth of Atlanta during the last five years, W. A. Waggoner, of New Paris, Ohio, secretary emeritus of the Atlanta Railroad Y. M. C. A., stated he would spend a month here renewing old acquaintances.

During his visit he will be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Montgomery, of 239 Ponce de Leon avenue. For 28 years he held the secretaryship of the local organization and returned to his boyhood home when retired five years ago.

Mr. Waggoner declared he had heard Atlanta made many strides in the last few years, but he did not expect to find so many new skyscrapers and so much building in progress. He said realty developments in the northern section of the city were "wonderful and marvelous."

GOOD SERVICE BEGETS GOOD WILL

Good will of the owner is dependent nearly as much upon giving prompt, courteous and efficient service when needed as upon the value built into the car itself, according to F. E. Maffett, of the F. E. Maffett, Inc., local Dodge Brothers' dealer.

"The success of Dodge Brothers Motor car in gaining 'world-wide good will' is due largely," says Mr. Maffett, "to a clear perception from the start of the vital problems which would confront owners and dealers in the years to come—the years when vast numbers of their cars would have been built and be in service.

"The policy of continued refinement of one basic design played an important part in earning good will. It enabled Dodge Brothers to produce at a moderate cost a comfortable, attractive car capable of furnishing maximum value in dependable transportation. It insured the owner against the heavy depreciation loss resulting each year from the announcement of new, radically changed models. It simplified the work and reduced the cost of keeping the car in constant service over a period of years.

"Dodge Brothers service parts are manufactured along with parts required for new cars, with the unusually efficient special machines and tools used for volume production.

"This saving on production cost at the factory has enabled the dealer to make a very reasonable charge for service parts, and at the same time carry a stock large enough to take immediate care of the customer in almost any emergency.

"This realization of the importance of good will led Dodge Brothers to spare no expense and no effort in helping dealers render the best possible service at a fair price.

"Service schools conducted for over ten years, both at the factory and in the larger cities from coast to coast, have been attended by service managers, shop foremen and mechanics sent in by the dealers from the surrounding territories. The information regarding the latest and best in shop methods and labor-saving tools which these men have taken back with them to their respective service stations has helped to improve the already high standard of Dodge Brothers service everywhere.

"Dodge Brothers believed that it was possible to systematize and improve the practices and methods in their approved service stations to a point where the labor for every repair operation could be so standardized that the owner could know in advance the amount of charge before authorizing any work on his car.

"As a result of many years' intensive study of the flat rate problem the system and schedules which they introduced several years ago insure better work at lower prices and give the owner absolute protection against the possibility of overcharge.

"The success of the factory and of Dodge Brothers dealers and approved service stations everywhere in rendering entirely satisfactory service is evidenced by the generous approval accorded Dodge Brothers motor car—which is so aptly expressed in the words 'World Wide Good Will.'"

HUPP ADDS COUPE TO 6-CYLINDER LINE

A new two-passenger coupe for its rapidly selling six-cylinder line of cars, with rumble seat for two additional passengers, is announced by the Hupp Motor Car corporation. It lists at $1,385 at the factory. The car is already in production. Shipments to distributors and dealers are now being made.

In line with prevailing styles the coupe is finished in two color tones of genuine duco. Body is of a rich shade of ocean green with superstructure in black. A double bead with gold stripe at the body moulding accentuates the sweeping and pleasing curves of the body lines. Wood wheels are standard, with steel ones of lighter green, harmonizing with the body colors, optional. Standard upholstery is hand-crushed genuine Spanish leather. Platinum velour is optional.

The car is built with an exceptionally comfortable and wide seat in recognition of its all-around suitability as a salesman's car for long-distance driving. It is designed, also, to carry three passengers inside when that is preferable. The seat is 47 inches wide and is painstakingly constructed for contour, upholstering and cushioning. The rumble seat is unusual in several respects—its accessibility, comfort, 36-inch width and the ease with which the cushions may be removed entirely to make an entire rear deck available for suit cases, bags or bulky packages. Two aluminum steps are provided to facilitate easy entrance and exit.

Behind the interior seat and running practically the entire width of the car is a compartment for tools, packages and shoppers' bundles. The rear window may be fully lowered by regulator when desired. A golf compartment, with lock, is also built into the rear compartment, opening at the right side.

Equipment on the new model includes four-wheel brakes, gasoline gauge on dash, patented vision-ventilating one-piece windshiled with automatic cleaner, rear view mirror, snubbers, rear signal light and balloon tires. Chassis features also include thermostatic control of engine heat, patented vibration damper, gasoline filter and percolator oil filter.

Decision to produce the car follows the large sales of the 2-4 passenger coupe in the Hupmobile eight line. Demand from distributors and dealers for this new six model will necessitate immediate heavy ouutput the company reports, plans for which have already been drawn.

LUXURIOUS CAR FOR PHILADELPHIA MAYOR

In connection with the sesquicentennial celebration which is being observed in Philadelphia this year, the city of Philadelphia has just purchased for the use of the Hon. Mayor Kendrick a luxurious Pierce-Arrow enclosed drive landau, powered with the famous Pierce-Arrow dual-valve engine developing more than 100 horsepower.

A combination of blue and gold has been used as the color motif of this luxurious automobile, the whole effect being dignified and extremely striking. The exterior is finished in Daytona blue with belt and fenders in black and stripings in gold leaf. The exterior hardware carries out the color motif, being finished in brass and gold. The bows which support the landau top are also finished in brass, the gleaming metal making a splendid contrast against the brilliant black of the landau leather.

Since this is distinctly a formal car, the interior carries out the rich dignity of the exterior. A rich blue broadcloth with delicate gold stripe is used for the rear compartment upholstery. Narrow gold braid is used for door paneling and below the division window. All interior hardware is gold plated.

A gold clock, placed in such a position that it can be seen either by day or night, gives an additional touch of luxury to the interior of the rear compartment. A lazy-back pillow supported by cords is another departure from the usual. Two folding seats give the rear compartment five-passenger capacity. The seat and back of the chauffeur's compartment is finished in the same upholatery as is used in the rear compartment. The rest of the compartment is in black hand-buffed leather. The crest of city of Philadelphia is painted in colors on the rear compartment doors.

OTHER STATES' TAGS NO GOOD IN GEORGIA

Residents of Georgia are not permitted by law to operate motor vehicles in this state bearing a license tag purchased in another state. McLendon. Non-residents can operate cars bearing license tags of other states only 30 days. After the expiration of this period they are required to purchase a Georgia license.

"Circle Plan" Popular and Efficient.

Dividing the membership of woman's societies in the churches into smaller groups for the sake of increasing interest and efficiency has long passed beyond the experiment stage. This so-called "circle plan" has become so popular and universal that many may wish to know something of its origin. It may be confidently affirmed that Dr. E. H. Barnett, of sainted memory, pastor for years of the First Presbyterian church of Atlanta, should go down into history as the father of the "circle" movement in the southland. As pastor of his great church more than 30 years ago, he organized the W. M. S. into circles, providing for each a chairman or leader. Because of the marked success and development of those women, in all lines of church activities, the idea promptly spread throughout Atlanta, and today there is probably no W. M. S. of any size either in the city, state or in the south, where this plan is not the accepted and successful one.

As evidence of how thoroughly the Methodist women have adopted the circle work and are carrying it on to full fruition, Mrs. Wallace Rogers gives the readers of the Federated Church Woman's page a summary of the efficiency recommendations adopted officially at the North Georgia W. M. S. of the Methodist church on the plan of work for 1926.

—STATE EDITOR.

For the first time in the history of the organization, the North Georgia conference Woman's Missionary society of the M. E. church, south, has officially announced a plan for circle work which was recommended as a plan of work for 1926 by the extension committee, and has been adopted by the conference as a body. The plan is as follows:

1. The vice president of the Woman's Missionary society shall be general chairman of circles.

2. The chairman of each circle must be a member of the missionary society and must be selected by the executive committee of the missionary society.

3. Membership may include all women of the church and any other women who desire to become members.

4. Recommend that the membership of the circles shall be changed either annually or biennially.

5. At the meeting of the executive committee in December the total membership of the church (women) shall be divided into circles of equal number. The vice president of the missionary society shall assist the president in dividing the names of the women into three sections, according to their grade of interest and activity. These names shall be placed in three receptacles. The chairmen shall draw in rotation one name from each of the three receptacles until the number is exhausted. The new members who come into the church shall be divided equally among the circles. Business women's circles and circles in circuit missionary societies shall be exempt from changes in membership.

6. The finances shall include contributions to the connectional work of the missionary society and local work.

7. The programs of the circle shall include some form of Bible and mission study.

The Woman's council has issued a standard of excellence for circles in churches where this plan is being adopted.

Missionary Societies Of North Atlanta Have 2-Day Meeting

Mrs. Virlyn Moore, district secretary of the North Atlanta District Woman's Missionary Society of the M. E. church, south, presided over the two-days' session held at Wesley Memorial church last week. A one-day business meeting is held each quarter but the two-days' session is only an annual affair.

Various reports showed progress in many lines. Payne Memorial and Peachtree Roads had reached the quota in subscriptions to the Missionary Voice. Redan had doubled the number of subscribers to the Young Christian Worker.

Lawrenceville has organized a new group of young women with 15 members. Grace church has a new young people's organization with 25 members. First Methodist and Collins Memorial delegates recorded their names in the book of remembrance, which privilege is granted only those who have met their 35 per capita quota to the Bennett Memorial fund. Druid Hills was the only auxiliary having been recorded prior to this meeting.

In finances, north Atlanta always leads the conference and this first quarter they had made an increase of $250 over the amount paid in the first three months of 1925.

Judge John Humphries addressed the body on law enforcement and among other interesting things, he said that newspapers could render a great service by refusing to give publicity to criminals and that every person ought to use influence to decrease the tendency toward making heroes of criminals.

The Baptist women of the eighth district of the Atlanta association will hold their annual rally at the Kirkwood church Thursday, May 27, at 10 a. m. Mrs. W. A. Wall will conduct the devotional exercise. Special music will be rendered by Mrs. Boring and Mrs. Copeland, of Kirkwood.

Full reports will be given from each church in the district. Members of the executive board will talk on various phases of the work.

Outstanding features of the day will be talks from Miss Alvada Gunn, a missionary, who is home on a furlough, and Miss Nannie Lou McMichael, from the W. M. U. training school, Louisville.

A report from the Southern Baptist convention will be given by Mrs. J. L. Jackson, supervisor of the Kate P. Dawson Good Will center.

All women in the eighth district are urged to be present.

MRS. GEO. S. OAKES,
District Secretary.

Notes From Baptist W. M. U. Convention

W. M. U. proposes to celebrate in 1928 their 40th or ruby anniversary. A committee consisting of Mrs. Carter Wright, Alabama; Mrs. W. J. Neel, Georgia; Mrs. Eugene Levering, Maryland; Mrs. W. D. Pye, Arkansas; Mrs. H. M. Wharton, Maryland; Mrs. R. T. Anderson, Alabama, has been appointed to formulate plans. The slogan to be used is "A Woman's Missionary Society in Every Southern Baptist Church."

Mission literature—The goal set for Royal Service subscriptions was set for 66,375. The number obtained was 70,112. Georgia was one of the 12 states sending in more than its quota. This large circulation of our missionary literature is evidence of increased interest in Kingdom work.

Mission study classes—Georgia occupies third place in the list of states holding the greatest number of mission study classes. She holds first place in the number of official and honor seals.

The dominant note of the convention was "Tithing." On Wednesday morning Mrs. Carter Wright, president of Alabama union, brought a convincing message on "The Tithe; God's Law, Our Test and Opportunity." Voted to print in leaflet form.

Dr. W. M. Seay, pastor West End Baptist church, presented to the Southern Baptist convention the annual report of the W. M. U., at the close of which the W. M. U. delegates sang "Pay the Tithe," composed by Mrs. C. D. Creasman, Tennessee.

On Saturday, May 15, the 15th all-day annual session of the W. M. U. secretaries and field workers' council was held in the South Main Baptist church.

At 1 o'clock a beautiful luncheon was served. The union colors were most effectively carried out in every detail. The table was in the form of a T. Ten candles were placed at intervals on the table and these were simultaneously lighted by ten of our missionaries, guests of the council, thus impressing our minds with our mission as light-bearers. A delightful program of music and reading was given by local talent.

The banquet of the W. M. U. Training School Alumnae association was held on Friday evening, May 14 and was well attended.

Miss Willie Jean Stewart, elementary editor Sunday school board, Nashville, Tenn., was elected president.

Miss Julia Allen, young people's leader of Georgia, was elected secretary of the association.

Southern Baptist women have contributed $107,058 to the building fund of the Southern Baptist Theological seminary, $75,000 of which was given unconditionally in memory or honor of the union's six former presidents, viz: Miss M. E. McIntosh (Mrs. T. P. Bell), Mrs. A. M. Gwathmey, Mrs. Charles A. Stakely, Mrs. John A. Barker, Miss Fannie E. S. Heck and Mrs. W. C. James.

On Monday evening an impressive demonstration occurred of the union's work for and with the young people. Miss Juliette Mather was the principal speaker, a host of Houston's young people taking part in the demonstration, each of our junior organizations being represented. One episode consisted of brief messages from each state young people's leader. Music was furnished by the First Baptist orchestra.

For the closing session of the convention the principal theme was the cooperative program of Southern Baptists. The address of the afternoon was given by Mrs. J. M. Dawson, of Waco, Texas.

Mrs. Taul B. White, of Rome, Ga., and Mrs. R. K. Redwine, of Atlanta, Ga., were appointed field secretaries for the general union.

Park Street Society.

The missionary society of Park Street church had a wonderful treat at their last meeting when Dr. Guy King gave an informal talk on Latin America.

Having spent 26 years in Mexico and different parts of South America, he was competent to tell many interesting items of the history, life and customs of those countries.

The South Atlanta district meeting was brought back by Mrs. D. M. Therrell and Mrs. O. A. Sharpless.

We are proud to know that our auxiliary's name is placed on the memory book which is to be placed in the Belle Bennett memorial building.

Georgia Girls at Scarritt

Georgia has an unusually fine group of girls studying at the Scarritt College for Christian Workers, Nashville, Tenn., this year. There are 18 states and five foreign countries represented in the student body and Tennessee is the only state having a larger number than Georgia but South Carolina has the same number.

Scarritt is the property of the M. E. church, south, and the students are all preparing for definite Christian service, either in home or foreign fields. Two years' college work are required for entrance at Scarritt. Of the students there at the present time, 34 have already received their bachelor's degree and are candidates for the master of arts. Thirty-eight have at least two years' college work and are candidates for the bachelor of arts. Twenty-one are candidates for certificates and five are classified as special students.

Among the girls from Georgia are Miss Bert Winter, Bowersville; Miss Leah Hartley, Zebulon; Miss Laura Stillwell, Hapeville; Miss Bessie Oliver, home on furlough from Korea; Miss Matylde Wilson, Macon; Miss Alberta Wilson, Miss Pearl Edwards, Perry; Miss Mary Lou Barnwell, Arabi, and Miss Annie Concoules, Savannah.

Mrs. J. N. McEachern, Mrs. Luke Johnson and Miss Daisy Davies, all of Atlanta, are members of the board of directors of this great training center for missionaries.

Baptist Mission Study Items

REHOBOTH INSTITUTE.

The annual Mission Study institute held by women of the Rehoboth Baptist Woman's Missionary union April 28-30, at the First Baptist church, Macon, Ga., was most helpful and inspiring. The attendance was not so large this year as previously, due to illnesses, but those who were present found the time well spent. The meetings were held at the First Baptist church, though all the Baptist Missionary societies of Macon were joint hostesses to the out-of-town delegates and served delicious lunches. Mrs. Mark O'Daniel, of Macon, superintendent of the Rehoboth B. W. M. U., was in charge during the absence of Mrs. J. A. Wyche, mission study chairman, who was ill.

The following books were taught: For W. M. U.—"All the World in All the Word," by Mrs. J. C. Midyett, Macon; "Stewardship of Life," Mrs. F. T. Vincent, Macon; "New Days in Latin America," by Mrs. F. W. Withoft, Fort Valley. For intermediates—"Gospel Triumphs," by Mrs. R. L. Bivins, Macon. Juniors, "Brave Adventures," Mrs. A. P. Montague, Macon. Sunbeams—"Children of Mission Lands," by Miss Lillian Fulghum, Macon.

At the meeting of the East Central Divisional institute at Milledgeville, Ga., April 27-28, the mission study department had a plendid display of posters, charts, maps, etc., with the leading mission study books of the year on hand for all ages and classes of work.

In the conference work the mission study quiz was led by the divisional mission study chairman, Mrs. E. G. Walton, of Stone Mountain, Ga. In the two years since this department was given a chairman there has been established a divisional library of used mission study books contributed from over the division and now numbering 192 copies. Of 166 books on hand March, 1925, to March, 1926, there were sent out 183 copies (some going several times), 26 classes being held from these and many individuals taking one or two books each.

Miss Clara Davis, mission study chairman of the Washington association, had some splendid posters there, and will hold a mission study institute for the Washington association on June 7 with the First Baptist church, Tennille, Ga.

The advanced course of mission study class of the Atlanta association was organized by Mrs. J. D. Rhodes, mission study chairman of the Atlanta association, Saturday morning, May 15. Ten names were enrolled.

Mrs. E. G. Walton, of the Stone Mountain association, was elected president, and the class, with Mrs. Walton for president and Mrs. Rhodes for mission study leader, will without a doubt, be both interesting and successful. Mrs. H. A. Heard, of the Atlanta association, was elected secretary and treasurer.

While the class is organized in the Atlanta association by that association's mission study chairman, Mrs. J. D. Rhodes, it is not confined to that association for membership. All ladies of all the associations of Georgia, who are ready for the advanced course of mission study, are cordially invited to join the class.

The next meeting will be held in Rich's conference room on Thursday, June 3, beginning promptly at 10 o'clock and ending promptly at 11:30 o'clock.

The lesson will be the first three chapters of "Clash of Color," and Mrs. Rhodes requests that all members secure the book and read the chapters before the meeting.

West End, Atlanta.

The members of the W. M. S. of the West End Baptist church are rejoicing over the pennant they won as an A-1 standard society, having all the junior organizations and having fulfilled all the requirements of the standard of excellence of the W. M. U. This is a wide-awake organization. They are doing fine work along the line of mission study.

Oakland City.

An interesting mission study class will be held at the Oakland City Baptist church on Monday, May 24, beginning at 10:30. The ladies of the W. M. S. have invited the members of several neighboring churches to join them in this study. "In Royal Service" will be the book studied and all are cordially invited to attend. The ladies will take box lunches and spend a profitable day in study and fellowship.

Mothers and Daughters' Week Is Observed.

Under the leadership of the efficient chairman of program, Miss Martha Quick, a most impressive observance of mothers' and daughters' week was held at the First Christian church instead of the regular church night meeting on Wednesday evening, May 12. If numbers are an indication of zeal, we must have our share, since 223 folks signed up for the mothers' and daughters' banquet and when the final count was taken, there were 302 present.

The rumor had spread that the fathers and sons were to have entire charge of the culinary department, so those who had not planned to come for the program were there to satisfy that very human instinct—curiosity. And they were not disappointed.

The program started auspiciously with a group of songs by the famous Emory Glee club quartet; beautiful tributes to "Mother" were given by several young girls, a violin and vocal solo were delightful features, while three numbers were sung by the assembly, the words honoring "Mother," being set to old familiar tunes.

It was another occasion for emphasizing that "home-keeping hearts are happiest."

Parent-Teachers of All Saints.

Mrs. S. H. Askew brought to the Parent-Teachers' association of All Saints' parish a message which stirred to the depths of her soul every member present at the meeting held Monday afternoon in the home of the president, Mrs. Sims Bray.

Mrs. Arthur Tufts spoke interestingly of parent-teacher work as applied to the church school and was followed by John T. Hancock, superintendent of All Saints' Sunday school, who stressed the importance of accredited teacher training. All Saints' church school already has a high per cent of standardized teachers. At the conclusion of Mr. Hancock's remarks Miss Rosa Woodberry announced the gift of a scholarship to the summer school at Sewanee, Tenn., by Mrs. John MacDougald in memory of her mother, Mrs. Nellie Peters Black.

Demorest Is Host As Congregational Young Folks Meet

The third annual Christian life conference for young people has recently been held in the Congregational church at Demorest. As these conferences are to promote Christian thinking and deepen the spiritual lives of those who attend, no more ideal location could have been chosen than that at Demorest where they might at any time lift up their eyes to the hills of north Georgia.

The program quite properly began with a get-together supper and social on Friday night. Everyone was in good form from the La Grange delegation whose long drive had in no way diminished their enthusiasm to the Demorest representatives whose noise was truly noble in volume and subject matter. Atlanta was a credit to those who sent them, and in all one might say if laughing, singing, cheering and eating of a royal meal in between times gives a good time those young folks had it.

Saturday saw them listening to a thought-stimulating Bible hour conducted by Dr. D. Witherspoon Dodge, an address by Rev. E. R. Parra, from El Paso, Texas. Then came discussion. Any who attend gatherings of young people in these stirring times know what a really thoughtful discussion by them on the relation of young people to the local church and Christian citizenship can be. They had it.

Saturday afternoon saw about 70 of them cheerful in the knowledge that boxes of eats were safely stowed in one of the cars, rolling over to Tallulah Falls. Oh-ing and ah-ing over the scenery, eating again, and worshiping in a vesper service in one of "God's first temples" made an afternoon so full that it was a race back to Demorest to be there in time for the program planned by the Piedmont college Y. W. C. A. and Life Service band.

It was a privilege to have Dr. W. Knighton Bloom, from New York, to preach the convention sermon on Sunday morning and conduct the commissioning and communion service in the afternoon. The last might almost be called the mountain top of the conference. For then we saw the splendid group of young people who go out for summer service dedicated to "making life count for most." And could a finer thought go with any group of young people, as they went back to the plains of every-day living again!

This offering which is designated as the "Master's fund," is given annually by Daughters of the King throughout the world at Whitsuntide in commemoration of the coming of the Holy Spirit.

Young Methodists Hold District Meeting Here

Th young people of the organized Methodist missionary societies in the North Atlanta district were guests of Mrs. Virlyn Moore, their secretary, at luncheon on Tuesday afternoon in the dining room of Wesley Memorial church. More than 100 young people with their superintendents and a few visitors were seated. An attractive program was given by the young people with splendid talks on consecration, stewardship, prayer and service. The visiting speaker of the afternoon was Rev. Charles L. Bass, who paid a beautiful tribute to the young people and what they mean to the churches.

Of the 10 groups in the district, 9 were represented, some having as many as 40 delegates. A banner had been offered for the society having the largest attendance on percentage basis and this was awarded to Clarkston, because of 100 per cent attendance.

According to the conference plan for the young people's work this year, each district secretary has been asked to appoint a young people's leader for her district to assist the conference young people's superintendent. Mrs. Thurman, superintendent of young people of the Druid Hills church, has been given this position for the North Atlanta district and was present at this meeting.

The meeting was so thoroughly enjoyed and thought to be so worth-while that it was voted to be an annual affair.

Briefly Told

The many friends throughout the state of Mrs. W. W. Stark, of Commerce, Ga., "stewardship" superintendent of the Georgia Baptist W. M. U., are distressed to know of her continued illness.

Mrs. James L. Keys, president of the Woman's auxiliary of the Georgia Baptist hospital, is reported as recovering slowly from a painful indisposition.

Officers of the B. W. M. U., Mrs. W. J. Neel president, Mrs. A. F. McMahon, corresponding secretary, and Miss Julia Allen Young, people's leader, returned last Tuesday after attending the annual W. M. U. meetings of S. B. C. in Houston, Texas.

Mrs. H. M. Wharton, of Baltimore, Md., recording secretary of the southwide B. W. M. U., returned from Houston and is in the city as guest of relatives. Dr. H. M. Wharton will preach today, both morning and evening, at Ponce de Leon Avenue Baptist church.

The last of the 1926 spring rallies of the Atlanta B. W. M. U. (the eighth district) will meet with the Kirkwood church on Thursday, May 27.

Of interest to many friends is the announcement of the marriage of Miss Mary Lee Ayers, youngest daughter of Dr. and Mrs. T. W. Ayers, of China, to Lieutenant Gannon, of the United States army, on May 11, at the residence of her sister, Mrs. L. A. Pitman, 172 Myrtle street, Atlanta. Lieutenant and Mrs. Gannon will be at home at Fort Sill, Okla.

The women of the Grace Methodist have made 1,000 tray covers for Wesley Memorial hospital.

Mrs. R. J. Atkinson, vice president of the North Georgia conference, Woman's Missionary society of the M. E. church, was a visitor at the annual meeting of the Florida Woman's conference in Orlando, and was on the program at the banquet given the delegates.

Mrs. Hal Lawson, of Abbeville, district secretary of the Cordele district of the South Georgia conference Woman's Missionary society of the M. E. church, south, has been visiting in the city and attended the annual meeting of the North Atlanta district at Wesley Memorial church.

Eighteen boys and girls of the primary department of the Druid Hills Methodist church, under the leadership of their superintendent, Mrs. W. A. Albright, visited the Decatur Orphan's home on Mothers' day. Each child carried a baby doll beautifully dressed and presented them to 18 little embryo mothers to fondle and cherish as their very own.

Calvary Methodist church conducted a standard training school for Sunday school workers last week. East Point, College Park, Bethany Park Street, Lakewood Heights and Calvary were the churches having representatives attending, making a total of 65 enrolled. Of the 65, credits toward the gold seal diploma were given 45. The school ran for five nights with two hours earnest study each evening. Fourteen members of the Woman's Missionary society availed themselves of this opportunity.

Miss Sze, president of the Woman's Missionary conference, of China, who is a student at Scarritt college for Christian workers, will be one of the platform speakers at the School of Missions, Lake Junaluska, N. C., in July. Miss Sze attended the annual meeting of the North Georgia conference Woman's Missionary society of the M. E. church, south, and was made a life member of this conference.

A most delightful afternoon was spent by a very large crowd of women at Inman Park church Wednesday when circle No. 2 of the missionary society entertained at a lemon party. Music by Mrs. L. G. Martin, readings by Mrs. J. S. Kirk were among the many attractive features of the program. Mrs. Brownlee was hostess and she was assisted by Mrs. C. A. Rauschenberg, Sr., Mrs. Hanson, Mrs. Bull and Mrs. Cunningham.

Mrs. J. C. White, of the South Atlanta district, Mrs. L. M. Awtrey, of the Marietta district, and Mrs. J. F. Fowler, of the Dalton district, were the visiting secretaries attending the North Atlanta district meeting of Methodist women last week.

What Are You Studying?

HISTORY, mathematics, literature, languages, science? In your whole curriculum, there is no lesson more important than how to guard your health. Long after your hard-won French vocabulary is forgotten, you will be putting into daily practice—if you are wise—the rules of health.

School work, with its continual studying, its sports, dances and social affairs demands a vigorous body. How discouraging it is to miss the good times. And sometimes, how unnecessary.

First of all, then, learn the lesson of health. Find out what fresh air will do, exercise, sleep and proper food. Many school girls have learned that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped them to find the health they needed and has made their school days happier.

"I gave my fifteen year old daughter, Louise, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it did her a wonderful lot of good. She had been out of school for four months. I read the advertisements of the Vegetable Compound, and since she has taken it she has improved and has gone back to school again. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to other mothers with girls who are not as strong as they should be."

THE CONSTITUTION'S REAL ESTATE REVIEW

CONDUCTED IN THE INTEREST OF DEVELOPMENT OF ATLANTA AND THE SOUTH

Leading Home Developers Hope for Zone Adjustment For Residential Sections

G. F. Willis and P. C. McDuffie, Big Owners, Believe Way Will Be Found

BY PAUL JONES.

Following the recent supreme court decision nullifying Atlanta's zoning ordinance, several of the leading residential developers in the metropolitan district last week gave out statements expressing the hope that Atlanta property owners may find a way under the police power of the municipality to protect property from encroachments of business.

George F. Willis, owner and builder of Avondale Estates, one of the most beautiful home developments in the south, declares the validity of the ordinance restricting the city in several zones has been questioned for some time, but in face of that the decision came as a distinct surprise.

P. C. McDuffie, owner of Garden Hills, another large developer of Atlanta residential property, gave out an interview in which he expressed hope that the property owners inside the city limits will find a way to combat the decision and to protect the holders from the intrusion of various kinds of business establishments.

Mr. Willis Said:

"The recent decision of the supreme court nullifying Atlanta's zoning ordinance comes to me as a surprise, although I have been aware for some years that the validity of the law had been seriously questioned by some of our best legal minds.

"It brings about a most unfortunate situation and unless the residents of our beautiful residential sections can find some means to legally protect themselves against the encroachments of business and other establishments that detract from the value of their properties, this decision will have a most unhappy effect. It is my earnest hope that some new law can be devised that will make such a situation impossible.

"Of course, I believe in meeting the legitimate ends of business and as the city expands through its natural growth and development it will be to the best interests of the residents of certain residential sections now comparatively close in to convert their homes into business properties, as the residents of Peachtree, West Peachtree, Spring and Ponce de Leon avenue have done in the last ten years.

"In such residential sections as Druid Hills, Morningside, Garden Hills, Ansley Park and Avondale Estates, the residents are not confronted with this problem. The residents of practically all modern developments are protected by restrictions incorporated in their deeds. In Avondale Estates ten segregated blocks have been set aside and dedicated to business and in no other section will it be possible to erect any business house, apartment house or other establishment. I don't believe the legality of such restrictions ever has been questioned."

P. C. McDuffie Said:

"The recent decision of the supreme court regarding the zoning ordinanec has left several sections of the city and many property owners within the city limits in a quandary. Whether it will affect values remains to be seen. It is also a matter of conjecture whether the municipality will be able to regulate matters of this kind under the wide prerogatives permitted under the police power. It is self-evident proposition that citizens should be permitted to govern general conditions that apply to their immediate community, and in this, as in all other things American, the majority should rule. The decision has played into the hands of the modern residential developer, who with a large subdivision lying outside the city limits, but within the metropolitan district, stipulates certain restrictions and safeguards in every sales contract and deed.

"Every home in Garden Hills and in other high-class residential tracts is protected permanently from the intrusion of anything that would decrease the value of the property for resale.

"I hope the city will be able to find a way to protect property owners from those things that make home communities less desirable.

"Atlanta is known as one of the greatest home cities in the world and we should do all we can to hold and enhance that reputation. We should hold to our sobriquet 'The City of Beautiful Homes.'"

RED SEAL PLAN EXPLAINED.

The national Red Seal Wiring plan, operated by the Atlanta Electrical league, will be incorported in 100 homes that will be constructed in Avondale Estates by the Flagler company as another advantageous feature in their plans to offer homes of distinct character.

The operation of the plan in any community means that any house or apartment which conforms to a definite standard specification, assures the purchaser that that home is adequately and correctly wired for the comfortable use of electricity. Homes eligible to carry the Red Seal emblem are inspected during every phase of the wiring installation, assuring proper placement of the "convenience outlets" and safety.

"Convenience in this, the electrical age, enters the home on electrical wires, but in order to secure the full advantage of this "genie of the lamp," electricity, the home should be wired with a definite view of the many uses to which electrical services may be put. Not least among its role of usefulness is the household servants. The increasing types of labor-saving devices, day by day, and year by year, are taking household management out of the drudgery class and making it an interesting profession. Portable lamps make it easily possible to have a pleasing variety of lighting effects, brilliant bits of colorful light to add to the attractiveness of the home."

J. R. Smith Calls Meeting Of City Real Estate Board

J. R. Smith, president of the Atlanta Real Estate board, announced Saturday the officers and directors will hold a luncheon meeting at 12:30 o'clock Thursday.

This is the regular monthly meeting of officers and directors of the real estate board and the general routine of matters are to be presented for the approval of the directors. Many other matters pertaining to the efficient and successful conduct of the real estate board and its activities will be decided upon.

Reports will be heard from the advertising committee, of which H. H. Robinson is chairman; the finance committee and Tulsa convention committee, of which Frank C. Owens is chairman; the associate members committee, of which E. M. Chapman is chairman; the membership committee, of which M. C. Kiser is chairman, and others.

President Smith states that he is anxious that every director and officer be present at the meeting Thursday, as 20 new members will come up for election to the board. He also states that delegates will be elected to attend the convention of the national association at Tulsa, and that other important questions in regard to the convention will be discussed.

The luncheon meeting will begin promptly at 12:30 and last for one hour. All directors and officers are urged to bear this in mind and attend without fail.

Walthall Speaks To Atlanta Realty Men at Luncheon

W. P. Walthall of the Adair Realty and Trust company, addressed members of the Real Estate board Thursday afternoon on "The Art of Closing." The speaker, who has had many years' experience in selling real estate, was well qualified to talk on this subject.

Mr. Walthall stressed the importance of giving all facts, whether good or bad, with reference to the property when making a real estate transaction and eliminate any possibility of dissatisfaction in the future.

He dealt with real estate as a fundamental commodity, its desirability as an investment, and brought out the fact that in every development contemplated by man real estate plays a big part. He advised real estate men to take every opportunity to equip themselves efficiently to carry on their daily occupation.

The meeting was the last of a series of nine dealing with the "selling of real estate," the course beginning in March. Over fifty members registered for the lectures.

J. R. Smith, the president, states that the interest manifested in this activity is an indication of the seriousness with which the members look upon their profession and is evidence of the effort of each to prepare himself to render satisfactory service.

The series was conducted under auspices of the associate members' division, of which Edward M. Chapman is chairman.

GOVERNMENT TESTS LATHING MATERIALS

Whether or not the plaster in a home proves permanent depends largely on the kind of lath to which it is applied. Unless the proper combination of lath and plaster is used, the wall-surface not only will crack but will fall, ruining the appearance of the room, marring furniture, necessitating costly and dirty repairs, and possibly injuring members of the household. Cracked or broken plaster also lowers the market value of a house.

So important is the lathing and plastering of a house that Uncle Sam has interested himself in the problem. Tests have been conducted at the bureau of standards of the department of commerce to find out how tightly plaster adheres to various types of lath. A machine was employed, which showed the number of pounds of force per square inch needed to pull plaster from the various kinds of lath.

Results have been announced by the bureau of standards. The plaster separated from sheet metal lath at a force of 1.6 pounds per square inch; from wood lath, at 2.1 pounds; from both fiber board and sheet metal strips on bituminous composition, at 2.3 pounds; from woven wire lath, at 2.4 pounds. It adhered to expanded metal lath until a force of 4.3 pounds was applied; on wood lath with composition backing, up to 4.8 pounds, and on plaster board, up to a pressure of 6 pounds per square inch.

This means, according to the report, that plaster applied to plaster board has a "factor of safety," as engineers call it, of 144. The factor of safety with expanded metal lath is 103, and with wood lath on composition backing, 115. Ordinary gypsum plaster, applied according to standard practice, was used in all these tests.

Plaster board, which showed the greatest strength in combination with plaster, is commonly called "roch lath," because it consists of large units of the mineral, gypsum, encased in a heavy waterproof binder. These boards are nailed directly to the studs in frame construction, or to furring strips in other types of buildings, are cut to fit odd-shaped spaces, and are covered with three coats of plaster.

Whereas, with other types of lath, part of the plaster is forced through to form a "key" or clinch, none of the plaster is lost from this cause with the "rock lath." Because the mineral of which it is made is incombustible, it acts as a fire-stop in the walls; and it helps keep the home warm in winter and cool in the summer, because gypsum is one of the best natural insulators known.

Local Realtors Plan for Trip To Tulsa, Okla.

G. F. Willis, developer of Avondale Estates, was one of the speakers at the Atlanta Real Etate board luncheon at the Ansley hotel Thursday afternoon. He outlined the huge home development now being carried on in Avondale and the advantages offered the home buyer.

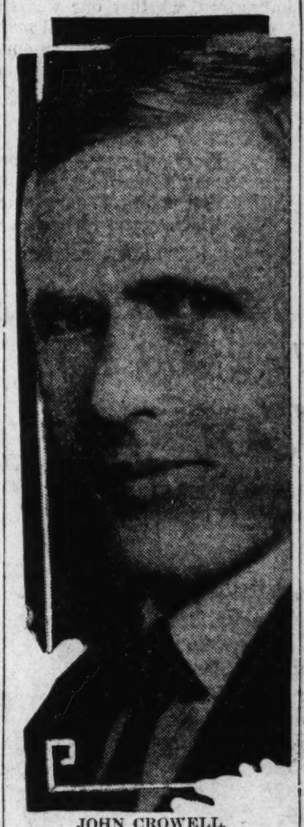

Frank C. Owens, chairman of the Tulsa convention committee, told of the plans for a large delegation to attend from Atlanta.

He stated the convention will begin Tuesday, June 8, and end Friday, June 11. Present indicatons are that 20 or more from the Atlanta board will attend. They will have their own Pullman, leaving Atlanta at 4:35 o'clock Sunday afternoon, June 6, arriving in Tulsa early Tuesday morning. The return will be made by leaving there any time after 1 o'clock Friday up to 11 o'clock the same night.

A program of entertainment has been arranged in Tulsa that includes a two-day trip to the 101 Ranch, owned by the Miller brothers of wild west fame. A rodeo will be given each day displaying in every way the true western life, and Indian dances portraying the early life of the Indians in that part of the country, will be held daily. A social program has been arranged for each night and special trips planned to go through the Ozarks, down through Texas to Brownsville.

Each division will have its own meetings, besides the general sessions, and helpful topics will be discussed. Mr. Owens states that invitations were sent to the other boards in the state to join with the Atlanta delegatino,

LEASE EXPERT

JOHN CROWELL.

John Crowell has an unusually successful record in the business lease field, his name having appeared in several recent announcements of important leases. With the excellent organization of Turman-Brown and their splendid reputation built up through years of service in the Atlanta real estate field, his many friends predict for Mr. Crowell an excellent future in his new connection.

BORAH TO FORCE LAUSANNE TREATY VOTE IN SENATE

Washington, May 22.—(AP)—President Coolidge was formally advised today by Chairman Borah, of the senate foreign relations committee, that the Lausanne treaty with Turkey would be forced to a vote in the senate at this session.

Some republican leaders are hopeful that a vote can be obtained without prolonged discussion, but the democratic leaders who are opposing ing the measure assert that there will be at least a month of debate if a vote is sought.

ROUGH SEAS CAUSE DELAY IN FLIGHT OF DUGGAN PLANE

New York, May 22.—(AP)—Rough seas this afternoon caused a postponement of the scheduled test flight of Bernardo Duggan, wealthy Argentine sportsman, in the seaplane with which he intends to fly from New York to Buenos Aires.

Everything was in readiness and the motor of the new Savoia flying boat tuned up perfectly when it was decided that the heavy seas would make landing hazardous.

United States Supreme Court Declines Appeal On Prohibition of Stores In Residential Sections.

Washington, May 3.—(Special.) Atlanta's zoning law was declared unconstitutional in effect today, when the United States supreme court refused to review the decision of the Georgia supreme court, which held that the zoning ordinance was not constitutional.

The review was asked by the city of Atlanta in the case brought by Mrs. Chauncey Smith, a property owner, who was refused an injunction against the city by the superior court of Fulton county, and took the case to the state supreme court, which held that the zoning ordinance and the enabling act passed by the state legislature both were unconstitutional, and granted an injunction against enforcement of the ordinance.

In its argument for a review, the city contended that most of the legal decisions annulling zoning ordinances have affected ordinances which had no enabling acts to support them.

Mrs. Smith wished to erect business buildings on property she owned on Piedmont avenue near Boulevard Park, and action was brought against her on the ground that the zoning law prevented business buildings there, as it was restricted under the city law to residences.

The city held that the law was entirely legal. Mrs. Smith, in her brief claimed that she had been damaged. The state supreme court granted her an injunction under the "due process of law" requirement of the constitution.

OTHER GEORGIA CITIES AFFECTED.

Decision of the United States supreme court in refusing the city of Atlanta an appeal from the decision of the supreme court of Georgia holding unconstitutional and void the zoning act in so far as it prohibits erection of stores in residential sections, means that other municipalities of the state which have adopted such ordinances cannot enforce them.

Courtland S. Winn, assistant city attorney, said Monday night that he had not seen the complete ruling of the United States supreme court and that he was not familiar with just what its effect will be. He said that if a hearing was refused on the writ of certiorari, the United States court held that the supreme court of the state is final authority, and this in effect would void the whole ordinance.

The litigation was started in Atlanta when Mrs. Chauncey Smith, owner of a tract near Boulevard Park, sought to develop the area into a warehouse site. She was prevented temporarily by the city zoning ordinance and sought relief in the courts. The case was handled in the Georgia courts and the nation's highest tribunal by Attorney George Spence and the firm of Little, Powell, Smith & Goldstein. The property owner's contentions were upheld by both courts.

Mr. Spence said Monday the principal contention of Mrs. Smith was that a business place was not a nuisance and that police powers of a municipality or state did not permit prevention of the opening of a place of business. If such a place of business proved to be a nuisance, it could be abated, he explained. Mrs. Smith claimed that the zoning ordinance resulted in confiscation of property without due compensation.

The supreme court held that since the Georgia courts had ruled the law unconstitutional, there was no reason for it to consider whether the act violated the federal constitution.

ZONING IS HELD VOID AGAIN

The Atlanta zoning law was dealt another blow by the Georgia supreme court Thursday, when the court held that the city had no right to prevent M. T. Morrow from using a garage in the rear of his home at 55 Norcross street in connection with his tire repair business.

The supreme court held that the use of the garage for the repair of automobile tires did not jeopardize neighboring property or constitute a nuisance, and added:

"In so far as the Atlanta zoning ordinance of 1922 seeks to deprive the owner of real estate thereafter designated as being in an apartment zone of the right to use such realty in the pursuit of a business recognized as lawful, such ordinance is unconstitutional and void."

Morrow operates a tire business at 50 Edgewood avenue, and claimed that he did not have room there to repair tires, so placed machinery in the garage at his home, under a permit issued two years before the zoning act was passed.

Atlanta's zoning law has been declared unconstitutional by the Georgia supreme court. The U. S. Supreme court in vacating an appeal on May 3rd, makes it possible for a property owner to erect any kind of a building, store, garage, etc., on the property owned. If you are not protected by restrictions specified in your deed, you may wake up tomorrow morning next door to a potato chip factory, or a fish market---who knows?

—BUT—

The man who owns a home in one of the restricted subdivisions listed below has the same interest and pride in maintaining his home and his neighborhood as YOU HAVE and the same watchfulness to conserve the value of his investment and the character of his community. He has subscribed to the same restrictions as you and other property owners.

This is one of the distinct advantages to you in becoming an investor or home owner in a beautiful and restricted residential community. Each deed to property in the subdivisions listed below has written therein ample restriction to protect the present owner and the prospective purchaser.

You Will Do Well To Give This Thought Serious Consideration In the Selection of Your Homesite

If you are about to purchase a site for your future residence, the only way to assure yourself that the character of the property shall not be converted over night from a residential community into an unrestricted business area is to buy that property in one of Atlanta's restricted residential subdivisions.

Turner Properties Are Protected Properties

Hazards of Zoning Law Avoided

ON May 3rd, the U. S. Supreme Court declined an appeal on the zoning law, thereby permitting property owners to erect any kind of a business or commercial enterprise they desire, regardless of location, provided the deed carries no restrictions to the contrary.

THIS means that your present next-door neighbor may erect a filling station, or a grocery store on his property, and thereby reduce the value of your home and investment. There is nothing for you to do except sit calmly by and watch the proceedings with a sad heart.

This Is Not True in the Turner Property

BEAUTIFUL homes have been built in the Turner Properties. "On that Mile of Land connecting Morningside with Druid Hills" and many more are to be erected within a short time. Each of these home owners are protected by restrictions which secure him against undesirable and unsightly buildings and homes of inferior construction. Each deed to property in this development is restricted to homes, except those sections set aside for the exclusive use of commercial stores and churches.

DRIVE out today and see the many beautiful lots and the six sample houses which have been constructed for your inspection and to assist you in planning your home. We build according to your plans, using hollow tile faced with cement stucco, or selected pressed brick. Only long leaf pine, cypress and hardwood used. We have all modern conveniences, including gas, and are served by two car lines, Emory University and Highland Avenue.

THE office is located on the property, Villa Miraflores, on University Drive, just off Briadcliff Road. Call Mr. Johnson at HEmlock 2792.

EVERY CAR OWNER SHOULD KNOW

Cylinder Grinding Should Not Be Confused With Boring, Reaming or Inferior Methods of Reconditioning

How to Obtain the Greatest Return On His Investment

It is not enough to know how to drive a car skilfully and safely. It is just as important to know that perfect mechanical operation is the main necessity that insures the long life of a car. Car owners who have learned that skilled and honest mechanics can keep their cars in that condition are getting full service value out of their old cars.

The one thing that out-wrecks more cars than any other defect is worn and loose cylinders. This can be corrected at a small relative cost and the life of a car increased many years.

The service men on this page will advise you. If you are having knocks, slaps, lack of power or any engine trouble, you will save time and much expense by having these experts tell you how to correct it.

A Second Chapter of Keely's History-Making Silk Sale

Hundreds and hundreds of yards of fine silks have been sold during the week-end—in fact, one lot was completely sold out—and tomorrow we continue the sale with replenished stocks, many of which arrived Saturday by express to fill certain depleted lines. Truly, this is a history-making silk sale, for reductions in some instances are more than 50 per cent. The quality standard of Keely's silks is so well known that the mere announcement of such reductions will bring great crowds to this sale tomorrow! Women know that they are values most unusual, and will make every effort to take advantage of these savings.

Crepes de Chine--Flat Crepes

Values $2.75 and $3

These silks were bought at such attractive discounts as to make this unusually low price possible, and yet every yard is the same high Keely standard of quality that we would buy in the regular way. In no sense are they silks manufactured for sales purposes. They consist of crepes de chine and flat crepes that sell regularly at $2.75 to $3 a yard, and the colors, which are produced with pure vegetable dyes, comprise a complete range of the present season's most wanted shades, for dresses, evening gowns, sport frocks, lingerie and every dress purpose.

29 Choice Colors

THE WISE GET WISDOM—"In the hearts of all that are wise hearted I have put wisdom, that they may make all that I have commanded thee." Ex. 31:6.

WORTH THINKING ABOUT!

"No politics in city government" is an increasing sentiment in American communities. Dwellers in cities all over the map who have suffered from the misgovernments of city bosses and ward politicastros have turned to the relief that is in small responsible commissions, but principally to the more business-like plan of city manager control.

In 1912 there was one city that had a city manager by charter and two by ordinance. On January 1 of this year there were 258 city managers by charter and 84 by ordinance, a total of 346 American cities that have thrown their petty political parasites into the garbage cans and are conducting their civic business on lines tested for efficiency and economy by the greatest industries of the nation. The value of the system is proved by the rapid growth of city managership. In 1923 alone 48 such controls were set up in the several states. Michigan now has 39 cities so managed, California 34, Florida 29, Texas 26 and Virginia 24. In Ohio such cities as Cincinnati, Cleveland and Dayton have adopted the system as their refuge from the evils that seem to be inherent in municipal management by councils elected and dominated by a local boss and used as profit-sharing machines by ward politicians and their trenchermen.

The outstanding demonstration of the wisdom and value of city managership is now being made in Cincinnati, where in November, 1924, the people voted by more than 2 to 1 to amend the charter and install a city manager in January of this year. They found their man of promise in the United States army, in the person of Col. Clarence O. Sherrill, of the engineer corps, then in charge of national public works in Washington city, and induced him to resign his commission and undertake the redemption of the "Queen City of the West" from a long subjection to political misrule, extravagance, graft and grosser criminal afflictions. He has gone to work with no florid flourishes, no picturesque proceedings, but with common sense constructive measures, and his initial reform accomplishments are receiving the general applause and encouragement of the citizens. Cincinnati is breathing easier and her pulses of pride and public content are quickened and healthy.

The citizens of Atlanta may profitably keep their eyes upon Cincinnati, and Grand Rapids, and Knoxville, among the large number that is under city managership. This city was never so shackled by political freebooters and personal exploiters of public perquisites since its first incorporation.

The doubling of the wards and the segregation of councilmanic elections have produced their logical effects. Municipal business is being done by the rule of "addition, subtraction and diversion;" the slogan of "every fellow for himself and the devil take the hindmost!"

No sense of community love and loyalty, no devotion to the interests of the whole people over that to a ward majority, control the governors of this great and growing city.

They refuse to be guided by municipal science, ignore all examples of good city government and give us petty political jugglery instead of competent, economic and progressive administration.

That misrule must be ended.

How, is for the people to consider.

A COOLIDGE CONGRESS.

The president is said to be anxious to get out of the fall elections a cooperative congress, something he hasn't got now, so you can see it. President Wilson, in a most critical national era, expressed a like wish, but the rampant republicans of the realm raised merry Christmas over his reasonable request and refused it by a sweeping majority. It will be interesting to see what the voters will hand to President Coolidge in answer to his desire.

It seems natural that any one bearing the great office of executive of the nation should wish for the sympathetic support of a congress controlled by legislators of like minds and policies with himself. But politics has scant respect for natural logic and operates in lines of war strategy. While it might be political wisdom to let the ruling party have all the rope it wants, in the hope that it will the sooner hang itself, that policy does not commend itself to a fighting opposition. Such liberality might enable the "ins" to strengthen, rather than strangle themselves.

Current political tactics advise to lick the enemy when and where possible. Strong prospects of a party victory stir the blood and bring out the militancy of the voters, and party leaders always scent danger in denying them their chance to win a fight.

This year it is in the air that the democrats can win the senate and can cripple, if not capture, the house of congress. The rank and file are eager to do the one, and both if they can, but the more cool-blooded and calculating leaders look doubtfully upon the party wisdom of doing either.

To control either house in the 70th congress will be to set up a democratic "stop and go" signal before the republicans in the other chamber and in the white house. No legislation beyond routine will be possible without democratic consent and cooperation. That will impose great responsibilities upon the leaders and the party at large. It will demand the presentation of a program of complex policies of legislation and administration. Such a situation faces both ways—toward popularity and toward peril.

In like cases in the past the democratic party has been only partially fortunate. It won the house in 1874, leading to the election of Tilden in 1876 only to see him euchred out of his office by an extraordinary electoral commission. It won the house in 1878 and came within an eyelash of putting Hancock in the white house by the election of 1880. But whether the capture of one or both houses this year will spell a presidential victory in 1928 is a question on which the stars of prophesy shed no present light. The interrogation would get as ready an answer from the oracle of Delphi or the sphinx as from the political soothsayers of the approaching summer.

THE SHRINE OF LEE.

Before "we all" south of the Ohio get excited over the petition of some scattered and belated persons in the north, asking congress to rescind the acts to coin Stone Mountain half-dollars and to restore the Lee mansion at Arlington, it will be well to read the resolution that congress adopted in the latter case.

In reading it we should not forget that it was introduced by Representative Cramton, a Michigan republican who is serving his seventh consecutive term in the house and is the son of a union veteran. It was adopted in the 68th congress that had working republican majorities in both houses and was approved by President Coolidge, native of Vermont and citizen of Massachusetts. The resolution reads:

"Whereas, the era of internecine strife among the states having yielded to one of better understanding, of common loyalty and of a more perfect union; and

"Whereas, now honor is accorded Robert E. Lee as one of the great military leaders of history, whose exalted character, noble life and eminent services are recognized and esteemed, and whose manly attributes of precept and example were compelling factors in cementing the American people in bonds of patriotic devotion and action against common external enemies in the war with Spain and in the world war, thus consummating the hope of a reunited country that would again swell the chorus of the union,"—

—therefore it was resolved that the Lee mansion shall be restored "to the condition of its occupancy by the Lee family."

No one but Ben Hill has framed a more just and eloquent tribute to Lee than is contained in that resolution. With it in hand we need not worry over the eructations of such latter-day patriots who were unborn in Lee's day, but have assumed heirship of the long ago discarded and deflated bloody shirt.

Instead of showing resentment of their appeals that find no response in congress, let us applaud the fraternal and magnanimous spirit of those representative men of the north in congress who have taken the name and fame of Robert E. Lee into their hearts and will make his home, now the property of the nation, a shrine to which the loyal of the union may repair for inspiration.

ANTI-LYNCHERS ASTRAY.

When old John Randolph, of Roanoke, was in congress a century ago and some novel proposition came upon the floor he was accustomed to demand "Unde derivatur?" —which is diplomatic Latin for "where do you get that stuff?"

If he were in congress these times he would certainly roar that demand upon the proponents of the anti-lynching bills. They embody things that he would have denounced as unconstitutional and whose judgment is that of the best constitutional authorities of today. It is no marvel, therefore, that the senate judiciary committee has definitely refused to report one of them for consideration.

Lynching is a horrible perversion of the passion for justice and piles crime upon crime. Whatever public authority can legitimately do to deter lynchings and punish known lynchers should be done, and that without prejudice, fear, or favor. Public opinion and conscience are cooperating powerfully now to make lynchings rare and lynchers odious. No acute necessity presses for anti-lynching legislation that lynches the national constitution.

That charter provides that in all cases to which a state is a party the supreme court of the United States shall have original jurisdiction, but the Dyer and McKinley bills propose to arraign a state before the criminal bar of an inferior federal court and penalize it through its agents for presumptive neglect of duty. It cannot be done. Marshall and the supreme court made that fact clear as a noonday sun a hundred years ago.

TAKING OUT THE KICK.

A sort of volunteer congress of college conductors has recently concluded that something ought to be done to reduce the abnormal importance that football has reached in collegiate life. When they see 70,000 demoniac persons in the college bowl to see the tug of war between the goal posts and only 700 people, most relatives, present to witness the parchmenting of the graduating class, they opine that the collegiate balance is out of whack. They decide that the kick—not the propelling, but the popular—should be taken out of the football item in the curriculum.

As a journal wedded to all that is classic and contributory to an athletic and admirable America we cannot agree with these protesting professors. The game is a great one for the chosen few from the student body who have the grit, muscle and wind that fit them for the contest. They are usually high-grade students and a large proportion of them are signally successful in after serious life. The college rooters and crowds in the bowl bleachers are only maniacs for the rare occasions. They do not, we think, actually arrest the potential flow of education and college influence upon national life.

The old idea of "mens sano in sano corpore" is yet a good one and safe to follow in this super-strenuous age. It has a Greek, rather than Latin, foundation and proof. All it lacks to produce general conviction is that Athens and Olympus did not know football. If they had, one can imagine what a riot of "rambling wrecks" would have filled the stadiums of Greece after the home team had scored heavily against ambitious rivals! No, no; let the kick remain in the game to delight the hearts and thrill the throats of fair fighting Americans.

THE ELECTRIC HOME.

If prosperity and progressiveness go on steadily in the good old U. S. A. we will soon be changing our song from "home, sweet home," into "home, juicy home!" A national survey of millions of homes reveals that over 60 per cent of them are supplied with telephones and automobiles, so that "gab and go" are major possibilities with average Americans.

The inspection of nearly 2,000,000 homes, occupied by nearly 7,000,000 persons, in all parts of the nation, both rural and urban, shows that 79 per cent are lighted by electricity; 74 per cent use gas for cooking; 70 per cent use electric irons; 59 per cent have gas heaters; 47 per cent have vacuum cleaners; 23 per cent employ power-driven washing machines. Scant wonder then that mother and the girls have leisure for the clubs and joy-rides. The power-house has emancipated Ma as the overhead trolley did the mule. So that Edison, and not Susie Anthony, is the real freedom-fetcher to woman!

But there is more liberty yet to be won. In Cleveland 13 per cent of the homes have stationary laundry tubs and running water and Atlanta only 10 per cent. That is a poor condition that the plumbers and the water commissioners should combine to remedy. The reports also reveal that in Atlanta, as in Wilmington in Delaware, New Haven and Springfield in Massachusetts, at least one-fourth of the housekeepers still fill and clean kerosene lamps—something for the lighting company, the fire department and the fire insurance agents to hold a mass meeting over. Atlanta must keep up with the procession in this electric-driven age.

TACKLING THE WORLD.

A new crop of competitive Americans is coming out of the colleges this month. "Competitive" is right, for it is the rule that the big majority of those young men who have persisted in their studies to the point of approved graduation are persons with ambition and purpose to make much of themselves in the world's affairs.

American college graduates usually make good, as alumni rosters testify. Going through college is not with them, as in some other countries, a matter of gentility and class distinction, a traditional track-training for professional or political attachments. Here men go to college to get power—power to think, to analyze subjects and situations, to invent and construct, to apply science to the solution of daily problems in any chosen career. They make good in better proportion than the men untrained in college lecture rooms and laboratories.

The new men coming out this month may seem to be submerged for a season, but when they find themselves in their proper fields they will tackle the world with knowledge, vim and victory-winning power. Every commencement season brings a fresh and rich recruitment to the genius of the nation and insures that the processional song of American progress will neither lag nor die away. Instead of repeating to them customary and inane jokes about their degrees and destinies as world-beaters, we should honor their earned titles and cheer them to enter fearlessly upon the great opportunities that are inviting them.

THE HUMANE SOCIETY.

The Atlanta Humane society is a city charity that has little advertisement. In the hands of a few self-sacrificing women, with courageous and sympathizing hearts, it has gone about quietly helping those cases of nakedness, hunger and worse distresses that have been found within its reach and means. On the woman's page of The Constitution is a brief and pathetic story of a recent instance of how the ministry of the society came as that of angels to a mother and five little ones found stranded and half-starved on our greatest street.

The Constitution has not been asked to eulogize the labors of love for the helpless done by the society, or to make any appeal in its behalf. The spirit of the society and its services make their own appeal more eloquently than words or print. We only voice our high appraisement of the good work of the society and are sure it will be heartily and generously indorsed by all whose spirits answer to the sufferings of their fellows.

OVERDOSES OF DON'TS.

There is in the land an epidemic of complaint over the alleged rebellion of the people against restrictions upon their personal liberties and conduct. The Puritan element in pulpit, press and public assembly inveighs against tastes and customs that it "views with alarm" as signs of popular degeneracy. But for every such symptom of ruination it can suggest nothing more moral and remedial than to "make a law against it!"

It might be helpful if, in some moment of common sense, it should occur to these tearful Jeremiahs that much of the rebellion they deplore is caused by the overdoses of "don'ts" that have already been forced upon people who know they are not ailing. The baby in the cradle, kicking his coverlet and reaching for things, is dosed with a "don't," and thence on the doses of the same pill multiply and become daily more distasteful. Grown men and women with minds of their own resent the endless chain of prohibitions forged by persons not perceptibly wiser and better than themselves.

There is a note of reason in the proposition that much, if not most, of the so-called libertinism of the times might be cured by more liberty, more freedom to individual choice and conduct. Greater trust in common social consciousness, more faith in the corrective power of popular ethics and in the penalty of personal ostracism of evil conduct, might sooner restore moral normalcy to American life than all the petty regulations, restrictions and prohibitions contained in our current codes, rituals and books of church discipline. Let us try the experiment of trusting a free people whose great heart is generally on the right, rather than the off side.

THE BLESSING OF LIGHT

BY FRANK L. STANTON

I.

The Song of the Morning rings clear to the skies:
"Light, and the joy of the way;"
But Evening will come, with the Stars and the sighs,
And tears for the dying of day.
Tears for the beauty that fast fades away—
Tears for the death of the day.

II.

Hath not the Night the sweet blessing of light
And the dream of the answered prayers?
And is there not rest on its shadowy breast,
And peace for life's pain and life's tears?
But O for the morning's brave beams in the skies!
Let the Dark keep its Stars and its sighs!

III.

But come to me, Sweet! when the shadows fall fast
And sing of the joy of the way,
And the love that will linger with life to the last—
The answer to prayers that we pray.
And light time, or dark time, still close to my breast,
Be thou my heaven of rest.

Romance and The Saloon.

BY M. ASHBY JONES, D. D.

Opie Read turned up the other day in St. Louis to attend a gathering of writers and publishers. Most of us thought he was dead, but as in another classical instance "the news was greatly exaggerated." Yet in extenuation for such a mistake, he has been silent a long time, and that was suspicious.

Back in the seventies Mr. Read was a newspaper reporter in St. Louis, and found in those experiences material for many of his stories. On his return the other day he went in search of his old haunts. Then he came back with the wail that prohibition had destroyed the romance of the past.

He was lamenting the passing of the old saloon, with its atmosphere of sentiment and romance, its background of adventure and chivalry. There he moaned, gathered the picturesque characters, who had made his books, and him, famous. "Why," said he, "where have they to hang out now? There is not a place to compare with the old saloon."

Departed Spirits.

In the past few months the prohibition law has had to stand many an assault, but it remained for the creator of the "Arkansas Traveler" to frame the most damaging indictment. Indeed one might say, here is the first and only defender who has come to the rescue of the old saloon. There have been many charges that the saloon was the destroyer of character, but this new defender, of an old faith, declares that it was the saloon which gave birth to romantic characters, and that the destruction of the saloon thus became the destroyer of characters. "Ministers and angels of grace defend us!" Here is indeed a case of departed spirits.

One wonders why Mr. Read, with his romantic imagination, should not turn to the highways, and roadhouses of modern days, and find his knight errants among the bootleggers and bandits. It is true that the old barroom fracas, with its flying bottles and crescendo of curses, has become a classic, and one might be excused for weeping over the passing of "the good old days." But genius is creative. Surely one who could idealize an old riverfront saloon could, with the magic wand of his fancy, transform a Chicago gangster into a hero, and glorify the adventures of the blockade runners, who take the risks of the road.

"Roll Backward."

Mr. Read said that as he sat in the lobby of the hotel, waiting for the meeting of the publishers, a man asked him some question about the race-track. He replied that he knew nothing about the race-track. "Why," said his inquirer, "I thought you were here attending a meeting of the book-makers." It all reminds one of the New England farmer who pointed out the apparent mistake of Shakespeare, when he wrote, "There are sermons in stones, and books in running brooks." He said, "What he meant was, there are sermons in books, and stones in running brooks." There are so many different ways of making books, and sermons.

It is always interesting to watch the "famous man" come back to the scenes of his youth. How often he resents the changes which have taken place. The old schoolhouse has been torn down, and a modern building has taken its place. He takes it as a personal affront. True, the new building is lighter, more commodious, and more sanitary, but the other was the place where he went to school, and the old house is associated with incidents and experiences of his life. Let progress halt, and the welfare of new generations be forgotten, in order that we may do obeissance to the sentiments and memories of the "great man."

What a shame to destroy the saloon, which furnished Opie Read with his characters and inspirations. No matter how much it soiled civilization, or what barrier it formed along the pathway of the progress of the race. It helped Mr. Read to make books. The atmosphere of his romance has been swept away, and the background for his genius destroyed. Bring back the old saloon and make Mr. Read happy once again. Surely there is a great deal of human nature in all of us.

Many States Have New Parks

"Within a few years state parks have become one of the major recreation resources of the United States, and a survey just completed shows that new areas invite the vacationist this summer," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"The sixth national conference on state parks, at Hot Springs, Ark., June 14-16, will hear reports showing that during the short lifetime of this organization, formed in 1921, which coordinates the advance of such preserves, the number of states maintaining state parks has doubled. The survey shows that 43 of the 48 states now have state parks, state forests with more or less recreational use, or other preserves under state agencies of equivalent value and use.

"Hot Springs was chosen for this year's meeting, in recognition of the remarkable progress in the establishment of state parks and forests, or in legislative means for their acquisition, which has been made during the last few years by the states of the south and southwest.

South Joins in Park Progress.

"When the conference is called to order by Chairman John Barton Payne, who is chairman of the American Red Cross, he will greet many new faces among the delegates, representatives of southern and southwestern states which have lately entered this field of public service. When the honor roll of the states is called, on the second day of the meeting, the recent achievements of southern states will be an interesting feature, because gains in the south have been especially notable.

"Since the last conference, Tennessee and Virginia have created conservation commissions with state park powers, Florida has passed a state park law, Georgia and Mississippi have created forestry departments with recreational provisions, Alabama has acquired a state park committee, Louisiana will add a state park division to its conservation commission, Arkansas is acquiring a comprehensive state park system; Oklahoma is working to the same end through its forestry and game commissions, and Texas, which last year reported its record of 52 state park sites received by gift, is improving them for public recreation.

State Parks of Large Size.

"Some state parks rival national parks in size and scenic beauty; Adirondack park in New York, with 1,850,000 acres owned by the state, is exceeded only by Yellowstone; Custer State park, in South Dakota, of 107,000 acres, is of national park standard. Other large state parks are the Catskill, of 150,000 acres; the Alleghany, of 60,000 acres and the Palisades Interstate park, of 98,000 acres, and Itasca Lake State park, in Minnesota, inclosing the sources of the Mississippi, of 32,000 acres.

"New York leads the states in the number of preserves allied under a central state agency, the council of parks, with a total of 90; Michigan has 56 state parks; Texas 52; Iowa 38; Minnesota 18; Washington 17. Pennsylvania leads in state forests, all of which serve for varied outdoor recreation, with a total of 1,131,000 acres. Several Rocky Mountain and Pacific coast states have lately acquired large state forests with great actual and potential recreational values by exchange of school sections for national forest tracts.

"Among the notable additions to the more than five hundred state parks throughout the country, during the past year, are the preservation of part of the famous Indiana Dunes on Lake Michigan, as an Indiana state park; conservation of the forest surroundings of the Great Stone Face, of Hawthorne's tale, the marvelous profile in Franconia Notch, as a New Hampshire state forest; establishment of entirely new state park systems in Missouri and Kentucky; acquisition of Tongue mountain, between the arms of Lake George in New York, as part of the state forest preserve; and of notable caves and gorges in southeastern Ohio by the state forestry department. Historic sites, which are preserved in many state parks, have been increased by such additions as Fort Macon, in North Carolina; old French and early American forts in Alabama, and memorials of frontier days in North Dakota.

BY MARK SULLIVAN.

Anybody who has paid close attention to the present discussion of farm relief legislation in congress and all that has been said and done about farm relief since the first of December last is bound to have made some observations and come to some tentative conclusions about the bearing it all has on the possibility of tariff revision, a possibility which seems the more remote as the farm debate lengthens itself out.

Before congress is through with farm relief legislation it will have given more time to that subject than to any other one. Before it is ended the house will have given, taking into account the conference that must come ultimately between house and senate, more than all the days of three weeks to debate on this subject. How much time the leisurely senate will give to farm legislation remains to be seen. Furthermore, the twenty-two members of the house committee on agriculture began hearings in January, held many sessions during January and February, and then during March and April devoted every day and some of the evenings of five weeks to it. At times the subject dominated congress. There were days when there was something like tense excitement. Important legislation on other subjects was postponed or put over until the next session in order to give right of way to farm legislation. For a while the advocates of farm legislation were in complete command of the parliamentary situation, by a kind of threat in the spirit of parliamentary blackmail, with which they compelled the leaders to change their plans in order to give time to farm legislation. These more than two weeks which the lower house has already devoted to the subject came at a time when practically every individual congressman was eager to get home to the primaries and the campaign in which his personal political fate is at stake.

If at the end of this session the farmers are not satisfied with what congress had done for them, of if the legislation in the final form in which it passes does not bring the contentment the farmer demands, in that event there is only one remaining step to try, and that will be the tariff. Much of the motive of wheat is now being attempted is to offset a farmer movement for tariff revision, or to compromise with those who demand tariff revision.

When the corn belt began this fight last August they put their opening statement in the form of a combined solicitation and threat. They made certain demands and described what they wanted. What they wanted was what was later embodied in the Haugen bill at next to the final stage of it, namely, price stabilization by the government or an agency formally designated by the government, to be achieved partly through an equalization fee which should have the authority of a government tax.

The farm belt demanded that and in the same breath with the demand coupled a threat. The threat was that unless the republican administration and the republicans in the east generally would turn in and give them their Haugen bill the west would thereupon unite with the democrats of the south in an attack on the tariff that is so much prized by the manufacturing east.

That was the form in which the corn belt's campaign began. There was a weakness in the way it was put, a weakness which caused the eastern republicans and observers generally to discount the threat. The corn belt said, in effect: "We want more tariff for ourselves and if you don't give us more tariff for ourselves we will take all the tariff away from you." When the corn belt put it that way they rather weakened their position at the very beginning. It was certain that the corn belt would never be able to work up a moral indignation against the tariff sufficient to impress the rest of the country as being sincere. They had begun by saying they wanted more tariff for themselves and announcing that their motive for attacking the tariff, when they should get around to that, would be revenge for not having been granted a larger piece of the pie.

Consequently the republican administration and the east generally did not take the corn belt conditional declaration of war very seriously. It would not be too much to say that the republicans of the east were rather disposed to treat the corn belt contemptuously. They did not believe in the sincerity of the corn belt's position and they felt confident that the corn belt would never get to the point of actually attacking the tariff. Indeed, the east was confident that the corn belt likes the tariff as it is—likes it enough, at least, not to be willing to take the risks involved in making an attack on it.

In December President Coolidge went to Chicago, made a speech to a farm organization and told the farmers in words so specific and clear as to give offense to some of his hearers that the administration would not accede to the farmers' demands, to the demands later embodied in the Haugen bill. That attitude of President Coolidge became also the attitude of the republican organization and of the congressmen from the east generally.

When the representatives of the corn belt came to Washington to advocate their demands before the house committee on agriculture they were treated with scant sympathy. To a large degree the corn belt representatives laid themselves open to this. When the house committee on agriculture asked the corn belt representatives to put what they wanted into concrete form, to write a bill themselves, the former replied that it was not their business to write bills. They said it was merely their business, as representatives of the corn belt, to present their grievance—it was the function of the house committee on agriculture to write the appropriate bill.

Later when, within the house committee on agriculture, those who sympathized with the corn belt tried to put the corn belt's demands into the words of a statute that would stand up in debate, they found they could not do it. Some of the members of congress came to the conclusion, either reluctantly or with a sense of welcome relief from an embarrassing position, that under the constitution it is not possible to write a law embodying the demands of the corn belt. Other supporters of the general policy of farm relief legislation divided into groups. They found they could not agree upon a bill. Some farm representatives coming from district interested in some farm commodities, were not satisfied with the kind of legislation demanded in behalf of the corn belt.

The result was that out of the twenty-one members of the house committee on agriculture no eleven were able to agree on a bill. During the same period many members of congress who do not favor any farm relief legislation were in an attitude of jeering hostility toward the corn belt and the whole situation.

In this flattening out of the corn belt's fight and toward the end of this period it became an accepted belief in the atmosphere of Washington that the whole agitation for farm relief legislation had blown up and that there would be no attempt by congress at farm legislation at all.

At this stage the representatives of the corn belt changed their step. They had now arrived at the point where their original demand had been refused. It was time for them to carry out their threat to make an alliance with the democrats and attack the tariff. Washington generally did not believe they would, because Washington had always doubted the good faith of the original threat.

The corn belt representatives did something. It was startling, but it was not the thing they had threatened. They made an alliance with the democrats—but not an alliance to reduce the tariff. Quite the contrary. They went to the democrats and proposed, in effect, to give the raisers of cotton the same benefits of the tariff as the raisers of corn and other corn belt products. The proposal of the corn belt representatives to the cotton raisers and the southern democrats was, not that the tariff should be reduced but that the benefits of the tariff should be extended in effect to cotton, which never has had any tariff. The corn belt proposal, originally a threat to reduce the tariff, now became a plan to carry the principle of tariff protection farther than it had ever been carried in America, and farther than anybody had ever suggested it should be carried.

The original proposal of the corn belt representatives was that a price should be fixed for their farm commodities, and that in this price the amount of the tariff should be a fixed element. The fixed price for American consumers was to be made up of three elements: First, the existing price in other countries, in competing foreign markets; second, the American tariff; third, the cost of transportation from competing countries to the United States. These three figures added together were to be the price fixed in America for American buyers of American farm crops. It was clearly a greater extension of the protective tariff principle than had ever been proposed before. The corn belt proposal was to give to the farmer the same degree and security of tariff protection as the manufacturer enjoys. It was so described by the corn belt representatives at all times. And it was this umbrella which the democrats were invited to come under in behalf of cotton.

Many of the democrats at first took kindly to the proposed alliance. So many of the democrats, indeed, got behind it that for a few days it was the practically universal judgment of Washington that the corn belt representatives by this bold and ingenious political maneuver had won the fight, and that the Haugen bill as modified to take in the raisers of cotton would pass congress. The corn belt representatives had made their threatened alliance with the southern democrats, but it was not an alliance for reducing the tariff. It was an alliance for extending the principle of tariff protection as it had never been extended before.

In the alarm that arose over the success of this maneuver by the corn belt representatives, the representatives in congress from the eastern cities and other food-consuming communities realized that there was to be an increase in the cost of food. They became active. Other congressmen, alarmed by the economic and political dangers inherent in the government subsidy, which was a feature of the Haugen bill, made war against it.

These opponents of the Haugen bill would not have won, however, if the democrats had not had a second thought. The original backers of the corn belt Haugen bill, plus the democrats (if the bulk of the democrats had stuck by it), would have been able to pass the Haugen bill. The bill still would not have become a law, because President Coolidge would have vetoed it, and part of the motive of some of the democrats was to put President Coolidge in the position of vetoing a bill demanded by many farmers.

What happened, however, was that the wiser democratic leaders, including several in the lower house, and such democratic senators as Glass, of Virginia, saw the glaring violation of fundamental democratic principles in what some of their fellow party men were about to do. Senator Glass denounced the Haugen bill, in its final phase of seduction to the south, as a Siamese twin of the protective tariff, and denounced both the tariff and the Haugen bill as robbers. The energy of these more orthodox democratic leaders was so effective that under it the rank and file of the democrats began to recede from their previous alliance with the corn belt.

That, apparently, is where the situation is now. At last, certainly, the corn belt has come to the point where they should carry out their original threat—if they have not so impaired their moral position as to be unable to carry it out. They have made demands and the demands have been refused. They have thereupon made an alliance with the democrats to out-tariff the tariff, and that maneuver has failed. The only thing left to everybody who wants to do something for the farmer is to attack the tariff and to revise it downward. All their earlier alternatives about raising the farmer on stilts as high as tariff stilts, upon which the manufacturers stride, have failed. The other alternative, to reduce the height of the stilts on which the manufacturers walk, is now in front of them. The proposal to raise the prices of farm products to parity with manufactured products has been defeated. There is only left the proposal to reduce the price of what the farmer is compelled to buy from the manufacturer by reducing the protective tariff.

If there were reality in this situation at all, if one could feel that there is real discontent among the farmers, if it were certain that there are the seeds of political insurgency in the West—in that event we should now expect to see a formal movement emanating from the West to reduce the tariff. We should now expect to see the corn belt representatives, twice defeated, turn to the democrats to make an alliance for revising the tariff downward.

But in the first place, is there any widespread demand for tariff reduction among the farmers of the West? In the second place, is it possible for the corn belt representatives, after the humiliating debacle of one attempted alliance with the democrats, now to approach the democrats with another? Having made one alliance to raise the tariff, in effect, can they now make an alliance to reduce the tariff?

From the point of view of the democrats, are they likely, having had one unhappy experience with the corn belt representatives, to embark now on another?

Glimpses of Hollywood

BY ROSALIND SHAFFER.

Hollywood, Calif., May 22.—(Special Correspondence.) — Gertrude Short, petite red-haired player, was at home to friends on Monday afternoon in her large old-fashioned house underneath the pepper trees of Cahuenga boulevard. In the midst of the feminine buzz of conversation, Gertrude's almost new husband, Percy Pembroke, arrived home to meet the girls before the party was over. "Pembroke," mused a visitor, "isn't there an earl of Pembroke in England?" "Oh, yes," answered Gertrude, "if seven or eight people should die, Percy would then by the Earl of Pembroke."

Gertrude claims she got quite a prize husband and with him several family curios that are very interesting. A collection of fans gathered by her father-in-law was brought downstairs and displayed. There is an elaborately carved tortoise shell one, once the property of Mrs. Phoebe Hearst, another with mother of pearl shafts and white satin appliqued with antique Irish lace is a fan used by Adelina Patti at her debut in London.

A third, of tortoise shell and black Spanish lace sewn in an intricate design in tiny silver sequins, was once the property of the Empress Josephine. Many others of historic interest are included and the old-fashioned boxes in which they came are almost as interesting as the fans themselves. Each fan has its pedigree in the box with it. The box containing Patti's is of white satin with a true love knot of white satin ribbon, now gray from age, sewn on the cover and a curiously-worked gold clasp for a lock.

Another curio is the world's smallest oil painting—at least all present were willing to concede the title to it. A tiny bit of ivory, the size of a thumbnail and not any thicker was brought out and with it an old magnifying glass. The naked eye revealed nothing but several colored splotches, but through the glass one was enabled to see an old-fashioned coach and four complete with a red-coated and beaver-hatted coachman snapping his whip over the backs of four huge bays. It is the work of a great grandfather Pembroke who did art work of various sorts as a hobby.

A handsome and especially large grandfather clock had arrived for Gertrude only the day before. It was made by her father-in-law and elaborately carved in the manner of Swiss woodcarvers' work. Alpine stones decorate the whole clock case and a tiny lever at the side sets going an old-fashioned music box with tinkling waltz tunes of long ago. Gertrude had admired the music box and Father Pembroke put it into the then nearly completed clock case as a surprise.

Gertrude's romance is startling, if true, and she says it is. She was coming down a hill when her roadster was hit and overturned by a large car. Her then unknown husband dragged her unconscious from the mess of broken glass and sat in anguish holding her hand in the ambulance and at the hospital until she regained consciousness. He finally in his frenzy began imploring "little sweetheart" whom he had never seen before to open her eyes and speak to him.

Gertrude says she opened one eye to see what he looked like and then opened both suddenly and sat up and asked him if he meant that sweetheart business.

He must have, for several weeks later they were married.

Joan Crawford, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer player of Sally in "Sally, Irene and Mary," and now working in "Paris," has had a terrific struggle with rumor this week. Joan was suspected by interested friends of being married to Michael Cudahy, grandson of Edward Cudahy, the Chicago meat packer, and son of Jack Cudahy.

Joan says she isn't now, but may be some time as she certainly is fond of Michael. They are crack Charleston dancers and have won two Charleston cups in the Hollywood cafes this last week. Michael's mother, Mrs. Jack Cudahy, says Michael has promised her to finish school before he thinks of getting married, but be that as it may, Hollywood is betting against mamma.

Alice Calhoun, Vitagraph player taken over by Warners, has salved her woes resulting from a disagreement with Warners (which resulted in cancellation of her contract by mutual consent) by getting married to Mendel B. Silberberg at her Wilshire home. Mr. Silberberg is a lawyer. Alice played with Sid Chaplin in "Charlie's Aunt." Alice's friends were stunned with surprise at her marriage which was performed by a judge with a rabbi among the few present.

Jacqueline Logan, who is taking a trip to New York and Paris, is considering giving up motion pictures. Her husband, R. H. Gillespie, who dabbles in real estate, is insisting that she retire. Rumor has it that he has cleaned up a good deal of money on recent transactions. Jacqueline remarked before leaving on the trip that if pictures ever conflicted with her domestic life she would be sorry about the loss to the film industry.

The tragedy of age is not alone that of the actress tweaking silver threads from among the gold and rushing to Paris to get her face lifted. There is the tragedy of the young ones; comes now the case of Mickey Daniels, the engaging freckle-faced urchin of Hal Roach's "Our Gang." Mickey is growing up and is being replaced by another spotted wonder who boasts three freckles to Mickey's one, which in the aggregate makes considerable freckles. Mickey is graduating into Huckleberry Finn roles and leaving the youngster stuff behind.

Estelle Taylor has accomplished the Herculean task of getting her new home replastered, redecorated and landscape-gardened as well as refurnished all in one week prior to leaving to see the Kentucky Derby with her husband, Jack Dempsey. They expect to be home June 4, and Estelle wants to surprise Jack with his new home all fixed up to the last cat's whisker.

Mabel Normand's new picture for Hal Roach has been titled "Raggety Rose." Mabel expects to return from New York where she went to close her apartment there, and begin work here on a second two-reeler for Roach about June 10. It is said that Roach has an option on Mabel's services to make feature length pictures if the public receives her two-reelers as well as is expected. Letters from fans have been bombarding film producers for some time asking for Mabel.

Alarm this week filled the Talmadge set at the Pickford-Fairbanks studio where Constance is making the "Duchess of Buffalo," renamed "Sibyl." The excitement followed the writing of a letter by a woman in Knoxville, Tenn., stating to a California police chief that Constance's new husband was really her own spouse. Constance's excitement at this peculiar news totally disarranged the 38-inch blonde wig brought especially from Scandinavia for her picture and Connie gave every sign of an old-fashioned attack of the vapours.

It all changed into comedy, however, when it came out that the missing husband from Tennessee had been married to the claimant of Constance's husband just 37 years ago whereas Captain Alastair Mackintosh is only 36 now.

Rudolph Valentino's birthday was on Mother's day and a dinner at the home of Pola Negri celebrated the event (Rudy's birthday, not Mother's day). On being questioned as to what birthday it would be Rudy sagely remarked that he would be just one year older than he was last year and it is not a matter to be laughed about.

Pola has not yet left for that love test separation, her last reason being that the rate of exchange abroad—or her health—or the health of Madame Eleanora Chalupez, Pola's mother, had suddenly determined the actress to cancel her sailing arrangements a week ago. Rudy meanwhile is staying up nights reading stories to find one for his next picture. He is considering a Spanish story.

Two wise cracks are going the rounds of the supper parties now. One concerns Tom Moore. Leatrice Joy asked him if it was true that "gentlemen prefer blondes." "Well, I don't," said Tom, and then added hastily, "but I'm no gentleman." Another was a remark by the toastmaster at the recent Fox banquet that "the movies are still in their infamy."

Scott Sidney, who is to direct "The Nervous Wreck" at Christie's studio, says he was the manager of the first motion picture show there ever was. It was at the Nashville exposition in 1896 and while the "show" consisted of three pictures, the total footage of film was 300 feet and lasted just eight minutes. The pictures were: 1. Scene showing a train moving; 2. A fire engine coming out of a station and going down the street; 3. The high spot for the thrill seekers, a couple kissing. In those times moving pictures were such a novelty that people fell over each other in their eagerness to pay a dime and see the eight minutes of galloping flickers.

Joseph Schenck and Norma Talmadge have added their names to the list of picture people who have invested heavily in California real estate. A huge San Diego suburban tract has been bought and named Talmadge park. Huge sums are being expended on exploitation and announcements are expected in the near future from three large picture concerns which are buying property in San Diego localities with an eye to opening subsidiary studios there.

Incidentally Pickfair, the large hilltop home of Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford in Beverley Hills, is soon to be sold and a more pretentious place built. The present home suggests a sleepy eastern farm house with its sloping green-shingled roof and white clapboard walls set in the midst of trees and concealing bushes and surrounded by a chicken yard, cow pasture and similar rural effects. The plans for what will succeed it are indefinite or unknown, but Mary and Doug's new home is to be more in keeping with the distinction of the guests whom they entertain. Any visiting royalty or folk with escutcheons invariably are domiciled at Pickfair hence towering turrets and gables and moats are more in order.

LOUISVILLE VETS ATTEND REUNION

Louisville, Ga., May 22.—(Special.) Only a few Confederate veterans from Jefferson county attended the reunion in Birmingham. Captain W. S. Jones, of the local camp led a remnant from Louisville to the Alabama city.

Miss Jewel Willis, of Louisville, was one of the sponsors attending the reunion.

Engagement Rings For Men

The revival of that age-old custom of exchanging rings at the betrothal is a beautiful sentiment which is growing very popular with southern maidens.

We have just received a number of very distinctive, mannish rings which would be appropriate for the groom-to-be. Platinum, white and green gold mountings set with a variety of fine stones. A wide price range.

LIGHTS OF NEW YORK

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN

New York, May 22.—Every Tuesday morning a fellow steps into the courtyard of the apartment house where I live, starts strumming away at a banjo and sings in a most pathetic and heart-breaking way the words of that well-known hymn, "Brown Eyes, Why Are You Blue?" He keeps this up for a quarter of an hour and generally gets away with about $4 or $5 in showered coins from the 148 windows that look out on the enclosure. What I wonder about most is this: "What tune did that gink play before the anthem to Brown Eyes was invented?"

* * * *

There are days when that bozo must cash in to the extent of a hundred simoleons, which is not bad picking for a troubadour with one song to his repertoire.

* * * *

On the floor above lives a retired mariner. He has sailed the seven seas for 23 years and never had a ship of his own. His highest rank was first mate.

* * * *

He has a valet, who comes in for an hour in the morning and then retires. I once asked him what he needed the valet for, as he has in addition the service of the house at his disposal.

* * * *

"Well," said the old salt, "I'll tell you. I really don't need him. But there is one thing I have him do that gives me the greatest satisfaction. I never got as high as captain and I was just about fed up on being first mate when my uncle in California died and left me a little legacy. With that and my savings I could take it easy. So I resigned my job.

* * * *

"Now every morning that boy comes and knocks at my door. When I ask him: 'What do you want?' he answers: 'Sir, the captain wants you on the bridge.' Then I say to him: 'You go and tell the captain that he can go plum to hell.' During my 23 years I was never able to say that, for it would have been a breach of the rules and I would have been guilty of insubordination. Now I can it and gives me such a fine satisfaction that I turn over and have the best hour or so of sleep of the whole night."

Half the boys who delve into the hectic and feverish pit of the stock exchange wear white carnations. This flower is considered a harbinger of good luck. And a magnificent florist shop in the neighborhood numbers its third owner who has grown rich on this superstition.

Norman Cowen, the daring aviator of Chateau-Thierry fame, is a hat manufacturer on Nineteenth street. On his desk lies a piece of metal from the plane in which he flew and in one of the pockets of each suit he carries a splinter of the machine in which he crashed. The splinters are supposed to do the same thing for him as the rabbit's foot to dozens of smart and ultra-modern actors on the white way.

* * * *

One day Norman put on a new suit and forgot to put in a chunk of airplane in his pocket. That day a large shipment of hats was ruined in a train collision.

He tells me that he has one customer who buys at retail. He is a gent who lives in the only brown-stone mansion left on the street, between the rows of warehouses and shipping offices. He wears a new hat every day. The old man has a notion that the jig'll be up with him the day he wears the same hat for the second time. Cowen sends him over the week's seven every Monday morning first thing. And, like syndicate writers, Norman keeps a little ahead on his releases.

Since a German professor has decreed that the most beautiful women in the world are the ladies from the spicy island of Ceylon, New York night club owners have been advertising like madmen for a specimen.

A little New Jersey dame, possessed of a dash of adventure and native wit, smeared a little burnt cork over her shoulders, legs, etc., the other day and answered the ad. Not until she had drawn a big house at the cabaret for three weeks and had received her weekly salary of $500 three times did she have to admit the faking. A real Ceylonese turned up from the Pacific coast and the two damsels couldn't understand each other.

The Salvation Army officer who spellbinds the crowds on Union square at nights was once a cowboy, a dice-thrower and a sourdough in the Yukon. He makes no bones about the fact that he served nine years in Sing-Sing for killing a guy in a drunken brawl on the old Bowery. His father lives on Park avenue and is one of the most dignified and pompous retired clergymen of the town. P. V. P.

SUNDAY HEALTH TALKS

BY WM. BRADY, M. D.

WOLF EAT WOLF.

At least in stories about wolves we learn that when one of the pack attacking prey is wounded or killed, the other wolves immediately pounce on the fallen comrade and devour him.

Old Mr. Gilchrist was dozing contentedly on the rug before the fire, Tony, the Hibernian Wop, was napping near. Mr. Gilchrist is domesticated, but wicked as ever with tooth and claw; he hangs around here, but he submits to no such familiarities as Tony the Wop welcomes. You handle Mr. Gilchrist with due respect, if at all.

Well, somebody dropped a frisky young kitten on the rug right between them. The kitten began playing with Old Gil's brush. Gil drew his brush out of the way several times without opening his eyes. Tony awoke and watched the game curiously. Presently the kitten sank a careless claw into the Gilchrist sensorium, and presto! Gil seized the foolish kitten by the neck, and Tony, I am pained to say, jumped in to help with the killing.

I believe in evolution, but not in the monkey business. It seems to me that people are just like wolves of fiction and the cats and dogs of fact. People are just as cruel toward the individual who happens to be down, helpless, weak, unfortunate. They may not actually pounce upon such defective members of the community and try to kill them instantly, but they do seem to take a wicked delight or satisfaction in imposing a stigma upon these unlucky comrades.

Every little while some "taxpayer" with a head like one end of a pin and a soul like the other raises his voice against some beneficent plan to establish a hospital or clinic for victims of tuberculosis in the neighborhood. Such a protest is prompted by a combination of 50 per cent ignorance and 50 per cent cruelty. There is no other reason why a health center or place for the treatment of tuberculosis should not be established in one's immediate neighborhood.

Whenever an individual in private life develops mental disease, the family physician or the attending physician is sure to encounter more or less difficulty in giving the patient proper care because of the foolish stigma. The patient's family rather resents the suggestion of insanity—they are determined to believe it is only a "nervous breakdown" or something like that. They harbor hideous notions about hospitals for mental disease—they think of such places as "asylums." They set their foolish pride above any human responsibility and refuse to acknowledge that insanity can possibly occur in the family. All of this the doctor must cope with, patiently and tactfully, in order to bring the responsible relatives around to a sane attitude, that the patient may be properly cared for. But it takes time, and, meanwhile, sad things happen.

Many readers will recall the shameful way in which the ignorant public of this country hounded Early, a man with leprosy, many years ago. The man was treated by many of our public health authorities rather worse than we treat major criminals, and if any voice was raised in a plea for decency or sanity it was drowned out by the howling of the pack for poor Early's blood. Ignorance, 50 per cent and cruelty 50 per cent, explained the conduct of our state and federal representatives in the persecution of that harmless man.

Arthritis.

What causes arthritis? Is it curable? (K. E.)

Answer.—Arthritis is not a specific disease or type of illness. It is any joint inflammation, and disease involving a joint or joints. In most cases it is infectious, that is, caused by germs invading the joints, and not communicable. Probably the most frequent arthritis is the form popularly termed rheumatism, and that is generally a local infection, that is an invasion of the joint or joints by germs which come from a distant focus or depot of disease such as an abscess at the root of a tooth, or septic tonsils, or an infected nasal sinus. Then there are a good many cases of arthritis due to gonorrhea infection, some due to syphilitic infection, and in children particularly many cases due to tuberculosis. Sometimes the nature of the infection is not ascertainable, and in such cases it is soothing to use the name of "rheumatism."

New Use for Castor Oil.

After we graduated from the castor oil delusion we hardly knew what to do with the supply we had on hand. I began applying it to my feet, which are apt to crack in the winter, and it makes the feet fairly smile, and nary a crack or callus since I began using the oil. Moreover my feet never feel clammy any more—I fancy the oil has a secondary binding effect on the feet also! (Mrs. S. E. M.)

Answer.—Castor oil when fresh is a pretty good skin oil, or hair oil.

Lime Incrustations Removed.

Visiting friends on a farm I mentioned the difficulty we have with lime deposits in the teakettle, and told how a chemistry professor said any thing that would eat the deposits away would destroy the metal. My farm friend said that if I would boil some raw potato peelings in the kettle the lime would come off. I returned home and tried it, and it worked to my entire satisfaction. When I told the chemistry professor about this he said, "If you had boiled some prairie hay it would have done the same thing!" But nevertheless I believe in the "potater peelin's." (E. E. F., Jr.)

Answer.—Maybe it is like curing warts—dangerous to say granny's remedies won't cure 'em, because warts have a mean sneaky way of disappearing without just cause or provocation.

Swim and Grow Graceful.

I am anxious to take swimming lessons, but mother objects because I do not weigh enough for my height and swimming makes me thinner. (Marguerite.)

Answer.—On the contrary, swimming tends to fill out the hollows and make you plump and graceful.

PRAISES VENABLE FOR MANY GIFTS TO THE PUBLIC

Editor Constitution: I have just read in the columns of The Constitution that Samuel Hoyt Venable has given to some 240 Camp Fire Girls the privilege of enjoying for about four weeks this summer the guest cottage, the wonderful woodland, and the lake which combine to make his summer home, Wohelo Lodge, at the foot of Stone mountain, one of the most beautiful spots in the entire south.

The casual reader cannot appreciate fully the value of this characteristic action on the part of Mr. Venable. But to one who knows just what it means to live in that enchanted spot, to enjoy the lake, the air, the beautiful scenes, and to live a life as natural and free as the birds which fill the forest with music, the privilege seems inestimable.

The Camp Fire Girls are not organized for selfish pleasure. Their very name, "Wohelo"—a contraction of work, health and love—contains the spirit of the organization. The pleasure comes with their training in Elbert Hubbard's famous three H's—the trinity of head, heart and hand. Naturally, this work cannot be carried on in the camps without proper facilities, and it is Mr. Venable who has made it possible for the Atlanta camp to function under conditions absolutely ideal.

But the Camp Fire Girls will not be the first to enjoy the delight of the 2,000 acres of woodland which form the grounds at Wohelo Lodge. From September until June, the Agnes Scott girls spend each week-end at their cottage in Wohelo woods. They escape from the daily grind into the very heart of nature for a few hours, and return to their studies renewed in mind and body. Aside from the healthfulness of this practice, the character-training which comes with the development of resourcefulness and the qualities which go to make up "a good sport" is a very definite advantage to the fortunate girls. Their enthusiasm over the outing and their appreciation of the man who has made it possible is sufficient evidence of what it means in their college life.

Many Gifts.

On account of Mr. Venable's excessive modesty, the full story of what he has done for his friends, for his native city of Atlanta—for the entire south, for that matter—will never be told. His is the rare combination of brain and energy—which enabled him to carve a fortune from the hard conditions which obtained in the prostrate south not so many years ago—and a heart so big and warm that no human being who goes to him for help in trouble ever fails to find it. Individuals, institutions, movements for public good—all these have received his unstinted aid.

His supreme gift to the south has been, of course, his gift of the scarp of Stone mountain to the Daughters of the Confederacy for the purpose of a memorial to the Confederate dead. If it had not been for the vision, the greatness of heart and soul in the owner of Stone mountain, there would be no monument in process of construction on that mountain today; the greatest effort in the history of art would have not so much as a beginning.

With Stone mountain as a constant reminder of his generosity, and such hospitality as he extends constantly, as the occasion arises, as in the case of the college girls and the Camp Fire Girls, appreciation of such a citizen as Samuel Hoyt Venable should be expressed. Truly he is of those who love their fellow man. And he has expressed that love, not in words, but in shining deeds which cannot fall of their just reward.

W. C. FIELDS, COMEDIAN HOWARD FILM STAR

Beautiful Louise Brooks Also In "It's the Old Army Game."

If more funny gags exist than have been used in W. C. Fields' first Paramount comedy, "It's the Old Army Game," which will be seen at the greater Howard this week, your correspondent doesn't known of them. Field's first starring picture can only be characterized as a walloping success.

"It's the Old Army Game" is the screamingly funny tale of Elmer Prettywillie (W. C. Fields), owner of a drug store in a small Florida town. This shop serves as a meeting place for the townspeople and those who would buy stamps, magazines, books or use the telephone. In other words, everything is sold but—drugs.

Louise Brooks, a little lady who promises to create nothing short of a sensation because of her portrayal as the girl Fields would like to marry, gives a mighty fine performance.

Among other things shown in this cinema circus is the young man who arrives in Florida, not to buy real estate, but to sell New York city lots to the southerners. He, being a handsome young pepster and Louise being what she is—they fall in love with each other. How Fields manages to become involved in a case of fraud, goes to New York and gets his love affairs straightened out takes up the remainder of this comedy.

All the way through the film one can detect the reliable, guiding hand of Edward Sutherland, the director of "Behind the Front."

As the stage presentation for this week Frank Cambria is presenting his second musical classic for Publix theater, "A Garden Festival," based upon a celebrated painting by Watteau, the pensive paimter of the gaiety of the early eighteenth century in France. Helen Cahoon, coloratura soprano, and Walter Pontius, tenor, head the list of capable artists who portray the characters which Watteau depicted in his celebrated masterpiece. The musical numbers, arranged by Nathaniel W. Finston, include a flute solo, "Call Me Thine Own," by J. S. Cox; "The Shadow Song" from "Dinorah," sung by Miss Cahoon; Schubert's "Serenade," sung by Mr. Pontius and quartet, and Chopin's "Nocturne," played as a violin solo. The ballet, in which Yurieva and Swoboda, celebrated classic dancers from the Imperial Russian ballet in Moscow, are featured, is danced to "Cavette" by E. Gillett and "Cavette" by Francis Joseph Gossec. The Gorgeous costumes of the artists and the appropriately brilliant lightning effects combine to make this perhaps the most eye-pleasing of the Public presentations to date.

As the overture for the week the Howard Symphony orchestra, under the direction of Joseph Littau, will offer "The Fortune Teller" in memory of Victor Herbert.

Melvin P. Ogden will feature "The Rosary," by Ethelbert Nevin, at the mighty Wurlitzer. Other numbers on the strong program will include an Our Gang comedy and International News.

Having finished cutting Laura La-Plante's latest picture, "Her Big Night," Melville Brown will assume the direction of "Taxi, Taxi," the George Weston story which has just been placed in screen form by Raymond Cannon.

ON THE SCREEN

The screen entertainment at the movies are some of the best offered in recent months. Left to right, Anna Q. Nilsson in "Her Second Chance" at the Metropolitan theater. Next, top, scene from "It's the Old Army Game" at the Howard theater, starring W. C. Fields. Top, center, scene with Tom Mix in "The Best Bad Man" at Loew's Grand. Right, top, Charles Ray and Pauline Stark in "The Bright Lights" at the Cameo. Lower left, scene with Jack Holt from "Sea Horses" at the Rialto. Next, scene with William Boyd, Vera Reynolds and Hobart Bosworth in "Steel Preferred" at the West End theater. Next, Leatrice Joy at the Alamo No. 2 in "The Wedding Song." Lower right, Bessie Love in "The Lost World" at the Palace theater.

TALE OF REVENGE ON METROPOLITAN SCREEN

Beautiful Anne Q. Nilsson Seen in "Her Second Chance."

A horse race in which two of the fastest horses in California participate among others forms one of the episodes in "Her Second Chance," which opens Monday for a week's run at the Metropolitan theater. Two of the ponies entered have actually run against each other in other races and they contribute toward making the race scenes realistic.

Caroline Logan, a Kentucky mountain girl, portrayed by Miss Nilsson in the picture, grew up with one fixed idea—to be revenged on the judge who sent her to a reformatory school for stealing a horse to aid her dying mother. Beachey, a crooked lawyer, played by Sam de Grasse, present at her trial later obtained her parole and she started life anew as Mrs. Constance Lee.

Education and clothes worked wonders with the wild mountain girl and soon the crooked barrister was able to use her as he had intended—as an ally in his crooked business.

Realization of the shady business she was engaged in finally came to the girl and she rebelled, telling Beachey pointedly that she was through, but when he tells her that their next victim is the judge himself, she consents to assist him in bringing about the judge's disgrace and ruin.

She meets the judge and conceives a plan for causing his downfall. He has a horse entered in the forthcoming race and the girl plans to substitute a younger horse under his colors, thereby making him seemingly guilty of entering a "ringer."

She soon finds, however, that she has acquired a tender feeling for the intended victim and refuses to go through with the scheme. She returns to her home in the mountains thinking that the shyster has abandoned all plans in regard to the judge.

She learns on the day of the race that the shyster is still bent on perpetrating the dastardly plot and she speeds to the race track in a high-powered car, only to arrive there too late, for the race has already been run off. The events which follow make it one of the most interesting tales ever reeled off on an Atlanta screen. Miss Nilsson is supported by Huntly Gordon and Charles Murray.

On the stage this week is the big Charleston contest, in which the many contestants will compete daily for an array of prizes that surpass anything ever offered in a contest of this nature. A contest will take place at all of the de luxe performances during the day.

In keeping with the spirit of the occasion, the Ned Wayburn presentation for the week will be "Charlestonians."

Enrico Leide in the overture, "Songs of Today," is featuring the popular Leo Feist song, "I Never Knew How Wonderful You Were," with Bob Earle, Chicago's premier radio singer, singing a number of the latest Broadway successes. Mr. Earle's mellow, sympathetic voice is winning for him an enviable popularity, this being the second week of his return engagement at the Metropolitan. Up-to-the-minute Charleston music is used for the fourth of the series of the Ned Wayburn Charleston lessons on the screen. Old popular and familiar Charleston music with the introduction of novelty hits is featuring the Charleston contests. The musical score is built from both the popular and classical favorites. The theme is one of Villa Moret's latest publications, "Some Day You'll Be Sorry."

While watching a football game in the final of the Irish cup competition at Belfast recently, Alexander Hutchinson became so excited that he was attacked by heart failure and died the next day.

Star Goes to Altar in The Wedding Song at Alamo No. 2 Theater

Leatrice Joy's second starring vehicle produced under the supervision of Cecil B. DeMille is "The Wedding Song," playing at the Alamo No. 2 theater Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of this week. Patrons of the Alamo No. 2 have in this splendid melodramatic photoplay an attraction of superior mirth. The story, a picturization of Ethel Watts Mumford's successful novel of the same name, is of the exotic type, redolent of the spicy perfume of the tropic isles, with the colorful San Francisco underworld as a background. It is a photoplay of extraordinary merit, brimful of situations that thrill, and has an abundance of beauty, charm and tremendous heart appeal.

Miss Joy in the role of Beatrice Glynn does her best work. Robert Ames handles the role of Hayes Hallan perfectly natural. The entire supporting cast is good. There is also a new comedy on the same program.

For Thursday Raymond Griffith in "He's a Prince" will be shown. Friday and Saturday Jacqueline Logan will hold the screen in "If Marriage Fails."

CHARLESTON FEATURES METROPOLITAN STAGE

"Charleston," "Charleston" will be the dominent theme on the stage at the Metropolitan theater this week. One of the largest Charleston contests ever staged will be a feature supplemented by a Ned Wayburn production depicting the Charleston in its many forms.

This Charleston contest promises to be one of the biggest ever held in the city with an array of prizes that make it almost impossible for the contestant, however unskilled, to not capture one of the many prizes at stake.

The very appropriate stage feature this week is "Charlestonians," perhaps the most attractive of the Ned Wayburn offerings yet seen. The same three beautiful stars of last week's offering will be seen again this week in "Charlestonians."

"Charlestonians" is not in any sense composed of the Charleston exclusively. It presents many variations of the popular dance in novel settings, interspersed with oriental and classical numbers.

All in all, "Charlestonians" seems to be the most promising of the Wayburn attractions, all of which reflect credit to that master of American amusement.

Bob Earle has been held over for the second week of his return engagement and he will feature this week, "I Never Knew How Wonderful You Were" with Enrico Leide and his Metropolitan orchestra accompanying.

On the screen this week is Anna Q. Nilsson and Huntly Gordon in the screen adaptation of Mrs. Wilson Woodrow's celebrated novel, "Her Second Chance." It is a tale of a girl who was wrongly sentenced to the reformatory and the means she adopted in obtaining revenge on the judge who sentenced her.

ALLAN DWAN TRIES NEW STARS AT RIALTO

Producer of Swanson Successes Offers "Sea Horses."

Those who choose their film fare on the basis of dramatic strength of story, excellent characterization, pictorial beauty and able direction may well make it a point to see "Sea Horses," the new Paramount spectacle-melodrama which headlines the program for the week at the Rialto theater.

It is handsomely supplemented in entertainment value by Harold Lloyd's "Now or Never," a reissue which was prompted by popular demand.

There will be short features, including Pathe News, which changes on Thursday, and Whitney Hubner will conduct a suitable musical program.

Advance reports hail "Sea Horses" as the best picture of its type the current season has produced.

Allan Dwan, producer of "Robin Hood" and many of Gloria Swanson's greatest successes, directed the picture, and showed good directional judgment by choosing Jack Holt, Florence Vidor, George Bancroft and William Powell for the principal roles.

The story is based on Becky Gardiner's adaptation and James Hamilton's scenario of Francis Brett Young's sensational novel, which created quite a furore when it appeared serially in "Everybody's Magazine."

Something different in the way of scenery, settings, atmosphere and backgrounds may be expected, for the major part of the action takes place in an isolated port on the east African coast. However, many of the earlier scenes are laid on board a big ocean freighter, and it is here that a very realistic fist fight is staged between two of the officers for love of Miss Vidor, who is the lone woman passenger aboard. A rip-roaring storm at sea and a tropical tornado on land are other high spots in the production.

For those unfamiliar with the plot it will suffice to say that it details the experiences of Miss Vidor en route to Africa and her adventures there, after she discovers that her husband has degenerated into a drunken beachcomber.

In preparation for the increased program of producing activity about to be instituted at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, Victor Clark has been appointed to the newly created post of manager of studio operations. Clark will help Louis B. Mayer and Irving G. Thalberg to keep track of everything that goes on in the colossal film plant.

EPOCHAL WAR FILM THE ATLANTA THEATER

Portrays Titanic Conflict, All Nations Taking Part

"The World War," a motion picture utilizing a great portion of the world as a set, with entire nations playing minor parts and with eleven-twelfths of the world's population in the cast, will have its initial appearance at the Atlanta theater starting next Monday, May 24.

This unusual picture, which is being shown in this city under the auspices of Argonne post, No. 1, of the American Legion, has been described as "at once the most thrilling and authentic history of the world war that has ever been told in pictures."

The story of this picture's creation, the lives lost in "shooting" its scenes, the months of delving into the archives of the governments of the United States, Great Britain, France, Italy, Russia and Germany to obtain official data and pictures, the years devoted to its careful preparation, and the official seals of the United States navy and army departments stamped on the film (the first time in the history of motion pictures that those great seals have appeared on films), all these unusual elements in this picture's preparation make it what it is—"the first big historical motion picture of the world war."

Its action covers the greatest drama in the history of the world over a period of four years. Therein lies the remarkable feature of this unusual picture; it has successfully brought to the screen in comprehensive and graphic form, the most gigantic war in the history of the world. This has been done by careful compilation of scenes that are revealing, impressive and authentic.

War in all its phases is seen in this film. There are no picked scenes. The lumbering tanks, the murderous machine guns sweeping No Man's land, the poisonous gas, the smoke screens, the depth bombs, sinking of ships by submarines, the flare of star shells, the recoil of gigantic guns gouging the earth in angry protest, the wire entanglements, the falling planes, the falling men—all the elements of war are seen in this great picture.

"The title of the picture, 'The World War,' is no misnomer," one critic said. "It is just that. When you have seen it you will know."

"Mismates," with Doris Kenyon in the leading role and "The Crystal Cup," with probably Dorothy Mackaill as the featured player, will be the next two pictures to be made in New York by First National under Earl Hudson's supervision. The script of "The Crystal Cup" is already completed and Sada Cowan is working on "Mismates."

Cameo Theater.

"One Way Street."

"One Way Street," which has its repeat showing in Atlanta on Friday and Saturday at the Cameo, is the story of a very beautiful woman who had tasted the sweets of life and dreaded to lose them through oncoming age, and who sought to retain her place through trickery, but who found that the road of youth, life, love and laughter is a one way street from which there is and can be no return.

The picture is interspersed with drama and adventure and holds the interest of the spectator all the way through, with its big dramatic moments unsurpassed for intensity of motion.

In the leading roles are Anna Q. Nilsson, Ben Lyon and a number of stellar performers of the silverscreen.

On Monday and Tuesday the Cameo offers a delightful story of the gay white way, of a girl, the product of New York night life who thinks all men are the same, becomes disillusioned and returns home, to find the love she wants, but late learns that this man, too, has felt the lure of the bright lights—finds the conquering power of love, and finds happiness. The picture is a very delightful mixture of comedy and pathos. Charles Ray and Pauline Starke have the leading roles.

Gloria Swanson's "The Untamed Lady" has its return engagement at the Cameo on Wednesday and Thursday, and the patrons of the theater will have the opportunity of viewing one of the most delightful pictures the great star ever made—the story of a beautiful woman, gifted with a terrible temper, who longed for the man who could tame her, and found him. Lawrence Gray plays opposite the star in this picture.

TWO BIG COMEDY ACTS TOP KEITH PROGRAMS

Heading into its final weeks as a vaudeville theater Keith's Forsyth is staging this week another splendid variety program which serves in a way as a farewell to vaudeville patrons—a program that is memorable because of the wide diversity and exceptional entertainment offered in the various acts.

The premier attraction the first half of the week, beginning Monday, will be Jack McLallen, with "Sarah" and company, in a versatile collection of the things vaudeville audiences like best, which is to say, a flock of laughs, tricks and tunes. They sing a little, dance a little and by way of good measure, offer some brilliant roller skating work.

More comedy is to be found in the sketch "Contradictions," which serves to introduce Lorin Baker and company. These capable juveniles are presented by Lewis and Gordon and their amusing vehicle was written by Edwin Burke. The playlet is full of sparkling dialogue and affords an excellent opportunity to Mr. Baker, who has become known as one of the leading juveniles of the country.

An appetizing morsel delightfully served by Evelyn Phillips with Joe Devaney and Harold Price is the "Melodious Dance Achievement." Here is a trio which entirely disproves the idea that dancers cannot be singers, for Miss Phillips and her accompanists go from one satisfactory talent to another with bewildering rapidity.

Billed as "The Beau Brummells From Songland," Lewis and Smith live up to the title both in appearance and in voices. Mr. Lewis is a tenor and Mr. Smith a baritone.

An athletic absurdity called "Go 'Head Charlie" is the offering of John Monroe and Tom Grant, two capable athletes and comedians as well. They clothe their feats of strength in a very agreeable costume of laughter.

Heading the program for the last half of the week in the famous team of Blue Bert Kenney and I. M. Nobody, who are still arguing about nothing in particular. In addition to the novelty of the idea—a lengthy argument in nonsense—Mr. Kenney is an accomplished black-face comedian.

Paul Leni, German artist and the designer of the marvelous settings for "Wax Works," shown privately in New York recently, arrived in New York on Monday on the Republic. He will go direct to Universal City, where he will design settings, originate presentation scenery and possibly direct motion pictures for Universal.

TOM MIX AND HORSE FEATURE LOEW'S FILM

In one of the best pictures of his career "The Best Bad Man" Tom Mix, popular star, will appear at Loew's Grand theater this week supported by an all-star cast. The work of Tom Mix in this picture is said to stand out as one of the best achievements of his career.

From humble cowboy riding western ranches to the highest salaried motion picture star in the world seems a far jump, yet Tom Mix has achieved it. This has not been accomplished without serious and untiring effort and a fine appreciation of the standards that go to make up the virile and understanding western picture.

Many have the impression that Tom Mix, famous Fox star, has reached stellar heights through sheer ability to ride a horse. Of course, Tom's daring horsemanship has had much to do with his success, but underlying his prowess in this direction has been the constant use of good, clean mental activity and energy.

It is Mix himself who puts the Mix into Mix pictures. Scenarist and continuity writers make no effort to outline or indicate the thrills and daring exploits that make for the popularity of Mix pictures. All that is left for Mix himself to do. He it is and he alone who works out these moments of acute tenseness that have made famous the Mix product.

No man in motion pictures has evidenced the great resourcefulness shown by Mix, nor has any other western star achieved the fine standardization of product that marks the Mix picture. It is this great and never-ending variety of thrills that has made Tom Mix the idol of the small boy throughout the world.

Mix accepts this signal honor and in return tries to help the youngster. In no picture does Tom do the slightest thing to which the most exacting mother could object if copied by her own child. In no picture has Mix ever been known to take a drink; in no picture has Mix ever been seen to smoke; in no picture has he ever played a scene showing him gambling with cards or in any way taking unfair advantage of an adversary. In no Mix picture has he ever gained a monetary reward. At no time has Mix ever been pictured as a rich man in the final scenes. Usually his reward comes in the shape of a promotion to the foremanship of a ranch, a good job, or the hand of some nice girl.

So great was Japan's purchase of wheat in Melbourne this year that at one time fifteen Japanese vessels were leoding the grain at Melbourne docks.

'A GARDEN FESTIVAL' HOWARD PRESENTATION

In producing his second Publix theaters presentation, "A Garden Festival," which will be the stage attraction at the greater Howard theater starting tomorrow, Frank Cambria employed as his setting a celebrated art masterpiece and then literally brought it to life. The painting, reproduced in a frame which covers nearly the entire stage, is that by Watteau from which Mr. Cambria's stage presentation derives its title. Watteau is known among art connoisseurs and students as the pensive painter of the gaiety of the early eighteenth century in France, an artist who gave joy to a generation temporarily dull and morose. He is credited with changing the very life of the Parisians of that day. In fact, it was written of him. "Paris dressed, posed, picnicked and conversed a la Watteau."

The garden scene is painted on scrim which gives a perfect illusion of old canvas, and in all the splendor of the original brilliant colors employed by the old master. The painter himself is seen at one side with brush and palette, giving the masterpiece its finishing touches. One by one the figures in the painting come to life—first the flutist at the extreme left, then all the others in turn, each person contributing his bit to the entertainment which Watteau depicted so delightfully. With gorgeous costumes and brilliant stage lighting, together with incidental music which includes such favorites as the Shadow Song from "Dinorah," Schubert's "Serenade" and Chopin's "Nocturne," this brilliant stage presentation is well calculated to appeal to the best artistic tastes of discriminating audiences.

Louise Fezenda.

Louise Fazenda started out a fan before she ever dreamed of going into pictures. To this day she still is a fan and while she goes to see pictures critically as a student who is looking for improvement in her own work, she is ever loyal to her first favorites. Mary Pickford was her first idol and at this writing Louise loves her as ardently as when she saved her lunch money as a schoolgirl to see Mary at some nickleodeon. Lillian Gish is another favorite. Louise sees a great many pictures and is familiar with the work of all the favorites.

Pat O'Malley and the entire family arrived in New York on Saturday from Universal City for a visit of a month's duration. Among other things, Pat O'Malley will be the principal guest of honor at the opening of "The Midnight Sun" in the Colony theater next week. The noted Irish actor played the Russian grand duke in this super-jewel production. O'Malley has just finished his role in "Perch of the Devil," by Gertrude Atherton.

SID HALL'S JAZZ BAND LOEW'S BIG-TIME ACT

Sid Hall and his entertainers, who have won international success with pleasing programs of jazz music, topical songs and semi-classical selections, will head the new bill of vaudeville at Loew's Grand theater this week.

While there are jazz bands of every description and every type in the amusement field today, the really great bands stand out in the public's estimation because of the thoroughness of the execution and because of the popularity of the programs selected. Sid Hall has an organization which ranks as one of the best in the world, and the leader always provides a program which appeals to people with all kinds of musical tastes.

Hall's ability as a leader is unquestioned and his present tour has been one of uninterrupted success. The band deals little in horseplay, but goes right into action from the start, presenting a program remarkable for the large number of selections played during the limited time it appears on the vaudeville bill.

Arthur Angel and Violet Fuller, two clever fun-makers who also possess much musical ability, will present a novelty skit entitled, "Music and Character."

Jack Jarvis & Co. will present their ludicrous comedy sketch, "The Woman Pays," which is full of bright lines and amusing situations.

All kinds of entertainment ranging from dancing to harmony singing will be offered by Francis, Ross and Du Ross in "Three Aces of Variety." This act also contains a pleasing comedy element.

Francis & LaPell offer their new equilibristic turn, "Up in the Air." It includes sensational foot balancing and head-to-head juggling.

The screen attraction is Tom Mix and his remarkable horse, Tony, in "The Best Bad Man." He is supported by Clara Bow, Judy King and other well-known players.

Palace Theater.

At the Palace theater in Inman park Monday and Tuesday, Lew Cody and Eleanor Boardman will star in the screen version of Cosmo Hamilton's great stage comedy success, "Exchange of Wives." This swift moving comedy also features the vivacious Renee Adoree, the little French girl who scored such a hit in "The Big Parade." "Exchange of Wives" has only four people in the cast which is completed by Creighton Hale in addition to those named above. Hale is well known in Atlanta, having played in stock at the Lyric for quite a long and successful engagement.

"To the Last Man," with Lois Wilson and Richard Dix comes to the Palace for Wednesday only and will provide a type of entertainment fully up to the high standard to be expected from stars of their magnitude. This picture is the screen interpretation of Zane Grey's great novel of the same name and the story is laid in typical Zane Grey country, the Tonto basin of Arizona. Altogether it is a thrilling and dramatic western of the better class.

A great galaxy of stars in the most unique picture of the year will appear at the Palace Thursday and Friday when Bessie Love, Lewis Stone, Wallace Beery and Lloyd Hughes combine their talents to make "The Lost World" the great success it undoubtedly is. "The Lost World" represents the last word in the ingenuity of screen play producers and offers a thrill that is distinct from anything yet attempted by the big companies.

"Desert Madness," a western picture with a punch comes to the Palace for the concluding bill of the week Saturday.

Don Lanning, Versatile Star, Heads Forsyth Musical Comedy

The musical comedy stock company at the Forsyth theater several summers ago quite clearly demonstrated the fact that musical stock is a drawing card in Atlanta during the summer months, usually the dullest season in theatrical circles.

For the same reason, better and more popular performers can be obtained during the summer season than even the largest of the regular season road shows can boast.

Hence, while the summer is just in the offing, plans are being completed for the showing here of a musical stock company that is predicted to prove more popular than any other organization of its kind in this vicinity.

A glance at the completed cast is all that is necessary to inform the public of the type of shows which will grace the stage at the Forsyth theater this summer. In completing the cast of this stock company talent has been drawn from practically every Broadway show of any renown at all.

Don Lanning, one of the most popular and versatile young comedians of the day will be the star of the organization. This young man's work has been the subject of much comment for the past year and he will undoubtedly be acclaimed in this city.

In addition to an unusually talented chorus, the remainder of the cast will include Ruth Tester, late ingenue of "Bunk of 1926," now playing at the Sam H. Harris in New York; Emily Ross, drawn from the Ziegfeld Follies at the Amsterdam; Milton Rieck, juvenile, also of the "Bunk of 1926" company; Edna Jacques, Bobby Williams, dancer, from the Winter Garden, and Effie Burley, formerly of the Jimmie Hodges company.

James E. Eviston, who is heading this production, is one of the most prominent theatrical producers in the country. He headed a company last summer which presented musical stock at the Plaza theater in Asheville, and he has also produced similar successes in Norfolk and Richmond.

Mr. Eviston states that he has been unusually lucky in being able to obtain such prominent members of this summer's production, and he expects this company to be the zenith of his work in the profession.

The company will open Monday, June 7, presenting one of New York's successes, "No Other Girl." Manager Semon, of the Forsyth, announces that the top price will be 75 cents, an unusually moderate price for a feature of this kind.

"Besides 'No Other Girl,' each week a new musical play will be presented, including such musical comedy gems as 'Very Good Eddie,' 'Tangerine,' 'Plain Jane,' 'The Clinging Vine,' 'Irene,' 'Little Nellie Kelly,' 'Little Jesse Janes,' 'My Girl,' 'The O'Brien Girl,' 'Lollypop,' 'Over Here,' 'Buddies,' 'Listen, Lester' and many others."

MORE ATTRACTIONS FOR LAKEWOOD PARK

Fleet of Skiffs Launched. Sunday Afternoon Concert Event of Today.

Steadily building Lakewood Amusement park toward the announced goal of the biggest pleasure resort in the United States, Secretary-Manager Oscar Mills Saturday maintained the season's record of adding at least one new permanent amusement device each week since the park opened.

Launching of the fleet of new, fast and handsome skiffs on the lake was the innovation for the week just closed. The previous week the "caterpillar" was opened as a new feature, giving a variety of thrills and fun never found at the park before. "Cuckoo Inn," a new baseball game, the dancing casino and several other attractions have been added during the first five weeks of the park's season.

Additional amusements under construction include the "Zig Zag" fun house, the "Coal Mine" and the "Rocky Road to Dublin," one of which may be in operation this week.

The park will continue its policy of gala musical concerts every Sunday, presenting the Elks' Royal Purple band and Jessie Reese Calvert, dramatic soprano, in an attractive program from 3 to 5 o'clock this (Sunday) afternoon.

The concert will be held on the new stage in front of the grandstand, in full view and clear hearing distance of nearly 8,000 comfortable theater chairs with which the grandstand is equipped. The opening of the Sunday concerts with the singing of "America" by the audience standing as the flag is raised, begun two weeks ago, will be continued this Sunday.

The picnic season at the park is in full swing this week, with three big picnics and a large number of congenial family and neighborhood affairs scheduled. Picnic groves are fully equipped with tables and benches with running water and ice water conveniently placed.

Alamo No. 1.

The feature for Friday and Saturday is "The White Outlaw." Nothing would stop him—stealing silently through the night—kicking the bars of the corral down—opening the barn doors and leading his prey off to the unknown wilderness where man had never ventured. See this marvelous horse in the most unique western picture of the season, "The White Outlaw," starring Jack Hoxie and his wonder horse, "Scout." It is amazing, fascinating, thrilling and gripping to the last foot of film. "Papa Darling," a Sunshine comedy, will make you laugh until your sides ache.

Monday and Tuesday, Douglas Fairbanks in "Blaze Derringer." A fast, sizzling, stunt western drama. A cloudburst of thrills and laughs. Fairbanks in one of his hits that made him famous and gave him the name as the supreme stunt and entertaining star of the screen.

Wednesday and Thursday, "Baree, Son of Kazan," another one of James Oliver Curwood's famous outdoor novels turned into a big and thrilling photoplay.

A man shoots a man in self-defense and hides in the forests of northwestern Canada. After many thrilling adventures and several slam-bank fights with thiefs of the far-flung north, he is cleared of this murder. A dog also comes in for his share of the hero part, as he fights with his desolate pal and saves his life time after time. A red-blooded dog story of the outdoors that everyone should see. Also chapter No. 6, "Casey of the Coast Guard."

John Miljan.

John Miljan has had plenty of practice in being all things to all men. The actor who is now busy furnishing a delightful characterization in "Almost a Lady," starring Marie Prevost for Metropolitan pictures, started his career as actor on the speaking stage when only 15 years old. Since the war in which he served with the marines, he played in stock 135 different characters and before that over 350, making about 500 in all. On the stage he played both "heavies" and leads.

Charley Chase.

Charley Chase will have for his charming vis-a-vis for his next comedy which goes under production this week, Corliss Palmer who was signed by Hal Roach after a most successful screen test. The new vehicle, according to Mr. Chase, who has been working on his story for the past two weeks, is a romance, carrying a lot of "gags." The Hal Roach star plays a well-meaning young business man whose generosity and painstaking get him into a heap of trouble. The rest of the cast will be announced later. Leo McCarey will direct.

The structures in Manizales, Colombia, which have housed the business concerns that were driven from their permanent quarters by a fire last July were destroyed recently in another blaze.

Footnotes ON THE Footlights

BY ELMO HAMBY

This office is in receipt of a statement issued by the Honorable Mack Sennett regarding a subject on which he is undoubtedly qualified to speak.

"A few years ago," Mr. Sennett points out, "because of the increasing length of dramatic features, two-reel comedies suffered in the public mind. Exhibitors dwelt amost entirely with their long reel plays in their exploitation of the comedies which sent the audience away smiling were given little consideration.

"Today it is a different story. The seven and eight-reel dramas continue, but theater patrons attend to see a complete entertainment, and the comedy is just as important a feature in two reels, if it is truly funny, as any drama. Comedies never have been more in demand than today. They provide a great field for real artists, actors, directors and writers alike. The average two-reel comedy requires equally as much thought, often more, than the seven or eight-reel drama."

This person must give "aye" to Mr. Sennett's remarks, for it has been his painful dufy on numerous occasions to witness theater programs which, had it not been for a corking good comedy, would have been a complete and abysmal flop of the rankest kind.

The entertainment at the Forsyth theater this week will continue uninterrupted throughout the summer. The Keith circuit goes on Saturday, June 5, and the following Monday the stock company which has been engaged for the summer will open with "No Other Girl." Don Lanning will be seen in the leading role.

Regardless of the fact that this is his 'steenth trip around the Loew circuit, the ever-eccentric "Milo" seems to be going strong. At the Grand, the past week, this person could not denote any difference in the hearty applause which rewarded his efforts at that time and when he first saw the gentleman perform a few years ago.

Bob Earle is, in the opinion of this person, one of the most popular singers who has ever been heard on an Atlanta stage, and it would perhaps be a wise course for the management of the Metropolitan theater, where he has appeared, to make him a permanent feature, just as the orchestra and the organist.

• • •

There seems to be no limitations to the scope of the Publix theaters stage productions. Atlanta has seen at the Howard everything from musical comedy to grand opera, and a great many more are yet to be seen. Next!

West End Theater.

A greater week's program than is booked for this week at the West End theater would be hard to arrange. "We Moderns," with Colleen Moore in the big role, is the lead-off, followed after two days' run with the "Super-Speed," starring Reed Howes in a spectacular speed classic in which a daring crook is beaten at his own game.

Manager Alpha Fowler has booked a trio of fine films for his palatial little playhouse and is sure to get the patronage such an excellent bill deserves.

In "We Moderns," Atlantans will see the dainty Miss Moore in one of the greatest films of her enviable movie career. With superb acting by a great cast, headed by such a popular favorite, the picture is certain to prove everything that has been claimed for it during its two-day stay here.

This feature will be followed on Wednesday by Reed Howes in "Super-Speed," which gets its name from a speed classic that furnishes all the thrills the average audience cares to stand in an evening's entertainment. It has a fine romance and a thrilling climax in which the driver outwits a crook—but that is telling the fine story. "Super Speed" will be shown only Wednesday afternoon, as the theater will close at night to enable the Agoga class of the West End Baptist Sunday school to put on their minstrel show.

On all programs for Thursday and Friday "Steel Preferred" will be the big picture. Few pictures have reached such mystifying depths as this plot and wherever it has been shown audiences wildly acclaim it. Its coming to Atlanta furnishes a fine finale for the week's program at the West End theater and climaxes one of the best week's bills in many months at this popular playhouse.

Milton Sills' next starring vehicle for First National will be "Puppets," the stage play by Frances Lightner, which ran in New York last winter. John Fish Goodrich is doing the continuity of this story which will be filmed under a new title. A. L. Rockett will make his bow as a First National supervisor on this picture which will be directed by George Archainbaud.

Rapid strides are being made by Director Fred Newmeyer on "The Savage," which is now in production at First National's New York studios with Ben Lyon and May McAvoy in the featured roles. As soon as special ballroom scenes are cleaned up it is planned to take the unit to Florida for the shooting of exteriors.

Honors Divided in Plans For Week's Social Gaieties

By Bessie S. Stanford.

HONORS for this week's gaieties are divided among the social affairs planned for those shining lights on the list of sponsors coming here for the Stone Mountain memorial ball, Monday evening at the Atlanta Biltmore and the regularly scheduled summer opening of the Piedmont Driving club Tuesday evening made in a setting of Dorothy Perkins roses. It has actually become a habit with the equestrian devotees to close every week-end with a horse show, and as a culmination to the week at hand, the Junior leaguers will sponsor the horse show staged at Garden Hills.

As variety is considered the spice of life these events will add a rather spicy seasoning to the week's program, with unusual interest centering in the fair sponsors selected to represent the southern states at the all-southern Confederate memorial appreciation ball. Virginia's representative, Miss Emma Ralph, of Keller, in Accomac county, belongs to the old Custis family, and is a relative of Mrs. Elise Quinby Bell. Heralded as a beauty with great personal charm plus many accomplishments, she will uphold the traditions of the Old Dominion, a state famed for its lovely daughters. Miss Fannie Bailey, of Baton Rouge, La., daughter of the secretary of the state of Louisiana, is among the competitors for the grand prize offered by the association—a marble bust done from life by Augustus Lukeman.

Conquers Bachelorhood.

NO young woman in local society has been a greater favorite than Miss Grace Goldsmith, and certainly her fiance, Charles Harmon Cox, shares some of that glory, for as adjutant general of the state of Georgia, and a gentleman of unusual merit, he is equally popular in social and military circles. Though by no means a woman hater, everybody had about decided he was sentiment proof, and his bachelorhood had been accepted as rather a permanent state for—lo, these many years. But the dear and curious public reckoned without the invasion of charming Miss Goldsmith into his life.

Once in a while a couple announce their engagement, positively forbidding the newspapers from printing all about their ancestors, relying entirely upon the fact that their aristocratic connections have always occupied top place in Atlanta's social register and there is no necessity in commenting upon the subject. All of which is quite refreshing.

That's exactly what happened in the case of Miss Goldsmith and Mr. Cox, who perchance, provide an object lesson for others, for they told their relatives and intimate friends before the engagement was published, and went about making preparations for a quiet wedding which takes place on a balmy June evening at the home of the bride's parents on Piedmont avenue.

She will wear the conventional bridal raiment, with a misty veil enveloping her pretty, smiling countenance. The happy couple will depart soon after the ceremony for Philadelphia, the cradle of the "Infant Republic," where General Cox will take a prominent part in the opening session of the sesqui-centennial celebration marking the one hundred and fiftieth birthday of our country.

Returning from a wedding journey, they will open their summer "shack," as they style the rambling summer cottage just beyond the big gates on the Campbellton road leading into Fort McPherson, and July will find them attending the annual encampment at Tybee island of the 122d infantry of Georgia's national guards, with General Cox as commanding officer.

A Mediterranean Cruise.

OFF on a lengthy Mediterranean cruise goes Mrs. James Jordan, sailing from New York on the Lapland July 7 with letters of introduction in her possession from Secretary of State Kellogg to American ambassadors and consulates in Europe.

Maderia is the first port of call and she has timed her stop at Venice when the Dream City is flooded with silvery moonlight. Believing in the late Elbert Hubbard's maxim in acclaiming that "the only difference between a rut and the grave is the depth," she plans a summer vacation abroad to escape a touch of monotony. In speaking of her trip, Mrs. Jordan declared she has only left Atlanta for one day in two years, and that holiday was spent attending a funeral in Macon, scarcely terming the occasion a pleasurable one. Her soul is steeped in the beauty and romantic history of the old world and she will tour Europe desirous of seeing and visiting the places she has dreamed and read about all her life. Mrs. Jordan will terminate her stay abroad in a three weeks' visit to Mrs. Samuel Stewart Wallace in Paris before she embarks for America, reaching home in September.

Mrs. Alston's Successor.

THE Atlanta Fine Arts club, firmly fixed in the standards of society, maintaining as it does, one of the leading positions in the inner circles of the smart set, presents its drawing room programs in the homes of many of its leaders, a custom which has been observed ever since its organization.

Retiring in a few weeks to private citizenship is Mrs. Robert C. Alston, popular, president of the Fine Arts club. The election of another prominent matron to succeed her is of no small importance, for Mrs. Alston added hundreds of dollars to the treasury during her regime, which enables the incoming president to apply toward bringing artistic attractions here next year. The membership list, an invitational one by the way, is selected from those whose powers of enjoyment are determined by their intellectual tastes and cultural aims. Each one is entirely in sympathy with the purpose of the club which is a desirable influence in this ever-changing community.

Duplicating the Goldfish.

A young couple, the principals of this little incident, were newlyweds and Mrs. Newlywed was about to take her first vacation away from her fond husband. In turning over to him the custodianship of their lares and penates, she dwelt with particular concern on the face and feeding of the three goldfish that brightened the cosy home. Undoubtedly the burden would be light—merely changing the water at stated times and ladling the fish food according to instructions.

Simple enough it sounded—but without a word of warning. Mr. Newlywed was dismayed to find on the morning of the third day an inert, lifeless goldfish floating fitfully around the top of the bowl when he made his matutinal round. Perturbed in mind and determined to be faithful to his trust, he gingerly packed the deceased fish in salt to preserve it until the end of the day when he patrolled the shopping sections in an endeavor to duplicate that goldfish. And duplicate it he did, even to a white spot near the tail, which may have been a birthmark or merely where one of the dead one's playmates nipped him in passing. Thankfully he transferred the live goldfish into the bowl and perhaps he commended himself on his ingenuity. (I should have done so if it had happened to me.) It was just as well that he had conceived the brilliant solution, for on the two consecutive mornings he was greeted with a floating goldfish, immune from the sorrows of this world. And with stubborn intent he wearily trod the rounds at the day's end in search of more goldfish—and he insists that there is more to matching goldfish than meets the casual eye.

Not without considerable trepidation did he hover near his wife while she greeted the pets (he called them "pests") on her return and he heaved a mighty sigh of relief when he sensed that his duplicity had passed muster. Exactly one week later, the morning inspection made by Mrs. Newlywed revealed not one, but three, dead goldfish and to this day she does not know or even suspect that they were not her very own goldfish—but others "just as good!"

Mrs. Katz Honors Miss Ora Jackson.

Mrs. S. D. Katz was hostess at an informal luncheon Friday for Miss Ora Jackson, bride-elect of this month, at her home on Page avenue.

Miss Jackson's place at the table was marked by a miniature bride and groom, and she was presented a pair of silver candlesticks.

Invited to meet Miss Jackson were Miss Madge Howell, Miss Grace Jackson, Mrs. Worth Ellis White, Jr., Mrs. Roy Kiser Smith, Mrs. S. A. Walters and Mrs. L. W. Fisher.

A display of fashions exploiting the fascinating and distinctively new—originals and exclusive style interpretations for the bride's trousseau and for the sweet girl graduate is at the M. Rich & Bros. Company.

Gowns for "the" important occasion, whichever it may be, are fashioned in white georgette, chiffon, crepe de chine, taffeta and satin and are elegant in their simplicity, beauty and elegance—emphasizing the flared silhouette, the bolero bodice, the petal and tiered skirt—new ties, rolled collars and flying scarf ends. Everything is diaphanous and embodies the spirit of motion in effect. Gilet lingerie and the one-side hip trimming, the transparent yoke and inverted godet fullness are attractive features in many of the new frocks. Organdie is very smart for the graduation dress and there are many models from which to choose that would make Mademoiselle a charming, chic personage much to be admired on this "day of days" when she wishes to appear at her best, feeling as she does that she is the center of attraction to her friends present.

In the individualized departments at Rich's for women and the sub-deb will be seen frocks that are acclaimed by everyone to be beautiful and unusually smart with chic of line achieved in a variety of subtle ways in the most charming fabrics both plain or flowered of exquisite pastel shades. They are lovely and with a wardrobe of frocks such as these you are sure to find pleasure and happiness in their wearing. They are distinguished for their style and combine their smartness with moderate prices—frocks as gay, as debonair as youth itself—that are charming for their exquisite detail—frocks that can be worn for any occasion.

Taffeta has returned to prominence with great success—a new, softer taffeta that has both bouffancy and grace. It is used for both suits and frocks and is especially interesting as a fabric for frocks with the new soft bulk and for the robe de style.

Beauty! Strength! Power! Comfort! All these and more have been combined into the New Franklin Sport Roadster now on display at the Franklin Motor Company, 151 West Peachtree Street.

You cannot fail to note the perfection of the design of this beautiful Roadster and will be fascinated by its luxury of line and charm of color—every detail has been given the attention that has made the Franklin excel in craftsmanship—it appeals with its grace and beauty of acknowledged style supremacy—it is a de Causse design.

This smart looking Roadster gives a new conception of open car beauty and is of striking appearance. The color is cream outlined by a hair-line border of dark brown trim, while the fenders and running gear are of lustrous deep black. When purchasing your Roadster, you are given the preference of color schemes—that assures individuality. The upholstery is of Colonial leather and the fittings are Duralinon, which are nickel-plated over copper or brass, insuring you against its brilliant surface being marred by tarnishing.

The Sport Model Roadster is a luxuriously comfortable car, compact yet roomy; a wide seat large enough for three persons and also a rumble seat in the rear that seats two comfortably. It is equipped with full elliptic springs, balloon tires, a license tag and a full tank of gas. At the new price this Roadster is the greatest automobile value in Roadsters today and after you have seen the car and had it demonstrated to you—you will marvel at its performance, for everyone who has seen it say it is "the most beautiful," the "most original and distinctive" and the "smartest sport model" they have ever seen. But it is not only in its visible qualities that it excels, for a Franklin runs smoother at all speeds—it is a custom-built car—you can drive in high gear most of the time—no other car holds the road easier—its wheelbase is long and its center of gravity low and no other car can hold up under the hardest usage longer than does a Franklin.

The Roadster is a car so beautiful inside and out—so marvelously fine in performance that it is unexcelled in motor car value today. Look the entire Sport Roadster field over and you will find that the answer overwhelmingly favors the Franklin Roadster. If you are looking for real car value—value that will be as pronounced a year from now as it is today see the Franklin Sport Model and have them demonstrate it to you. They will be delighted to do so and will at your convenience prove to you that it is a masterpiece as luxurious in performance as it is in appearance and comfort. All kinds of roads blend to give a feeling of rest and contentment when you drive a Franklin—smooth at all speeds, lightning fast on a getaway, quick on the pickup, steady and consistent on the long stretches.

Owners everywhere are strong in their conviction about Franklin superiority because most of them have had experience with other cars. They know from experience that Franklin performance means to them—it is the highest standard of efficiency.

Bows are omnipresent in the new mode, used in innumerable ways. Perhaps the most frequent use is at the front of a frock—a note that is not new, but that has increased in chic of late.

The Bradley Knitting Company does more to foster outdoor life, especially swimming, than any other concern and they delight to affiliate themselves with retail dealers who have the same ideas in view.

The Bradley dealers here in Atlanta have employed an expert swimming master who will give instructions in swimming and high diving at Spiller's Fountain of Youth out on Ponce de Leon Avenue from June 5th to the 19th. The condition is that your suit must be a Bradley and that it is purchased from any one of the following firms: J. P. Allen & Co., H. G. Lewis & Co., Daniel Bros. Co., King Hardware Co. and all branch stores, Griff Reynolds Co. and the J. M. High Company's Boy Department.

When you buy a Bradley you are always sure of obtaining a swimming suit with perfection of fit and absolute fastness of color. The world's markets are searched for the dyes used in Bradley fabrics. They are anti-fade, non-run colors—they are as "fast" as science can make The color combinations are charming and the shops that I have mentioned have an assortment that is lovely in style and color for your selection.

On Thursday evening, May 27, H. G. Lewis Co. will feature a style show of all the latest creations of Bradley suits on a half dozen beautiful models. Be sure and see them; you will enjoy the exhibition of swimming and diving and will have at the same time the pleasure of "picking out" the Bradley suit that appeals especially to your individual taste.

Few trimmings are as popular as grosgrain ribbon. It first captured the field as a millinery trimming, then became as smart on frocks for spring and summer.

Whenever any of us of the feminine world have funds to invest, we seek information from first one person and another in whose integrity we rely upon concerning the best and safest method from which to acquire an income from our investment.

Why bother yourself and friends about your investments, whether they are a legacy or your own individual funds earned by yourself in business, when you can purchase mortgage bonds on Atlanta real estate and earn 7 and 8 per cent on your investment? You couldn't make a better or safer one.

The Bayne Gibson Mortgage Company, whose offices are in the Hurt Building, specialize in mortgage loans in Atlanta and adjacent territory that are gilt-edge investments paying a good return on your investment and safe. They are affiliated with large eastern and southern insurance companies and have at all times splendid mortgages that they will be pleased to give you the details of and assist you in the selection of your securities. The members of this firm are prominent in business circles and well known for their judgment and integrity and by entrusting your business with them you can be sure of perfect and dependable service and courteous treatment always. See them and talk the matter over—make investments now to assure you of a stated income each year or to provide you with an income when you will need it most in your old age, making you independent. Nothing is better than a mortgage bond—their remunerative value is high and, best of all, perfectly safe.

"Why," you ask your friend who is standing by you as you get on a street car, "do people not take advantage of car tickets, purchasing a dollar's worth at a time, saving themselves and others much annoyance of making change and having to make others wait for a seat when they have tickets?"

"Yes, it would be splendid for all concerned if they would buy tickets; it would prevent much inconvenience and facilitate better service as well." We both have for a long time been using car tickets and neither of us would go back to the old way of paying cash fares for anything. It is far more convenient and it is economy besides, for with every dollar's purchase of tickets you gain an extra ticket. They can be bought at the Georgia Railway & Power Company on Marietta Street when you are paying your gas and light bills, or at any one of the Jacobs' Pharmacy stores or from the conductor on the car, whichever you prefer. Once you get in the habit of using them, you will never be without them.

Besides the convenience of tickets, there is no bother to make change, especially on a crowded car in the morning and afternoon when everyone seems to be going to and from business. Even with your packages, if you have any, you can get a seat more quickly. No need to look in your purse to see if you have change when you are going anywhere, if you have a sufficient supply of car tickets. They are a great convenience and time-saver, a comfort and joy—I wouldn't be without a goodly supply for anything.

Ride the street cars more each day, going to and from your business and for pleasure. They are convenient and comfortable. The transportation facilities are excellent and the Georgia Railway & Power Company is ever striving to make them better, giving to their patrons a service that would do justice to a large metropolis. Encourage them in their effort to give the public the kind of service the public wants. The street cars offer an economical way to get anywhere you wish to go. Open the windows wide on the car, let in the freshness of the summer air—enjoy seeing the passers-by, the verdant green of the trees, grass and shrubs and the beauty and fragrance of the blossoming flowers about the city lawns and parks.

The dropped shoulder-line is another note of interest in the new mode. It is particularly noticeable in the dolman, but is also seen on coats and frocks of various types.

The bolero is one of the striking details of the season, and its chic is as great on frocks of filmy fluttering chiffon as on frocks of firm and practical fabric.

There are eight comfortable iron cots with thick cotton mattresses and army blankets in each bungalow; also a table, chairs, wash basin, lantern, water pail and drinking cups. The entire camp is equipped with electric lights and running water. All information is being given at "Y. W." headquarters, 21 West Baker street, where registration is being conducted.

Facts Are Stubborn Things

Mrs. G. B. Parker, 121 Garnett St., bought a model No. 37 EDDY REFRIGERATOR from us in 1899. This was 26 years ago. It is still in active service. Mrs. Parker says the doors close as well as the day it was delivered and absolutely air tight, being still in perfect condition. "Always been delighted with the Eddy for there are no repairs to be done at all."

Eddy says after 30 years of service an Eddy Refrigerator is just beginning to get good.

This is something for you to think about when you are contemplating buying a refrigerator—

The Eddy is made of second growth Norwegian white pine and will ordinarily last a lifetime without swelling or warping. The average ash or imitation oak refrigerator you buy will not last half as long and will not give the same good results. Eddy's are equipped with clean, cold slate stone shelves, heavily lined and strongly made.

You don't buy a Refrigerator often, so why not buy a good one to start with.

Consider the above facts and treat your home to an Eddy at once.

We carry a complete line of Eddy Ice Chests in all sizes and styles.

Convenient terms can be arranged to suit your convenience.

Let Us Preserve Washington's Birthplace

Of the original Washington plantation the government owns eleven and three-quarters acres, running down to Pope's creek, including the site where the house stood, and where the monument now stands. The Wakefield National Memorial association has purchased and paid for seventy acres (including rights of way) coming down to the other side of Pope's creek, with fifty feet of land surrounding the Washington family burying inclosure, grounds where four generations of Washingtons are buried; also a right of way connecting this family burying ground with the land owned by the government. The seventy acres (less rights of way) we continue to sell at $1 per square foot to persons desiring to become members of the association, to raise the money to restore the residence, the garden and grounds.

Nineteen hundred and thirty-two is set for the nation-wide celebration of his birth. This date, 1932, should be our mark. By that time our goal should be reached and the birthplace of Washington at Wakefield, Va., be completely restored and paid for, ready for the enjoyment of the entire nation. This, indeed, will gratify the just pride of all lovers of our country.

M. C. A. which will be ready for occupancy by fall, were among the achievements reported Wednesday at an all-day meeting of the Atlanta Federation of Women's clubs, held at Druid Hill Golf club.

Mrs. Rambo's Report.

Mrs. R. K. Rambo, president of the federation was given a round of applause when she read her report of her activities in the year of her stewardship. A visitor present said, "I never could see the reason before for a federation. I understand now how much more can be accomplished through cooperation and coordination brought about by federating clubs which seemingly have no point of contact."

Mrs. A. E. Thornton, chairman of international relations, brought an interesting account of her recent trip abroad and its relation to her chairmanship. Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, retiring chairman of applied education as usual brought in a splendid report and it was with regret her resignation was accepted, her duties as president of the Atlanta Woman's club requiring all her time.

Mrs. Norman Sharp, newly elected first vice president to fill the vacancy caused by resignation of Mrs. W. L. Perey, was on motion of Mrs. H. H. McCall, given a vote of thanks for having instituted, completed and paid for, during her administration of the Atlanta Woman's club, two units for the club, the swimming pool and the junior lodge at Avondale. Mrs. Sharp reported sixty departments of the Atlanta Woman's club all doing active work.

Mrs. Woodruff's Report.

Mrs. Frank Woodruff, chairman of students' aid reported two girls graduated this year through the aid of this fund and the splendid record made by both. Other chairman reporting were Mrs. W. F. Dykes, citizenship; Mrs. E. K. Large, follow-up committee; Miss Emory, scrapbook; Mrs. Houston Johnson, policewoman's bureau; Mrs. R. H. Wolfe, child welfare; Mrs. Delos Hill, music; Mrs. Arthur Hazzard, ways and means.

Among other splendid accomplishments of this organization is the support of a girl at Martha Berry school. The president reported that one little girl made 800 dressings for the patients while under treatment herself.

Basil Stockbridge told the federation of the coming convention of the D. A. V. and asked the aid of the clubs in raising the necessary funds to care for the visitors.

Dr. Broach reported splendid cooperation from the Georgia Railway and Power company, the city authorities, the state board of health, the motion picture theaters, and the newspapers in the efort to control the flu epidemic. Cooperation of all agencies was repeatedly reported by the various clubs and chairmen during the meeting.

The Peachtree Garden club has become a member of the Garden Club of America, which can only be done by invitation, which is given only to those clubs whose work, in the opinion of the board, entitles the organization to membership. This club reported a memorial garden, known as the Jean Cochran Witham garden, at the home for incurables. Of the forty clubs reporting, the motto of all seemed to be that given by the needlecrafters: "Work a little, study a little, help your fellow man."

Mrs. Bird Honored At Birthday Party By Clubwomen

A beautiful spirit of appreciation was shown at a surprise party given by members of the Community club on Monday afternoon, to honor the club's president, Mrs. Henry M. Bird, at her home on College street. Every member conspired to make this ten one of unusual cordiality and beauty. Through the aid of the house maid every indication of the carefully planned party was kept secret from the honoree, who had gone away from her home for a part of the afternoon.

The decorating committee of which Mrs. A. E. Fleming was chairman, converted the living and dining rooms into a conservatory filled with baskets and vases of choice flowers. Pink and white streamers radiated from the chandelier to the four corners of the dining room Mrs. Joe Morris profilled with old-fashioned pinks and sweet peas were placed at each end of the table, and a large birthday cake rested on a mirrored plateau in the center. The beautiful white cake held tiny birthday candles.

Mesdames W. L. Brooks, Joe G. Smith, and R. K. Pitts received. About 50 guests were present when the honoree arrived at her home and everyone enjoyed the glad surprise of Mrs. Bird when she entered the living room. After receiving greetings from all, in her happy and very charming manner she welcomed and thanked the club for the tribute. Miss Irene Fowler entertained with a group of piano selections. The State College quartette sang several numbers, Miss Frances Holmes accompanying at the piano. Misses Malima Puckett and Marie Smith rendered appropriate readings.

While gathered around the table in the dining room Mrs. Joe Morris proposed a beautiful toast of love and appreciation expressing the sentiment of every member. The toast wa drunk from a silver loving cup presented to Mrs. Bird by the club last year. Mrs. Bird responded in a gracious and feeling way. The punch bowl resting on a stand covered with vines and pink roses was presided over by Misses Malima Puckett and Frances Holmes. Misses Leo Lovvorn, Evelyn Lovvorn and Marie Smith assisted by others served delicious sandwiches. After the candles on the cake had been extinguished the honoree cut the cake and then each one present followed in cutting a slice.

The Chieftain of the Confederacy

Jefferson Davis, the man whose name rings throughout the southland, bringing to some memories of valor, to others deference and respect for the cause he espoused and to all southern hearts eternal gratitude and patriotism, was born June 3, 1808, in Christian county, now called Todd county, Kentucky. His intrepidity and rare worth early made him an outstanding figure and later his staunchness of soul characterized every act of his life. That he should be chosen to command as the chieftain of the Confederacy was as it should be, for ever he proved true to the highest ideals of southern honor—leaving behind an heritage of love, respect, and above all—patriotism!

* * * *

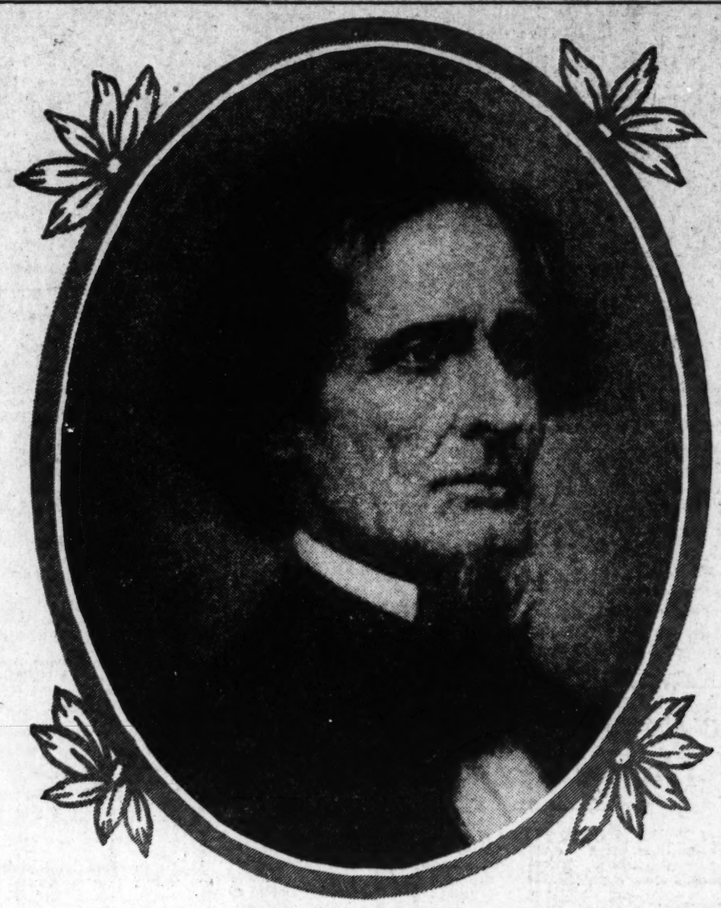

Patriotism! . . . The incense which will burn throughout time on southern altars to the glory of the Confederacy! It is the word which, above all, defines the love of country, which clarifies the understanding and the one feeling that is infinitely paramount in engendering that most desired condition—unity.

It has been said that heaven and earth agree in approving and blessing patriotism—which is worthy to have come down from the skies. Then again, patriotism is a great leveler—no autocracy stalks in its midst—the choking of the utterance, the quick rush of tears at sight of our Stars and Bars or a vision of an aged hero who well honored the gray, now tottering on to his great reward, comes alike to high and low. And glory to God that it is so. And the heart of the great commonwealth of the south will ever beat more quickly in unison to the blare of martial music, to the fluttering of the Confederate flag and to the great uniting force of patriotism!

* * * *

Patriotism is a reminder that June 3 commemorates the day upon which Jefferson Davis was born. It will urge that for the June meeting all chapters will present Jefferson Davis programs in honor of the president of our Confederacy. It is urged, and is a request from the state president, that this date be given all consideration that is its just due and that all the deference which patrotism prompts be shown the memory of Jefferson Davis at this time. The state editor requests that such programs be sent to her that they may be given recognition on the official page. The June meeting closes the fiscal year of the work of the organization. No more fitting finale could be made than a concerted action on Jefferson Davis programs, joining Lands across the state, in deference to our beloved leader, closing our work truly as United Daughters of the Confederacy.

JEFFERSON DAVIS

Chieftain of our Confederacy brave,
Whose soul gave blood the Cause to save,
Today the South with lowered head,
Honors the path where thy spirit led!

Unwearied spirit! Which blazed the way,
Into the annals of a South's past day,
In the Temple of Love is a Shrine apart,
Where wafts incense eternal from every heart!

CHAPTER REPORTS

Fulton Chapter.

Fulton chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, gave a benefit costume recital on Saturday evening, May 22, at Wesley Memorial church. This was a song recital, and the talented artists, Nelda Hewitt Stevens, soprano, and Magdalen Massman, pianist, were dressed in the costume of the period. Miss Stevens gave a wonderful collection of southern melodies, negro plantation songs, which were greatly appreciated by her audience.

The funds obtained from this recital will be used for the comfort and pleasure of the Confederate veterans of the city and county. All veterans were admitted free and a committee from the Fulton chapter acted as reception committee and made everyone feel welcome.

Moultrie Chapter.

The recent observance of Memorial day by the Moultrie McNeill chapter was of special importance, as they were honored by a visit from the state president, Mrs. Oscar McKenzie, of Montezuma, who was orator of the day.

The exercises, which were held at the First Baptist church, were inspiring. Dr. Russell Owen, of Macon, also gave a fine talk, and the Norman Park orchestra furnished music. Mrs. McKenzie was introduced by the president, Mrs. L. H. Browning, who has been a capable leader, and is succeeded by Mrs. W. C. Vereen.

The veterans and their families and members of the U. D. C. were served a beautiful luncheon at the Hotel Colquitt, and in the afternoon, a reception in honor of Mrs. McKenzie, was given at the home of Mrs. W. C. Vereen, to which all the organizations of the city were invited.

Waynesboro Chapter.

The Margaret Jones chapter, U. D. C., met at the home of Mrs. C. H. Greiner with Mrs. R. M. McMaster presiding.

This perhaps was the most important meeting of the year, as officers for another year were elected, and reports of all outstanding committees were given. The chapter feels especially fortunate to have Mrs. McMaster as leader for another year. She has guided for six years in a most capable manner, achieving unlimited success for the chapter and winning the love and admiration of her coworkers.

Mrs. Morton, treasurer, gave a concise report as to finance. All pledges and obligations made by chapter paid and 100 per cent dues paid for this year. Mrs. C. L. Rowland, registrar, reported a number of papers filled for membership and 17 cross of service papers sent off and approved.

Miss Annie Burton reported that only six Confederate veterans of Burke county responded to roll call on Memorial day.

The chpater has been exceedingly active in locating and marking historic spots in the county. It is our desire to place memorials on historic spots as fast as our chapter can finance them.

Jefferson Davis' birthday will be observed June 3, by the chapter. A prominent speaker will be secured. "Crosses of Service" will be awarded to world war veterans of Confederate ancestry.

MRS. S. B. BATES.

Wilkinson County Chapter.

The Wilkinson County chapter of the U. D. C. at Gordon, met at the home of Mrs. L. J. Fountain, one of our members, May 12.

It being the time to elect officers, the following were elected:

Mrs. J. W. Brooks, Jr., president; Mrs. George W. DuPree, first vice president; Mrs. T. B. Grimes, second vice president; Mrs. T. B. Dennard, recording secretary; Mrs. J. W. Hooks, corresponding secretary; Mrs. L. J. Fountain, treasurer; Mrs. R. L. Sanders, chaplain; Mrs. Charles E. Gladin was appointed press chairman.

We were invited to meet with Mrs. George W. DuPree on our next meeting June 2. The chapter celebrated Memorial day at the Gordon Methodist church. Nine Confederate veterans and one Union veteran were present. We were very glad to have this Union veteran with us and he expressed himself as having enjoyed the progrem and the day.

Rev. Mr. Mitchell, pastor of the Gordon Baptist church, gave an appropriate address, after which dinner was served on the church lawn to the veterans, their attendants and the U. D. C. members.

Jefferson Davis Monument At Fairview, Kentucky

BY MRS. HUBERT M. FRANKLIN, TENNILLE, GA.
State Director 1917-1924—From Beginning to Completion

"O noble shaft lift high thy head
And pierce the vaulted blue!
Rock-hewn thy cradle in earth's deeps
Thou callest in review
The gray-clad legions of the south,
With war flags floating high;
The starry cross, unstained always—
The southerner's battle cry!"

The idea of marking the birthplace of the president of the Confederate states originated with Colonel S. A. Cunningham, the late editor of The Confederate Veteran. General Bennett H. Young, of Louisville, Ky., was associated with him, and brought the subject before the general convention U. D. C. held in Dallas, Texas, November, 1916. In his eloquent address, General Young said: "Mr. Davis was great enough to command the admiration of all men, but when we consider his sufferings and sacrifices for the south, it is his just reward that somewhere in the Confederate states which he loved so much and where he lived out his days there shall rise up some structure which insofar as art in its feebleness can proclaim shall declare the love and veneration of the people for whom he gave his all—time money, place, citizenship, health, and life-long peace.

"We must see that the man who come afterwards and look upon this magnificent obelisk towering amongst the clouds, graceful in its lines, superb in its immensity, will thoroughly understand who Jefferson Davis was, what he did, and who were the people that he led, who loved him and made under his guidance transcendant and immeasurable sacrifices for the great principle of self-government."

The Daughters of the Confederacy agreed to assist the veterans in the erection of this monument. Each state president was put in charge of the work in her state, and as president of the Georgia Division of U. D. C., I was appointed state director. In 1917 the erection of the monument began, and the Confederate veterans who were leaders in the world war were General Bennett H. Young, past commander-in-chief, U. C. V.; General George W. Littlefield, of Austin, Texas; General John H. Leathers, of Louisville; Colonel Edmond H. Taylor, Jr., of Frankfort, Ky.; General Julian S. Carr, of Durham, N. C., and Colonel V. G. Cook, of Batesville, Ark.

During the world war work on the monument was discontinued. General Young and the other veterans passed into the Great Beyond. After the war was over, and the momument had been erected to a height of 216 feet, again from lack of funds, the workers rested. At the urgent request of the veterans the U. D. C. assumed responsibility for raising funds with which to complete the mounment.

Various means were used. Small banks were sent out to the chapters, each holding five dollars in dimes. Later one dollar certificates were sold by the U. D. C. To frequent appeals of the state director, Georgia responded nobly. Our dollars have spoken of our patriotism with mighty voice and Georgia has a splendid share in the mounment. When the Christmas drive for $1,000 from our state was put on, many contributions were sent at once, and necessary funds were taken from the state treasury.

The monument is in the form of a great Egyptian obelisk, 351 feet high, second highest in the world. Washington's mounment in the nation's capital, towering above all others in the world, is an indication that our country holds him above all others. The Jefferson Davis mounment shows that the president of the Confederacy stands for the highest ideals of the old and the new south.

The plans called for five flights of stairs, ten floors in the mounment and two windows at each side near the top. There is an elevator, and it is said that the view from the top equals Lookout mountain in its majestic grandeur.

To the left of the mounment stands a Baptist church, small, weatherbeaten and showing the ravages of time. A tablet on the wall bears this inscription: Jefferson Davis was born June 3, 1808, on the site of this church. He made a gift of this lot March 10, 1886, to Bethel Baptist church as a thank offering to God."

Dr. Stewart, a Confederate veteran of 94 years was of great assistance in inspecting the work until he became too feeble. Then he sat in an easy chair on his back porch, with a magnifying glass in hand, looking at the mounment. He said to a visitor: "You have no idea the company it has been to me to sit here these years and watch it as it has grown in height, but the sands of my life are running very low, and if it isn't finished quickly I may not be here to see it, and I do so want to see it finished."

Let us hope that his dreams were realized and he lived to see that monument unveiled June 3, 1924.

The father of Jefferson Davis was a Georgian and we have an unusual degree of state pride in the erection of such a monument, as it is a fitting tribute to the president of the Confederacy. The mounment shows to the world that Jefferson Davis will be loved and honored so long as there is left in this broad land of ours one loyal son of the south, one true Daughter of the Confederacy.

Items of History Appearing Today.

Upon the page today appear excerps of valuable data culled from the Historical Edition of the Hawkinsville Dispatch and News. Georgia is shown at her very best and as she so richly deserves. An article by Miss Rutherford, state historian, appears—replete with historical items—the continuation of which will follow next week. The Georgia division has much right to be proud of the efficient state historian. This set of historical items plainly attests her inimitable research work. Miss Lillie Martin, Mrs. T. H. Bridges and Rev. J. Lyttle Jones are to be commended on the wonderful historical edition, as are many others who assisted in arranging and contributing to same. Mrs. H. M. Franklin has prepared for the page today an invaluable article on the monument to Jefferson Davis in Kentucky. Having been state director from the time of the beginning of this project on through to its completion, Mrs. Franklin is in a position to exploit all the details of this achievement, which she has done in a most efficient manner.

The Constitution does not receive publicity for the official U. D. C. page until it has first been sent to Mrs. J. J. Harris, Sandersville, state editor, Georgia division, U. D. C. All articles must be typed or legibly written on one side of page.

Oglethorpe University Commencement Program

The plans for the seventh annual commencement occasion of Oglethorpe university include a series of interesting events. The commencement season will open with the annual alumni dinner which will be held on Thursday evening, May 27, at which alumni, scattered throughout the entire world, will gather. This meeting will be featured by numerous reports and the laying of progressive plans for the development of the association and the alma mater of the alumni.

On Friday evening, May 28, the President's Club of Atlanta will entertain Dr. and Mrs. J. T. Lupton in special acknowledgment of their unusual generosity to Oglethorpe university. This dinner will most fittingly express the appreciation of the city of Atlanta for what is perhaps the most remarkable series of gifts ever made by a southern philanthropist to any southern institution located without the bounds of his city and state and will probably be the first dinner of its sort ever given in this section. Some ten years ago Dr. and Mrs. Lupton became interested in the university, largely on account of the quality of its plans and purposes.

On Saturday, May 29, at 1 o'clock, the board of founders will meet at the annual luncheon to be held in the Biltmore hotel. At this meeting there will gather many distinguished guests of the university and a group of honored officers of the woman's board of the university, as well as the members of the board. The meeting will be featured by brief annual reports, covering the work done by the faculty and students, and short addresses. Immediately after the luncheon the members of the board and their guests will proceed to the campus of the university to take part in special exercises incident to the laying of the cornerstones of Hermance stadium and Lowry hall. Preceding these two events there will be a special baseball game played by the "Old Grads" against the 1926 varsity. At 5:30 o'clock and immediately following the game, the cornerstones of Hermance stadium and Lowry hall will be laid and thereafter all the visitors are invited to join with the faculty and students in a buffet supper to be given in the dining hall of the university. After this supper there will follow the presentation of an original one-act play, produced by the department of drama under the direction of Dr. James Routh and an orchestra recital under the direction of John T. Lee, commencing at 8 o'clock in the auditorium of Lupton hall, followed later by a general inspection of the building.

Dandruff Goes! Hair Gets Thick, Wavy, Beautiful

Save your hair! Dandruff disappears and hair stops coming out.

Within ten minutes after an application of Danderine you can not find a single trace of dandruff. One application dissolves every particle of dandruff; invigorates the scalp, stops itching and falling hair.

Furthermore Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating, stimulating and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow strong and beautiful.

Bobbed hair has made the girls aware of the dangerous effects of unsightly dandruff which is now more apparent than ever, since the hair is short.

Danderine is a sure way to get rid of dandruff and immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. The effect is amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance.

Get a small bottle of Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter for a few cents and keep that dandruff out of your hair and off your shoulders.—(adv.)

The Spirit of the Federation Is Theme of President's Talk

The following interesting and splendid address, "the Spirit of the Federation," was delivered by Mrs. A. P. Brantley, president of the Georgia Federation at the thirteenth annual convention held in Augusta in April. She said:

"We are all familiar with the body of our Federated Women's Clubs—its prosperity is shown by the nearly 3,000,000 members in far Alaska, in tropic Mexico, from Maine's forests to southern shores, from one great sea to the other. A grand army, one that numbers nearly a fortieth of our whole nation's population. These figures are so familiar that they tend to make the idea of the federation dissolve into an abstraction, something so light that all thought of it might pass out were it not for our system of meetings together, of exchanging theories for experience, thus showing the Federation as a human entity—organized women, sedate, dignified in purpose, impressive in results. For our system grows from the least, as a first, to the greatest, as a final, through local club, district meeting, state meeting crystallising a sectional need or expression, and the rally under the banner of the state federation's annual convention, as today.

It Is a Spirit.

"Yet, even with these meetings, they may be called but the exoteric meaning of the true federation. It may be like any other acquaintance to you—met for a while, and then forgotten. With that acquaintance the episode may be closed. But not so—the federation is a body, it is true, but it is more than that—it is a spirit. The outward and visible plans and reports are only earnests of that spirit within which never sleeps. The voice of the spirit of the Federation is that of adviser and counsellor. It is the master mind converging avenues of thought, that such thought may be used in the remaking of a world, a better world.

"The first evidence of this spirit is in its dispersion throughout an uncircumscribed expansion. Not alone in our home nation does it number its members—those American women making up the aggregate parts—but it reaches out beyond the waters that wash our coasts. Women in Scotland, London, Paris, Rome, Germany, Montreal, the City of Mexico, the canal zone, turn ears and hearts toward this federation that stands for women, women's needs, women's concerns, women's achievements. Its prosperity is further shown by affiliations with clubs in Canada, the Philippines and Sweden. Everyone, here and abroad, enrolled by name.

Enormous Influence.

"In the far-flung compas of extent, touching the heart of woman near and distant, is seen the tremendous range of its possible influence. How great, how powerful must be the value of each womanly part in this grand circle that reaches all around the world, on whose influence "the sun never sets." An influence asking, pleading, convincing, accomplishing the great vital things for which the federation stands.

"Thus the spirit of service can have no borders; its extent is limitless. It is always circling. As it curves out, it meets the force of the incoming curve. Seventy-two departments of influence, of well-balanced proportion to needs, embracing every activity from the contemplation of the Muses of Art and Poetry to the practical home-making that puts up the daily lunch for better babies. And this is free, for the asking, to all, receiving in the rebound that which strengthens, heartens, encourages the spirit of the federation. For this spirit is free of itself—it owes no allegiance, acknowledges no favor of political faction, sectarian tenet, no group of control. Your cause is its cause. For you, as with you and through you, it exerts a wonderful impartial influence over a whole world.

ITS HELPFULNESS.

"In these over seventy departments and divisions, presided over by those found most competent in their several schemes of effectiveness, there is the dominant of the brooding spirit of the federation to lend individual help towards national laws of morality and their enforcement. The spirit of the federation stands not only to pronounce a cause, but so develops, warms, nourishes the desire to promote those causes, that an effect is wrested from opposition. What can withstand the combined strength of our federated army? Never personal, national issues are taken to the federation's heart, and by its spirit, disseminates these vital concerns through its web work of channels to every city, town and village—not only of our United States, but gently wedging into the nationalities that progress demands. Impartial, just, upright, holy, the spirit carries light, life, growth to the most unpromising as well as fertile fields.

"Thus, practically perfect in every part, what honor we must feel to be one of such an organism! What happiness to participate in the activity of its unselfish spirit! What means have been devised that this activity finds unity in diversity and accomplishment in obeying its dictates. Study programs, circulars advising thought on great national problems, art exhibitions, club extension, citizenship, club institutes, international relations, legislation, education—all and many more outlets to this great factor called progress.

PAST ACHIEVEMENTS.

"The achievements of our past are the promises of our future. Education, the cornerstone of progress and enlightenment, we have made the foundation of the structure that we have raised. Slowly, gradually, bit by bit, tested and tried back in the days of the '80s and '90s, the organization took form and blessed be the nobel women who strained hand and arm to help! One altruistic thought encouraged them: to "Build today, then—strong and sure

With a firm and ample base;
Then, ascending and secure
Shall tomorrow find its place."

It was a long stretch in those days, for there were no district meetings nor state federations. In these aids we are better off. Let us then do the work as well. Social relationship has grown gradually as all friendships should. Philanthropy is always a mainspring projecting plans for the spirit of the federation to carry; charity, help, in too many ways to enumerate. Best and dearest is the industrial world, calling attention to the oppressor, to the cessation of inhumane working conditions. With what results? Better laws governing hours of labor, putting a limit on the age of the working child, compelling education, forming humane measures, regulation of wages, and such sunlighted rooms and comfortable restling places, such means of athletic recreation, such deference to the physical body, as to make this the happiest world the ages can tell of. The spirit of the federation found the need for these things. This spirit, never idle, never slumbering, has hopes of a greater future. Will this continue? it asks. Can it continue? Will you help it to continue?

"The spirit of the federation demands reciprocity. It must droop, fail, fall, if not responded to by a reciprocal spirit emanating from all the clubs distributed far and wide. Spirit must respond to spirit. Only by and in spirit can the great things of the Federated Women's Clubs be accomplished. Psychologists tell us of the realm of the spirit, of how incalculable is its extent, how boundless its scope. Distance has no effect on its effectiveness; its works can transcend all that a material world can imagine, much less do. Its subtlety permeates in mediums hidden under the innermost feelings of mankind. When word is received from the headquarters of the general federation and a thrill passes through the club, when enthusiasm for the work that it advises rises, when the heart is back of the cry, 'We will do this for our federation,' then, and not till then, is the spirit-winged intention that has been sent from the federation received with a like response. The seed is planted, interest gives it growth, already the harvest is assured.

"We should find in each letter, in each circular, some message that takes us right up into the confidence of the Federated Women's clubs. It means you—each single woman. For it is the single woman, the single idea sent forth from a single experience that is the germ of every law for the right, every department effort for the weak, every plan for the fallen.

"How may this be acquired? First, there should be knowledge. There is a club training as well as a scholastic one. Have you read your year book from cover to cover, observing with intelligent eye the sequence of topics, and opening the understanding to receive impressions thereon? Have you scanned the pages in the state annual, noticed not only the divisions of work but their functions also, read the annual reports, grasped their achievements, and understood their appeals for aid along this or that line? The year books of the individual club—your club—and the state annual are near echoes of the general federation—with them you are equipped to know what the word 'club' stands for. The spirit is moving within you, for you cannot read these with open mind without feeling a response welling up in your heart and a mental pledge to support the aims of the great body creating it all. Such training will empower the average member for her own good, too, and she will thus be able to influence the delegate that leaves for district meeting or state convention—there, through that delegate's voice, she will 'have her voice' and a new thought is projected, or an old one improved and strengthened. A good mental test is to ask one's self: 'What is my club?' Your answer, also to yourself, will show the measure of your knowledge or of the help you need. Follow this with, 'What does my club give me?' You will find that it is not the idling away of an hour or two. Then, 'What do I give in return?' So soon as a satisfactory and generous answer is found, that surely is the spirit of knowledge working.

"Passing on, 'What is the district meeting for?' Have you ever asked yourself that? If you attend, then you will know—you cannot well find out otherwise. If you do attend—and the responsive member will attend, then comes self-examination again, 'How does it call on me for something?' Further on, 'Why does the executive board meet?' 'Can this affect me?' And yet on and up, 'What are state conventions for? Should I go?' No woman facing me will ever have to ask this question of herself! And last, 'Now, just why should there be a general federation?' The answer comes in a small voice, wafted from far lands, across spicy islands or chilled in Alaskan wilds, 'We could not be without it. It opened a new world to us.' So, to every question of a far-away thing, there is a rebound back to yourself. This is the spirit of the federation showing that the spirit of reciprocity is balanced. In just such measure as we give shall it be given to us—this is the perfect law of compensation.

"No longer does the haphazard club flourish. Everything is now orderly, well chosen, cause followed by effect, parliamentary rule the umpire. The current year book is one evolved from sincere thought, from keen selection, from up-to-date and timely methods. Your club gives you this, and what is asked in return? I might condense a whole speech down to a single word of three syllables—attendance. You can only seek and find the spirit of the federation by attendance. You must attend club meetings if they are to go on. Your smiling face, ready hand and willing heart are needed. Your attendance means vote, too, not in a follow-the-leader style, but as a result of sedate thought and of understanding the aims and offices of club work. Your voice is an official procedure and may be heard around the world. And attendance is indispensable to a voice!

"The helpfulness that you can exert is proof evident of how the spirit of the federation uses you that it may come into fruitage. Your financial support is always needed. But many, many times your moral support is paramount, and the many causes for which we stand call for your full-handed cooperation.

Hopes for the Future.

"Will this continue? Can it continue? Will you help it to continue? It depends on the state federation and in turn on the individual club. The spirit of the federation working through club, annual convention and meetings, calls for her army of women to work for all its causes. Your attendance at your club, no matter how small that club, how weak its meeting, your smiling acquiescence in a response to a federation call, your vote, all these will waft the federation spirit in its flight—its helpful, unselfish, influential flight—around the world. This is what reciprocity will do.

By Education.

"Knowledge is power. Faithfully fulfilling the assignments of your study programs at each meeting will round up many opinions, cement those found good, and eliminate those born of prejudice or inexperience. Insist then, that your year book programs be made worth while. Not the butterfly kind that sips a little at this and flies away to that, and pauses a trifle to try another.

"President Butler, of Columbia university, urges serious home study by adults that they may keep receiving full development through all the years of life. We live by change and of change. How can we fully develop, or reason, with the worn-out study of long ago which has been fading until forgotten and lost? Here again comes the spirit of the federation, keeping us up to the mark of today. Study is demanded, not alone for the letter, but for the thought, the application to some current matter. So only can standards be lifted. So only can literary ideals find again a channel of superiority. So only can morals, from the little town along the railroad tracks to great metropolitan cities, find a better life in purer living. It is the woman's century, we have been told time and again. Then, with woman's century, should come the cure. Woman,

"'Born to nurse,
And to soothe, and to solace, to help and to heal
The sick world that leans on her.'"

The Cercle Francais Of Brenau College.

The Cercle Francais, a university group of the Federation of the Alliance Francaise of the United States and Canada, has just closed its third year of successful activities by a series of four illustrated French lectures by Monsieur Emile Villemin, of New York.

The subjects chosen were La Fontaine, the Chateau of Versailles, the Chateau of the Loire and Napoleon.

French instructors and French students express most enthusiastic appreciation of these charming lectures in French and of the able lecturer himself.

After the last lecture the cercle extended to Monsieur Villemin a delightful reception in the Brenau drawing rooms.

The members of the cercle and their guests were presented to Monsieur Villemin by the president, Miss Pauline Pearce. In the receiving party were the other officers of the cercle: Miss Susie P. Hill, secretary; Miss Myra Bagwell, treasurer; Miss Beverly Wood and Miss Gertrude Hardesty, vice presidents, and Miss Julia Judge, librarian, assisted by Miss Ella de T. Winfield.

The cercle is one of the largest and most active organizations of the college. It has given 16 programs during the session. It has between 160 and 175 members, about three-fourths of the French students.

In addition to paying all expenses of the series of lectures just given, it has made a donation to the French academy fund in the Alliance Francaise, and recently a more liberal donation to the Brenau Endowment fund.

The cercle and its president are to be congratulated upon bringing to the French students of Brenau these charming lectures in Parisian French by so gifted a lecturer as is Monsieur Villemin.

"My Georgia Land" Will Be Sung On Steel Pier

On the steel pier at Atlantic City Friday morning, May 28, the Georgia women attending the General Federation will sing their beautiful state song, "My Georgia Land," in a contest with other states singing state songs. States entered for the contest are: Iowa, Louisiana, Colorado, Connecticut and Delaware. Georgia's delegation is not a large one this year but they will sing in competition with trained choruses from other states, especially the nearby states which will have large numbers present.

Mrs. Max Obendorfer says that Georgia has the distinction of being one of the few states that has a song of its own written especially for the federation. The words by Genie Terrill and the music by Hugh Hodgson were adopted at the end of a contest that was open for three years and after a number of songs were considered.

My Georgia Land.

O Georgia Land, Fair Georgia Land
With pride upon thy shores I stand:
The wonders of thy hills survey
And catch the song bird's round-e-lay.
I watch the ripple of thy rills,
My heart with love and pleasure thrills,
A glorious heritage is mine,
A loyal native child of thine.

Chorus:

O Georgia Land, Fair Georgia Land
To thee I pledge my heart, my hand,
My life, my all at thy command,
My own dear native Georgia Land.

Thou sovereign state, of thee I sing,
My highest tribute to thee bring,
For thee my fervent prayers ascend
That God thy every need attend.
Some rarer glory doth appear
To bless thee with each changing year
The fairest page in history
The one that tells thy fame to me.

For God and right thou e'er hast stood,
Thy creed a Christly brotherhood,
The world has learned to know thy fame,
And hearts rejoice at thy dear name.
Thy loyal children e'er shall raise
Their voices clear to sing thy praise,
In word and deed to honor thee,
Thou mother of the brave and free.

Will Conduct Club Institute At University of Georgia

Mrs. C. S. Selover, national chairman of club institutes in the general federation, who will conduct the club institutes for the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs at the University of Georgia from June 28 to July 2.

To the Women of Georgia!

We are, indeed, fortunate in securing Mrs. Selover, of Cleveland, Ohio, for the club institute in Athens, this summer (June 28 to July 3) and many who have had the privilege of knowing her can vouch for the rare feast that is in store for us. Each year the institute has grown in strength and interest, and many letters of inquiry and also applications from women throughout this and adjoining states, are already coming in daily to prove that great events cast their shadows before them, and this year such success of the institute seems doubly assured.

This club institute is to help us to a better understanding of running the machinery of our organizations, not to provide material for work. The initial steps toward club institutes were taken at Chautauqua in July, 1893, under the direction of Mrs. Thomas G. Winter, then president of the general federation, assisted by Mrs. Percy Pennypacker, past president of the general federation and president of the Chautauqua Woman's club. Mrs. Selover come sto Athens through recommendation of Mrs. Sherman, president of the general federation, with the assurance that we could not secure an abler director.

"Every "new" clubwoman feels a natural timidity in assuming the responsibility of leadership, which places the burden of initiative on the shoulders of the few. Let us realize that with our club institute the day has dawned when a woman may enter the field of club work, prepared to take her place in the department where her talents and tastes direct her, instead of remaining inert for years until finally thrust in and forced to serve without experience. Every woman who would be the best citizen should make it her business to learn how to be an efficient clubwoman, just as every woman should learn how to cast an intelligent ballot at the polls. Let us join hands now to begin work toward better organized clubs through better trained women for the best all around program the state has ever known.

MRS. CHAS. M. SNELLING,
State Chm. of Club Institute.

Delegates To Convention To Be Honored Guests Today

BY MRS. ALONZO RICHARDSON, Director for Georgia in the G. F. W. C.

Today marks a red letter day in the club life of Atlanta for the visitors from all of the southeast are being entertained during a short stay in the city by a committee from the Atlanta Woman's club, the Stone Mountain Memorial association and others who are taking them out to Stone mountain. They will be in the city until 11:55, when they will be joined by the Georgia contingent, resuming the jorney to Atlantic City. The party numbers over 200, and is in charge of Mrs. Lilly, of Fort Worth. Among the delegates on this special train are those from New Mexico, Mrs. Grace Baer, of Roswell, N. M., representing that state. The entertainment of the guests is in the hands of Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, with Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, Mrs. Ira Farmer, Mrs. W. R. Turner, Mrs. Irving Thomas, Mrs. E. V. Carter, Mrs. Charles Rice, Mrs. Frank McCormack and representatives from Stone Mountain Memorial association.

Those attending the convention from Georgia are: Mrs. A. P. Brantley, Mrs. Samuel Inman, Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, Mrs. A. O. Granger, Mrs. R. K. Rambo, Mrs. Cleve Webb, Mrs. J. J. Springer, Mrs. J. E. Hayes, Mrs. Oscar McKenzie, Mrs. W. S. West, of Valdosta; Mrs. Allen Strickland, Valdosta; Miss Natalie Strickland, Valdosta. Mrs. John R. Slater, Mrs. W. C. Martin, Dalton; Mrs. Felton Jones, Rome; Mrs. C. E. Beddingfield, Atlanta; Mrs. E. L. Coleman, Barnesville; Mrs. D. F. Stevenson, Atlanta.

The Georgia delegation, through its director, has received many delightful social invitations, among them receptions to Mrs. H. G. Reynolds, at the Brighton hotel, Kentucky entertaining for Mrs. Reynolds, Massachusetts entertaining for Mrs. Grace Morrison Pool, at the Traymore. The dinner of the Original Thirteen on June 2, at which each state will be asked to discuss some radical movement in that state and the efforts to combat that movement. The Alice Ames Winter club will get together June 3 at tea at Haddon hall. This comprises all those who served under Mrs. Winter.

First Social Affair.

The first social affair will be the official dinner Monday evening, May 24, at which the executive board will be entertained by the local board.

The sessions of the biennial will be most interesting, many questions coming up which will require thought and careful planning. Revision in by-laws concerning the representations from Alaska has aroused a protest from the Alaska clubwomen but which will be adjusted, with a clearer understanding. It is a matter of note that the south has realized the tremendous importance of the great body of women, and is bidding for both the 1927 and the 1928 meetings. Biloxi, Miss., has sent very strong invitations to all directors asking for the biennial council in 1927. Memphis is equally strong in asking for the 1928 convention, while New Orleans comes in with her request for the convention in 1928. It is a matter of congratulation that the southern delegates can say that the south wants and can take care of so great a body, but on the other hand, it is going to be rather a hard proposition to decide between our southern cities, for we cannot in all probability have both the '27 and '28 meetings.

Mrs. Richardson's Luncheon.

Not the least of the pleasures Atlanta is looking forward to, is the luncheon to be given the Georgia women by Mrs. Anna Steese Richardson. Mrs. Richardson always wears the Georgia badge with that of her own state and Georgia never fails to claim her as its own. An article reprinted from the May number of the National Republic, written by Mrs. Sherman, president of the general federation on the "Growth and Power of the General Federation of Women's Clubs," has reached the clubwomen. The women who leave today to represent the state of Georgia at the greatest gathering of women ever held in the United States, pledge themselves to bring back from that meeting all that is within their power, which will be an inspiration and help to the club life of the future. The program offered for the ten intensive days of club information, for that is what the meeting will be, is a tremendous one, every minute filled with instruction and inspiration. It will be a strenuous ten days, but so full of good things that the delegates will not wish to miss a minute.

Mrs. Brantley will be at the Stanton, Pennsylvania avenue. Mrs. Richardson at the Chalfonte-Haddon hall. Any communications from the state will reach either and the only regret is that more of our Georgia women will not be able to attend.

Te meeting of the southeastern council will probably take the form of a regional dinner. At this meeting the program for the coming meeting at Charleston, in October, will be outlined. South Carolina also entertains for her candidate, Miss Louise Poppenheim, whose recommendation to honorary vice presidency passed the executive board in January.

Miss Julia Sparks Is Acting Treasurer

Mrs. A. P. Brantley announces Miss Julia M. Sparks, 604 Chamber of Commerce, Atlanta, Ga., as acting treasurer of Georgia federation until further notice, owing to the illness of Mrs. W. W. Stark, treasurer.

District presidents and club presidents will be governed accordingly and send all communications for treasurer to Miss Sparks.

Quitman Club Women Act As Hostess to Meeting

The meeting of the Quitman Woman's club, marking the official close for the summer, was featured by a group of members from the Study club of Thomasville and Wymodausis club of Valdosta at the Country club, with the music department as hostesses.

Mrs. A. B. Sheffield, president; Mrs. Lee Branch and Mrs. J. W. Bowman, members of the music committee, acted as hostesses for the meeting, and the reception which followed the program.

Mrs. Russell Snow introduced the visiting entertainers.

Business Session.

A short business session preceded the program, when Mrs. A. L. Tidwell was elected president, succeeding Mrs. A. B. Sheffield, the latter declining re-election because of her duties as treasurer of the Eleventh District Federation and the chairmanship of the student aid committee of the district. The other officers elected included Mrs. J. L. Ruble and Mrs. Royal Daniel, first and second vice presidents; Mrs. T. R. Fluker, recording secretary; Mrs. Herbert Stubbs, corresponding secretary; Mrs. C. H. Myers, treasurer; Mrs. Russell Snow, parliamentarian; Mrs. J. B. Tillman, Mrs. A. R. Sheffield, Mrs. S. N. Connor and Mrs. M. A. Brantley, board members.

The Luncheon.

The visitors from Thomasville were entertained at luncheon by Mrs. A. B. Sheffield, president, and the members of the music committee, given at Mrs. Sheffield's home. The guests included Mrs. Balfour, Mrs. Riley, Miss Hays, Mrs. Fichling, Mrs. Green, Mrs. Merry, Mrs. Parrent, Miss Cockerel, of Thomasville, and Mrs. Lee Branch, Mrs. Russell Snow, Mrs. V. C. Rawlins, Mrs. J. W. Bowman, Mrs. E. E. Prance, Mrs. F. H. Brannan and Mrs. W. R. Harrell.

Mrs. Collier Heads Montezuma Club.

At the annual meeting of the Woman's club Thursday the following officers were elected for the coming year: President, Mrs. R. C. Liggin; piano solo, Mrs. A. C. Richardson.

Harlem Woman's Club Holds Business Meeting.

The Harlem Woman's club May business meeting was held Wednesday at the home of the president, Mrs. W. C. Clary. Mrs. Clary and Miss Zachry gave most enthusiastic accounts of the tenth district convention in Sparta. Mrs. Davisson set before the club Miss Haslett's plan for a scholarship to Camp Wilkins at Athens. This matter was tabled until Miss Haslett can explain more fully to a larger representation. In regard to preparations for the Tri-County fair to be held in the fall, Miss Zachry has accepted the place as chairman of the fancy work committee in this community. Mrs. King had several suggestions to make as to growing flowers for the fair, and Mrs. Clary has offered chrysanthemum plants to those caring to raise them. Mrs. Davisson nominated Mrs. Sara Bell Fox as parliamentarian, which carried. Mrs. Wright moved that from June until September there should be but one meeting a month, combining business and social, which was carried unanimously. There will be no other meeting in May because of the sessions of the third district of the Kilpatrick association to be held here on the 18th and 19th. Mrs. Davisson was asked to request the editor of The Columbia News to write an article on the approaching political issues, so that all voters in the county may have a clear idea of the offices to be filled, and of the issues to be voted upon.

The next meeting, a combined business and social meeting, will be held at the home of Miss Belle Zachry at 4 o'clock on the afternoon of Wednesday, June 2.

Mrs. Collier Heads Barnesville Club.

The Barnesville Woman's club elected Mrs. A. Collier as its president, she having successfully served in this capacity for several years. Coleman; corresponding secretary, Mrs. J. W. Reeves; treasurer, Mrs. L. C. Tyus; parliamentarian, Mrs. Claude Christopher.

Metter Woman's Club Features Speech by Mrs. Fred Brinson

The meeting of the Metter Woman's club on May 14, which was the last meeting for the club year, 1925-1926, was delightfully beautiful and pleasant in its nature. Besides this occasion being the time for yearly reports and election of officers for the club year 1926-1927, it proved to be one of the prettiest luncheons enjoyed by the club during the year, which luncheon was inspired as a compliment to Mesdames F. A. Brinson, newly elected president of the First district, and G. C. Dekle, president of the Millen Woman's club, who were invited as honor guests.

A pleasant digression from the usual custom was the kind offer of Mrs. T. H. Kirkland of her beautiful home on College avenue for a meeting place for the occasion, which was decorated with Dorothy Perkins roses.

On entering, the member drew a card carrying out the club colors which designated the table at which she was to be seated.

Some appropriate piano and vocal selections were rendered by members of the club, after which Mrs. Brinson, district president, gave an inspirational talk, taking as her timely subject, "The American Home."

Mrs. Dekle, president of Millen's Woman's club, gave a short talk which was timely and witty in its nature, after which the meeting was turned into a business session.

Various chairmen read yearly reports which proved within themselves the splendid scope of work accomplished by the club.

The chairman of the nominating committee then gave her report, and the following officers were elected: President, Mrs. A. J. Bird (succeeding herself); vice president, Mrs. S. Q. Eubanks; secretary, Mrs. L. B. Sewell; corresponding secretary, Mrs. B. Parrish; treasurer, Mrs. J. Paul Dekle; parliamentarian, Mrs. W. T. Wright; auditor, Mrs. Foster Williams.

Mrs. Brinson voiced these remarks at the close of the business session: "These reports show that Metter's club is really a model club and I shall work to an end that others in the district be as wonderfully organized."

Mrs. Brinson Speaks.

Mrs. Brinson, president of the First district, talked on the American home. She first traced the history of the home from the time when our ancestors gathered around the fire under an overhanging rock or deep within the sheltered cave, to the modern home with all of its comforts and luxuries. In each case she showed that the home fires cradled the best of any civilization and when they burn dimly that nation is doomed. "The modern home," she said, "no less than that of our ancient ancestors, should be a place of safety. More dangerous than the wild beasts that made havoc of our early ancestors are the conditions and influences that stalk in the paths of our modern society. Sociologists and students of 20th century problems have found no place for the development of those hardy virtues that have made our glorious civilization, except the home. Thoughtful women, with all their freedom and opportunities, are seeing more and more that the safety of all they hold dear must be found at the hearthstone. Well has someone said that our curfew is rung when people no longer turn, when the shadows fall and the storms break, to the firelight of home for safety.

"Like our ancient ancestor, we should find around the hearthstone the solace and comfort of life. From cruel contacts and wounds of heart and mind, we must turn to the 'home fires.' From that 'focus' should radiate a stabilizing influence that shall make for the perpetuity of the race.

"And should we not always find the home as the center of our companship and joys? Much is being written on the breakdown of the present-day home and the waywardness of youth. At every turn we face the questions, What has happened to the American home? Why do parents try so hard to shuffle responsibility for their children on someone else? Why do the members of the family circle find so little joy at home? Dr. Frank Crane has said, 'Your home is not where you lay off your clothes, but where you lay off your cares.'

"This, evidently is the cure for many of the ills of modern youth. With a devotion and deep consecration the women of America must strive to make home centers of joy for the whole family circle. To the extent that we are able to do this will the cause for biting criticism grow less. To the extent that we are able to do this will that 'charm from the skies' become an abiding heritage of American boys and girls."

Epworth League Program Announced.

An interesting program has been arranged for the Epworth league of the First Methodist church Sunday evening at 7 o'clock, by Miss Bess de Mauney, superintendent of the fourth department.

The subject for thought and discussion is "Cross Bearing," the music and entire program being built around this theme. Judge John D. Humphries will be the principal speaker of the evening. Other special features will be a reading by Miss Francis Fry and a solo by Miss Annice Humphries. A social half hour will be held at 6:30 o'clock.

Fitzgerald Club Plans Pageant.

An elaborate pagenant staged by the Fitzgerald Woman's club and extensive fireworks display staged by the Junior chamber of commerce are features for the fourth of July celebration agreed upon thus far. The chamber of commerce, Lions and Kiwanis are planning to assume individual features for the day's celebration which will be one of the most extensive undertaken by the citizens of Fitzgerald. The Fitzgerald community band will furnish the music for the day.

"Much Improved"

MRS. G. L. BEGLEY, of London Avenue, Lexington, Ky., writes that her health "is very much improved" since she began to take Cardui some time ago. About two years ago, Mrs. Begley found her strength very low and her weight below normal.

"The worst thing about my trouble," she explains," was that I was nervous. I did not sleep at night and the least noise would upset me. I could not bear for people to talk in the room with me. I would have smothering spells when I would have to be rubbed all over. Sometimes I would sit up in bed half the night, afraid to go to sleep. The strain was awful. My family were all anxious about me.

"One of my friends insisted that I try Cardui. She had known of some remarkable results from its use and she wanted to see if it would not help me. I read about Cardui, and it sounded promising, so I asked my husband to get me a bottle to try and I began to take it. Before very long I could note an improvement. I began to sleep better and I could eat. My appetite improved wonderfully as I continued the medicine. I began to gain in weight and now I weigh 110½ pounds,—more than I ever weighed before in my life. When I began to take Cardui I was down to 95 pounds. Now I sleep fine at night. My general health is better than it has been in years."

Opposition Aids W. C. T. U.

By M. Frances Meadors Burghard.

"The 'wets' must be given large credit for making the country 'dry.' They furnished the excesses and stupidities which aroused public opinion to action. And they will yet complete what they have begun. All that is needed to enforce prohibition is for the 'wets' to pursue their campaigns a little further; goad public opinion to the level of imperial demand and invincible action, and the thing will be done. The 'wet' has never received the credit due his great part in making booze an outlaw. However unfortunate prohibition may have been in its friends, it has always been most fortunate in its enemies. Opposition puts good causes across," quoted the current Georgia Woman's Christian Union Bulletin from an article in The Dearborn Independent.

The effect of the floods of "wet" propaganda and of the recent Washington hearings has aroused the church, school and the home to action against the efforts of would-be prohibition nullificationists.

Protest Parade in Atlanta.

Take, for an example, the protest against the modification of the Volstead act parade by thousands of the splendid Christian young men and young women in Georgia's capital city this month, who chose that emphatic, spectacular method of hurling back into the teeth of the "wets" the slander that the young people of the land are fast becoming drunken because of prohibition, who thus pledged themselves to sobriety and declared their observance of the eighteenth amendment and allegiance to the constitution of their country.

The opposition of the "wets" goaded these thousands of intelligent young people to publicly show their positive advocacy of prohibition law observance.

A parade, by the way, which visualized the attitude of the best part of America's youth so significantly that suggestions have ben made in various states that a similar parade be made one of the demonstrations at the National W. C. T. U. convention in Los Angeles in the fall. This will depend, however, on being able to secure a time when the college, high school and other groups of young people will be free to participate.

Fifth District Membership Increases.

When Mrs. Lelia A. Dillard, of Emory university, former state president, wrote: "Things W. C. T. U. certainly have been moving on in the fifth district this spring. Nothing could have helped us more in the membership campaign than the agitation in Washington." She described conditions which obtain in this and other states.

This is why the National W. C. T. U. has extended its membership campaign until June 16.

In Atlanta the number of local unions has increased from four to nine, and others are to be organized when Mrs. Florence Ewell Atkins returns to the city early in June; and the number has increased in the fifth district from nine to sixteen, with plans and requests for more.

Mrs. O. L. Taylor, Atlanta, president of the Fifth District W. C. T. U.; Mrs. N. C. McPherson, president of the Atlanta Druid Hills W. C. T. U.; Mrs. K. L. Reeves, president of the Atlanta McLendon W. C. T. U.; Mrs. F. Standifer Stevenson, president of the Atlanta Piedmont; Mrs. J. L. Gillette, president of the Atlanta Patterson, and presidents of other W. C. T. U. organizations of long standing in the district, Mrs. Virginis Conley, College Park; Mrs. H. P. Clay, Decatur; Mrs. J. J. Kirby, Douglasville; Mrs. A. M. Hambric, East Point, and Mrs. J. M. Dodson, Red Oak, all report gains in membership, which gain is expected to be augmented by the time the district meeting is held in College Park June 1.

New W. C. T. U. Organizations in 5th.

The charter members of the new unions organized this spring by Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, Mrs. Florence Ewell Atkins, Mrs. Marvin Williams, Mrs. O. L. Taylor, Mrs. Lelia A. Dillard and Mrs. W. H. Preston constituted the greatest increase in membership in the district. The personnel also adds influence, prestige and an enthusiastic working force.

The names of the new unions and their official rosters are:

Conyers—President, Miss Irene Irwin; secretary, Miss Henrietta Cowan; treasurer, Mrs. I. H. Rainwarter.

Atlanta, Capitol View—President, Mrs. T. O. Hathcock; secretary, Mrs. J. H. McElroy; treasurer, Mrs. W. J. Swindell.

Emory University—President, Mrs. H. W. Cox; secretary, Mrs. C. M. Hamff; treasurer, Mrs. T. M. Campbell.

The names of officers of the St. Paul W. C. T. U., just organized by Mrs. W. H. Preston, have not been received.

Among those asking to be organized are a number of business and professional women of Atlanta, and plans are being formulated whereby they can meet once or twice a month at lunch for brief sessions.

In speaking of the unions organized in the fifth and other Georgia districts, Mrs. Marvin Williams, Atlanta, acting president for Georgia, said:

"God has opened up the way so wonderfully for new organizations recently that it seems we might almost apply the word 'miraculous' to His ways with us."

Washington County Institute.

The Davisboro W. C. T. U., of which Mrs. S. J. Taylor, Mrs. O. F. Downs and Mrs. Ora Jordan are officers, was hostess to the annual Washington County W. C. T. U. institute on Thursday at the beautiful new Baptist church.

The outsanding feature of the occasion was the presence of Mrs. Florence Ewell Atkins, of Milledgeville, state field secretary, who fairly electrified her audience, which was gathered from all parts of the county, with the power of her address on "Why the W. C. T. U. Must Carry On."

The election resulted as follows: Mrs. Byrd Lovett, president; Mrs. Hattie Rogers, first vice president; Mrs. W. R. Lang, second vice president; Mrs. George T. Gilmore, secretary, and Miss Oro Jordan, treasurer.

O. E. S. Chapter Has Meeting.

Electa chapter No. 6, O. E. S., held an interesting meeting Tuesday evening in its hall in the wigwam. Mrs. Rose Mae Ashby, worthy grand marshal of the general grand chapter, was the guest of honor.

The chapter is raising a building fund to erect a room memorial to Electa chapter in the home for the aged.

Mrs. Ashby's talk was on "The Light That Never Fails." Her gift from the chapter was a beautiful silver basket. Mrs. Marie Covington, the worthy matron, had prepared a floral degree to confer on the distinguished guest. Mrs. Willie Mae Cook, grand organist, furnished music for the evening and was given a beautiful rose jar from the chapter.

Mrs. Ashby was initiated into Electa chapter and served two different years as its worthy matron, and was elected to the high office of worthy grand matron of the state while serving as worthy matron in Electa. She went into Grant Park chapter as a charter member when she organized it.

Electa chapter is doing excellent work with Mrs. Marie Covington and Mrs. Smith leaders.

HOW TO GET THIN
Without Weakening Diets or Strenuous Exercises
Try it at our expense!

There should not be any need for fat men or women to remain so and keep on being the target for jokes. If you suffer from the distressing symptoms of obesity you owe it to yourself to try and rid yourself of your excess weight.

Not only should SAN-GRI-NA reduce you but it should greatly improve your health in general. There is no magic, no secret about SAN-GRI-NA. Your own physician can approve (should there be any doubt in his mind about the safety of this formula we will gladly mail him a free box of SAN-GRI-NA for analysis upon his request). Do not expect a reduction over night, but a steady logical loss of generally from three to four pounds a week should be attained, leaving you stronger and healthier week after week.

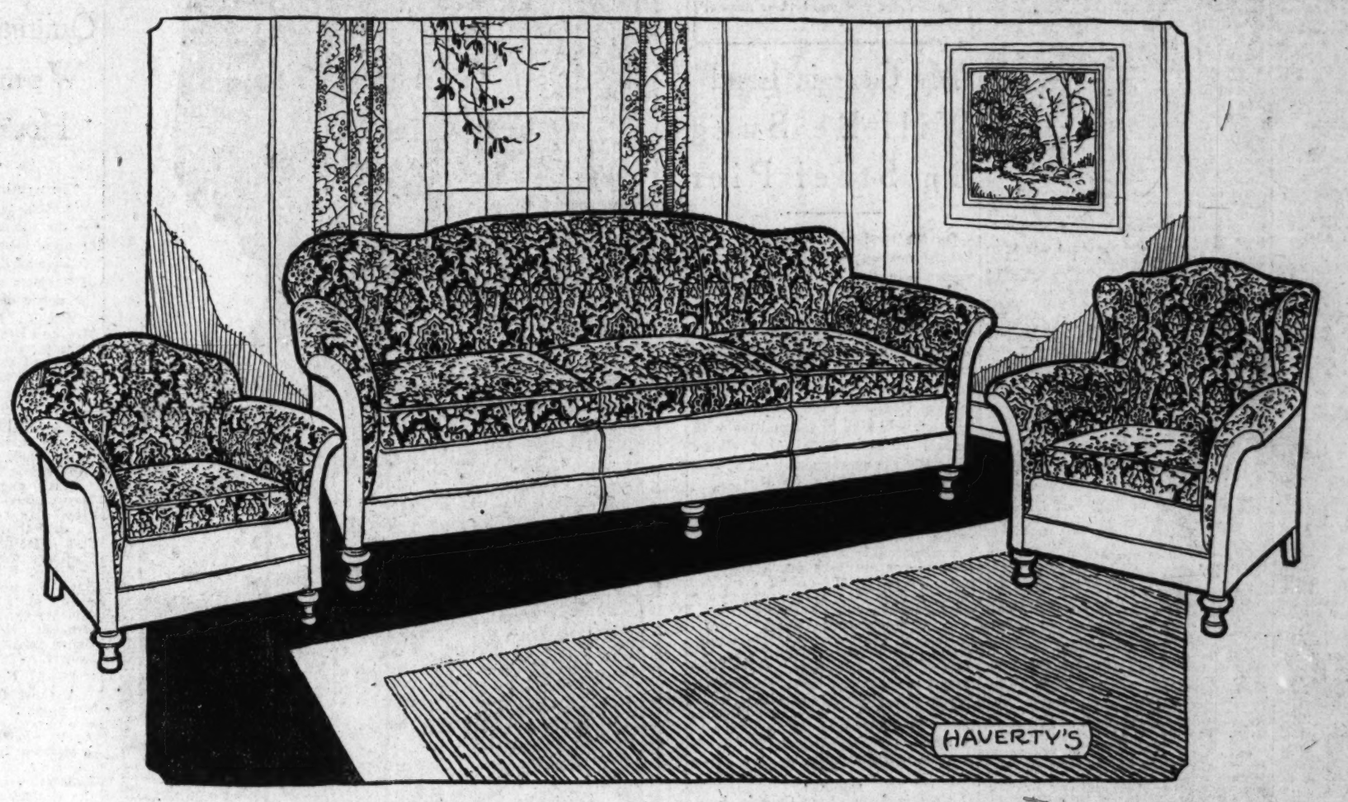

Why we do not send samples

Many people ask for free samples of SAN-GRI-NA, but experience has proven that it takes more than a sample to show results. No, we 'fess up; it isn't a real snake but a stuffed affair that Miss Carlton Brown, its maker, describes as an excellent adjustable pillow on board ship. We'd hate to see it "adjusted" in the bars of some ships we've seen. (International)

ANOTHER POLE IN THE PUBLIC EYE—But this one has nothing to do with "the top of the world." He is Marshal Pilsudski, national hero of Poland, who was leader of a coup d'etat which resulted in formation of a military dictatorship in his homeland. (Herbert)

NEW NOTE IN THE MARTINELLI SCALE—Smiling contentment is written on the faces of the famous opera star's family as they gaze on Giovanna, the latest addition to the circle. Left to right, standing, Bettina Martinelli, Signor Giovanni Martinelli and Antonio. Seated, Mrs. Martinelli and the new playmate. (International)

THE SWEETEST PAPA IN ALL BEAR-LAND—And they do say in Northboro, Mass., where this picture was taken, that when he hugs 'em, they stay hugged. Mrs. Fred P. Buck, shown on the receiving end of the odd caress, maintains a bear farm, and her charges are said to be as tame as puppies.

FREAK OF FIRST OF ATLANTA'S SUMMER GALES—Swept from its parking place near the state capitol by the force of a 60-mile gale Monday night, May 10, the sedan of Fort E. Land, state superintendent of schools, rolled down East Hunter street and nose-dived over a 15-foot embankment on the side of a railroad building at East Hunter street and Piedmont avenue. Telephone and power lines were snarled by the high winds here, which blew while cyclones were sweeping other southern states. (Francis E. Price)

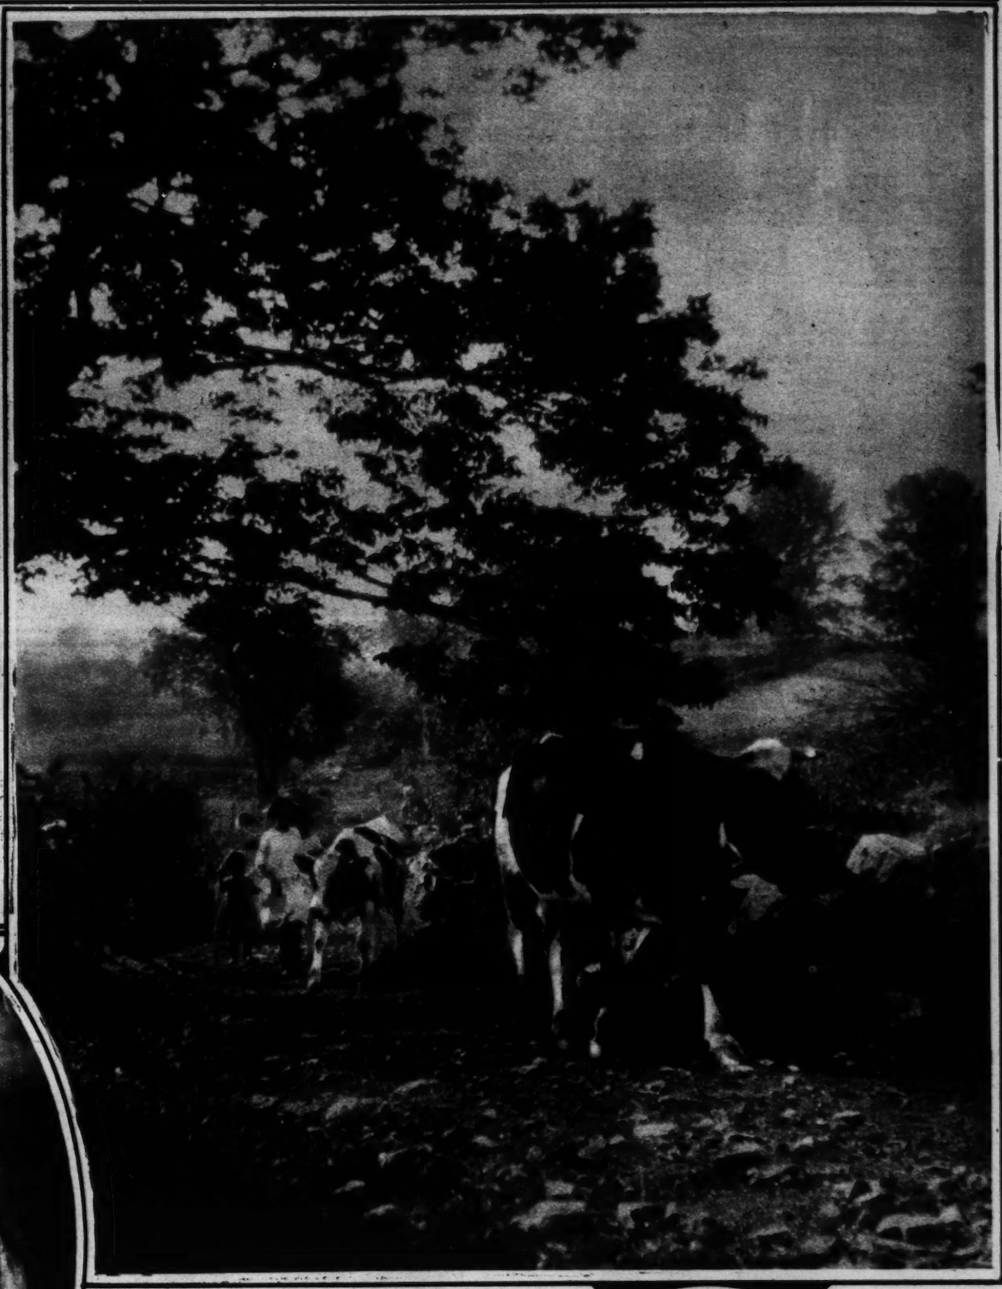

A DOZEN OSTRICHES AND A LONE SILKWORM contributed this snappy costume worn by Nina Payne, American dancer who is the idol of Paris. Can you blame Paris? (Herbert Photos, Inc.)

SHE'S A WILDCAT'S MAMA—And to prove it, Juanita Miller, picturesque daughter of a picturesque father—Joaquin Miller, "poet of the Sierras"—carries her strange pet just as its wild mother would carry it. Juanita, shown in her gunny sack costume in front of her "wigwam" home in the hills of California, is following in the footsteps of her father. She is a musician and writes poetry. (Herbert)

EX-WIFE AND CHILD OF RUNAWAY PRINCE—Mme. Zizi LamBrino, first wife of Prince Carol, with her son, Mircea. Carol was to meet them recently in Paris to place his son in a boarding school and give his wife the right to bear the name of Hohenzollern, but he failed to appear. It is thought he has returned to royal favor at home after his amorous escapades. (International)

"FRIEND, I TREMBLE FOR THEE IN THY FOOLHARDINESS"—If the brazen tongue of the statue of William Penn on the city hall in Philadelphia could speak, it probably would thus address the intrepid painter who is administering its annual coat of paint while hanging from a rope 548 feet from the ground. (International)

SILVER-TONGUED WOMAN ORATOR—Mrs. Rose Mae Ashby, worthy grand marshal of the general grand chapter, Sovereign Body of the Order of the Eastern Star, bears this proud title. She is past worthy grand matron of Georgia and is one of the most prominent figures in the Eastern Star world.

IT'S GOING TO BE A HARD YEAR ON VOTERS—Having mastered the intricacies of the dial telephone and the income tax, Americans now are to be asked to cast their ballots on this weird-looking mechanical device. Six hundred of these machines have already been ordered for use in New York. (International)

LET'S CALL IT "MEMORY LANE"—Every man or woman who has ever lived far from the wastes of asphalt will recognize this picture with a thrill of returned youth—though they've probably never seen the spot itself. Go back down the pathway of the years and bring again to memory the shaded track down which you drove the cows home. Wasn't it pretty much like this beautiful south Georgia farm scene?

DECATUR SOCIETY SOLD ON "IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE"

As witness the elaborate costumes representing popular brands of merchandise represented at the recent advertising ball staged in the new Decatur Woman's club. The ideas brought out by the costumes were original and clever, and—"a good time was had by all."

(Warlick)

THERE'S NOTHING ROTTEN IN DENMARK—A scene like this in Georgia would send posses scurrying to "find the body," but it's a common one in Oakland, Calif. On the shore of Lake Merritt is a bird sanctuary, where feathered visitors are protected and fed.
(Herbert Photos, Inc.)

ALABAMA BEAUTY FOR "ALL-SOUTHERN BALL"—Miss Carolyn Dean Moore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Moore, of Eufaula, who will represent our sister state at the "All-Southern" ball in Atlanta May 24. She is a descendant of Confederate soldiers and a graduate of Agnes Scott college.

(International)

UP IN MABEL'S PLANE—Substitute this tile for the name of a once-popular comedy; let the fair heroine don natty knickers instead of filmy lingerie which not so many years ago was the inspiration for a number of bed room farces—and you have the 1926 outdoor-stage thriller. Mable Cody, niece of "Buffalo Bill" made the change from a speed boat to a plane at Tampa.
(Herbert Photos, Inc.)

ATTENTION, AMERICAN MAGAZINE—"How I Won a Medal Without Use of My Arms" would prove attractive reading along with the story of the man who turned a can of shoe blacking into a million dollars; and Vincent De Blasio could spin the yarn to perfection. The armless youth recently was awarded a medal as Philadelphia's most deserving boy. Giving the lad his start in life is Mayor Kendrick. De Blasio is studying quietly to become a lawyer, and may succeed if too many medals are not conferred on him.
(International)

THOSE DREADFUL COLLEGE BOYS—No riot, lady; just a little friendly class scrap between the freshmen and seniors of Harvard. The distance was 12 miles in the 1926 modified version of the marathon. (International)

"MOTHER O' MINE, OI MOTHER O' MINE!"—On such a flower-decked stage in the auditorium of Atlanta's great-gray federal prison did three thousand men who are "serving time" pay honor, on Mother's Day, to the memory of the little, old, gray woman who waits at home for their return. Atlanta religious and prison workers distributed red and white blossoms, and these were worn on drab uniforms while the prisoners poured out the woe of lonely hearts at the shrine of "the sweetheart of the world."

The Story of a Mother Who Sacrificed Everything for Her Children, and of a Daughter Who Mocked at Selflessness

ALWAYS Mary McAlpin dreaded Christmas. To others it might bring peace and good will, as ministers, magazines, newspapers, and shop windows united in reiterating, but to her for weeks before-hand it meant rising earlier in the morning to a grayer dawn, straining tired eyes later into the night; conditions more feverish, patrons more unreasonable, results more unsatisfactory. If Mary had been asked to epitomize Yuletide in one sentence she would have answered: "A new dress for every woman in New York except myself, which absolutely must be finished two days earlier than is humanly possible."

The physical labor was not the hardest part; Mary was used to that. But every year the same familiar heartache stabbed her at the thought of the two expectant stockings she would have loved to cram with toys. It had been hopeless trying to camouflage their painful deficiencies ever since Maisie on the seventh Christmas had remarked cynically to Neil: "'Tain't no use gettin' 'cited 'bout those bulges. They ain't never nuthin' but an ole orange, and an ole apple, and some ole nuts."

If Maisie had scorned these at seven, each year had found her increasingly difficult to satisfy. At ten she had demanded of Santa Claus silk stockings, at fifteen a gold vanity box and crepe de chine underwear, and now, at nineteen, was modestly requesting a millionaire husband. There were to be no apples, oranges or nuts on Maisie's menu if she could help it; she was out for caviar and terrapin.

Yes, there was no doubt Maisie was a problem at Christmas, as she was three hundred and sixty-four other days in the year. In the rare moments allowed her for meditation Mary ransacked perplexedly her forgotten girlhood trying to remember if she, too, had made then such insatiable demands on life. Was it because she had been the eldest of a large family, she wondered, that she had from childhood shouldered unquestioningly the burdens of existence? Life had been to her always serious, earnest, a thing of toil and stress, a battle to be fought in uncomplaining silence. Yet she had been a prettier girl than Maisie. If she had flung off responsibilities as resolutely as her daughter, had reached out such covetous hands towards luxury and pleasure, would they have been her portion instead of this ceaseless, bitter struggle? And if so, would it have been right that they should be?

Never had a Christmas heralded a blacker approach than that never-to-be-forgotten one. There had been glimmers of brightness the three preceding years, after Mrs. Witherspoon had taken the McAlpin family, willy nilly, under her aggressive wing, had bullied Mary into better quarters, and had ruthlessly banished the "C" from her hitherto inoffensive name.

"It's got to be French. You've good ideas, Mrs. McAlpin, and you're the only conscientious dressmaker in New York, but you can't hope to make any real money in this burg unless you put it over that you're French. Clothes and Paris have just got to be married in New York City."

Maisie had taken to French extraction like a duck to water, but only the lure of an extra year in high school for Neil had bent Mary to Mrs. Witherspoon's will. She still flushed to the alias, and even for Neil, would never lie when forced into the open by some too curious questioner.

"No, I was born in Brooklyn," she would respond, leaving her to make what inferences she would.

Mrs. Witherspoon's philosophy, however, had justified itself. The circle of Mary's customers was steadily widening—customers with richer materials, fatter pocketbooks, more exacting tempers. Just as the yoke had seemed to be lifting ever so slightly from her chafed shoulders, Fate dealt two rapid blows in quick succession: Maisie flung away her first good position to escort to Florida Mrs. Vandier, Mary's most temperamental patron; hard upon her desertion of her mother at Mary's busiest season came Neil's sudden and alarming illness. He had caught cold delivering belated gowns in a heavy snowstorm. Two days later the doctor gave a terrifying verdict of pneumonia.

Outside holly wreaths began to exhibit their cheerful circles on street corners and behind panes; the stores became more seductive and more crowded; throngs jostled in and out of them, forcing merry, chattering paths up and down aisles and avenues; children grew daily more saucer eyed, and even the most blase grownups caught something of the excitement and suspense of the season. But in the little Lexington avenue apartment it might have been July or March for all its inmates knew. Neil tossed and moaned in delirium, and Mary, ashen, silent and efficient, carried out the peremptory orders of the formidable doctor from Park avenue whom she had called in her despair. Under her composed exterior raged a tempest of revolt and despair. For the first time since her burdened childhood she had lost the steadfast courage with which unflinchingly she had faced life's cruelties.

"Not Neil!" she bombarded heaven in ceaseless, anguished appeal. "Dear God, not Neil! I have borne so much. That I cannot bear!"

The eleventh day of the siege the great doctor, who had worked as tirelessly over the case as if Neil had been lying behind a brownstone front, remarked casually as he struggled into his overcoat:

Bereft of speech, Mary could only look up at him, her hand at her throat. He was a distinguished looking man in his middle forties, with hard, tired eyes and a distinctly cynical twist to a handsome mouth. To Mary he had assumed suddenly the aspect and beneficence of a god.

"Yes, that's what I said—'well,'" he reiterated testily. "He'll probably live to make you regret it—most of them do—but such as it is, I make you a present of the news."

She lifted to him a face so luminous with joy that he stared back at her curiously through the opened door.

"Better not give you information like that very often," he remarked. "You'll be needing a chaperone when you go out."

All week Mary went about her work in a quiet ecstasy of happiness; unfinished gowns, unpaid bills, Maisie's problem, clamored for attention in vain. Neil was going to get well, and nothing else mattered.

The second week of convalescence, however, the old familiar anxieties crept into consciousness. The doctor had said that Neil needed now only good nursing, but he still continued his daily visits. She accosted him one evening on the subject of his bill, noting with troubled eyes the opulence exuding from his fur-lined overcoat.

"Perhaps it isn't fair to let you come so often, Dr. Sutherland, without telling you that I'm afraid it's going to take a long time to finish paying your bill."

"Fortunately I have a roof over my head and the coal's in for the winter," he returned dryly. "I think I can manage to worry along for some time without that bill. Forget it. And I shall keep on coming—unless you turn me out."

"Turn you out—after what you have done for Neil!" Mary groped for words to meet this extraordinary statement.

"He must be really interested in Neil," she reflected happily after he had gone. Who, indeed, wouldn't be?

But strangely enough, the doctor evinced no desire to discuss his protege. Even when he knew that Neil was out, he popped in in his brusque disconcerting way. This time he suggested a drive to Mary.

"Nonsense," he retorted irritably to her astonished refusal. "Tell your client you have to go get some more chenille, or bombazine, or whatever you're using on her cursed dress. Don't you ever play, woman?"

She considered this a moment with her usual seriousness. "There is no time for play," she said. "I have my children to think of."

"Suppose you think of yourself for a change," he suggested, and came a step nearer to her in the dim little hall. "Do you know that you're a very baffling proposition?" he continued, with his strange, disturbing gaze bent down on her. "I can't diagnose you at all. What's under that stillness of yours, that remoteness? "Don't you know that you're too young a woman to shut life out this way? Is it possible that you don't know—don't care—that you could be a beautiful woman if you wanted to? Why do you wear that eternal black? You ought to wear blue—periwinkle blue—the color of your eyes. Put it on to please me."

And as she still gazed at him, stricken speechless by these amazing words, he came closer still, caught her to him with sudden roughness, and put his lips to hers.

Before she had quite realized what had happened she had wrenched herself free and had stepped back, shaken and bewildered. He made no move to recapture her.

"I shall be here tomorrow evening—Christmas eve, isn't it?" he remarked, as if nothing at all had happened. "Hope you'll have something in my stocking for me."

With that he had gone, leaving her more agitated than she had ever been in her life before.

With his kiss, his words, something within her had leaped startingly to life. What it was she did not yet know. But facing her mirror with flaming cheeks and eyes, she did know that what he had said was true; she could be beautiful. With the knowledge of a host of vague, strange, alarming desires surged through her heart, held out avid hands to the warmth, the color and brightness she had never before dreamed of claiming from life.

That unworldiness which Maisie so frequently chided kept her at first from remembering what might lay behind that kiss for herself, for the children. Her beauty had been too delicate, too easily blurred, too make much of an appeal in the environment in which it had been cast. It needed a discerning eye to read its possibilities. Even so, there had been more than one who had asked to fill John McAlpin's place. Mary had never reached the point of defining her reaction to any of these aspirants. Her parliamentary test, "What kind of a father would he make to the children?" had never before been successfully passed. With Doctor Sutherland in that role, dazzled visions began to assail her of Neil at college, of Maisie in the atmosphere she craved. She was free for once to search her own heart. But the writing there she found too hurried, too illegible to read at that moment. Nothing in John's decorous courtship had prepared her for this chaos of emotions in which she found herself plunged. She could not even tell whether that unbelievable kiss had attracted or repelled her, whether she was longing or dreading for tomorrow night to come.

She was still more uncertain when early the next morning, to her relief after Neil had gone, came an armful of such roses as she had never seen before outside of a florist's window. There was a note with them in the bold hand which had so far indited for her only prescriptions.

"Wear these for me tonight. What are you going to put in my stocking?"

What indeed? Mary McAlpin was the last who could tell him.

A still more startling Christmas gift appeared in the afternoon when Maisie strolled in jauntily from Florida.

"Couldn't stand that boresome old hag a moment longer," she announced. "Expected me to be glued to her side day and night, listening eternally to her woes. Got so she even took her meals in her room. Hel—peach of a way to see Florida," she substituted a different word as a delicate tribute to her first day with her mother. "Well I must say pneumonia in the family seems to have agreed with you, mother. Whence the pink cheeks? Don't tell me you've taken to rouge in my absence."

Maisie's presence banished effectually further attempts at introspection, as well as the roses and the blue waist Mary had whipped together that morning from an old scarf of her daughter's. With her first furtive gesture, she hid these evidences of crime. That proud dignity of hers had taken alarm at an appalling thought; what if Neil and Maisie should think her foolish!

But she could not forbear behind locked doors, trying on the waist. It was not the periwinkle blue the doctr had prescribed, but blue enough to deepen her eyes and to lift several years from her shadowed face. Looking at herself, Mary felt again that baffling, tingling sensation of power, of beckoning adventure, of eagerness to live.

Outwardly she went about the intervening hours until evening with her cool remoteness untouched. Only she knew that her heart pounded at every unexpected footstep. When, however, his came, measured, assured, she fled to her own room and stood leaning against the door, trying in that last moment of reprieve to decide how she was to meet him, what she was to say.

It was Maisie, as usual, who determined her course. Ten minutes after Dr. Sutherland's arrival, just as Mary with shaking fingers was slipping off her black waist, Maisie precipitated herself into the room. For once she regarded her mother with wholly approving eyes.

"For the love of Mike, mother, is Mrs. Johnson right? Is that doctor person in there really the Park avenue Sutherland?"

At Mary's assent she executed an excited pas seul in the middle of the room.

"I certainly hand it to you," she congratulated her parent with unwonted graciousness. "To think that you, of all people in this world, alone and single-handed, could lasso anything like that! Distinguished—wads of money (did you note that limousine?)—O, boy!—good looking and, though ancient, well preserved. I don't believe he's out of his forties, do you? To think that I've been combing Florida for him, and all the time here he was sitting in Neil's room. If I'd known that, the world would have witnessed the most beautiful case of sisterly devotion on record. I'd have boarded the train the hour Neil was taken sick."

"What do you mean?" Mary asked her faintly. Already she had a sure and terrible prescience what Maisie was meaning.

"I mean that's the kind of husband I've been looking for." Nobody could ever accuse Maisie of beating about the bush. "Now I've met him, the next thing is to get him. Prepare to be shocked, mother. There's going to be some heavy vamping in this apartment tonight."

After she had gone Mary examined unflinchingly the new angle to which the situation had incredibly veered. The sharpness of her pain bewildered her. She did not love this man; the children would still have their glowing future.

White with shame, she traced steadfastly to its ignoble source that flame of fierce and resentful bitterness which had seared her with Maisie's words. It lay in the thrill of that blazing moment which had burned its way across the grayness of her life, intolerably drab now in contrast. She was no better then, she told herself, than these middle aged Circes she had fitted so often, listening with inward scorn as they gossiped with one another of flirtations, suitors, rendezvous. "Had they nothing better to think of at their age!" She had wondered. "Couldn't they find excitement enough in their children without looking for them in these silly tributes to their vanity?"

And now she, worse than they, was grudging passionately the future she had so often prayed might be granted Maisie. She fell on her knees beside the bed burying her face in her arms. But Maisie, with her youth, her sparkle, her ruthlessness, might have a dozen chances to achieve that future; she would have only the one.

Finally she rose and, grave, colorless, clad in her most uncompromising black gown, went in to greet Dr. Sutherland. She had not yet conquered the storm raging within her, but she had no doubt from the beginning as to what she should do. The hideousness of rivalry with her own daughter could not be contemplated for a moment, and she knew only too well that Maisie was not one to relinquish what she wanted without a struggle. Mary was withdrawing proudly from an untenable position, but she could not yet achieve the gladness with which, in her code, Maisie's mother should have withdrawn.

"It was very sweet of you to acquiesce so gracefully in my suggestions," he remarked grimly to her in the dining room, where he had followed her. "I infer that my humble roses did not find favor in your eyes."

"It was very kind of you to send them," Mary returned evenly. "But, of course, I could not wear them. I am too old for blue waists and red roses, Dr. Sutherland."

"It's easy to believe that tonight," the doctor struck home with brutality. "But there have been days when you've——" He took a step towards her as he had the night before in the hall.

She made no move to evade him, but her quietness, the remoteness he had challenged, checked him more effectually than any outcry could have done.

"You're an extraordinary woman," he told her, glowering down at her with evident discomfiture. "A queer anachronism in the twentieth century. But all right, all right. Stay in your damned little Victorian corner if you want to, knitting by the fire with a cap on your head before you're forty. You'll regret it when it's too late."

She was still standing motionless where he had left her when he reappeared in the doorway. He began again, still curt, still explosive, but with a kinder, more expostulatory note in his voice.

"Don't you know, Mrs. Sphinx, you're a half-century behind the times—acting like this? Nobody believes any more in this sacrifice business. That altar you're worshiping was abandoned decades ago. Where have you ever gotten wearing yourself out for those children of yours—and for your husband before them, probably—and your father and mother before him, I'll bet my hat. Catch up with the twentieth century and get something out of life for yourself."

"I couldn't get any pleasure out of anything," she replied, more to these new, tormenting desires than to her companion, "if it hurt my children."

"Would it hurt them," he demanded practically, "if you wore a blue waist—and my roses—and tried to cheer up a lonely old codger who hasn't any fireside of his own?"

It was very hard to resist that unexpected appeal—in the face, too, of what he had done for her boy. But she stood firm.

"Maisie can cheer you up much better than I," she returned coldly. "I am too busy, I am afraid."

Maisie, it was fully evident from the first evening was more than willing to assume that task. It was even harder than Mary had expected to remain in her corner as she watched her daughter descend gayly to the doctor's limousine Christmas afternoon en route to the matinee.

Once Mary would have welcomed the quiet afternoon before her as a rare chance to attack unfinished odds and ends, or a still rarer chance to read and to reflect. Today found her too restless even for work, her lifetime ally. She flung on her hat and coat in desperation and set forth to wrest peace if she might from the outdoor world, bleak as it was.

All the Christmas cheer was bottled securely behind holly-hung windows; not a hint of it in the lowering sky, the unkind wind. She was glad it was unkind; it suited her mood. The gay, reckless, cynical, pleasure-mad twentieth century, which she had thought barred out of her quiet life, had her out of its corner at last, tormenting her with a sense of frustration, mocking those obsolete slogans of Duty and Self-Sacrifice to which she had paid such honorable allegiance, shouting into her horrified ears its triumphant battle cry of individualism and of her right to live. Her one chance against Maisie's many, she kept saying to herself. She had done wrong not to seize it. She should have explained to Maisie that very first minute. It was not yet too late. There had been a too ostentatious indifference behind the doctor's smile today; she was not yet a cipher in his life. She could strike again that spark which had flamed for one momentous instant in the hall. Maisie was not wholly without her fine moments; she could be trusted to understand, Mary contended vehemently against her sick certitude that Maisie could not.

The children had all their lives before them; she had never yet begun to live. What did one gain by sacrifice on sacrifice on sacrifice? Surely she herself was a warning of the futility of struggle and abnegation. What had she to show for it all? Only vain withered offerings on an altar abandoned and forgotten.

Yet if she were to turn away from it—she had a sudden sick vision of herself, like Maisie, clutching, fighting for happiness at any cost; of a world

Abe Martin :: :: On Marriage and Careers

"DOES marriage Jim a career?" I asked Mrs. Tipton Bud, candidate fer sheriff, a few days ago. "Emphatically no," she replied. An' then she went on t' say, "Marriage might have held a few women back in th' past, but nothin' kin stop 'em t'day. Why should a little thing like marriage interfere with a woman gittin' t' th' front anymore than it holds a man back? Homes have got so they kin run 'emselves. We have laundries, bakeries, cannin' industries, kindergartens, ready-t'-wear dresses, an' ever'thing makin' it possible fer a wife an' mother t' tear out an' foller her own inclinations. Once a week is plenty often t' clean a home an' carry out th' cans. This career business has allus been too one-sided. Some of our best arctic explorers have had wives an' children an' furnaces t' attend to, but these things didn' stop 'em, so what's t' keep a wife from makin' a dash now an' then? Women kin be great artists an' raise families an' have husbands. Any artist, I don't care who she is, likes t' drop in home now an' then an' play with her kiddies, an' discuss things with her husband, an' what could be sweeter, or more natural, fer a woman telegraph operator, or politician, or author, or saleswoman, or what not, t' want t' git home after a busy day an' mingle with those nearest an' dearest t' her. Fame an' success don't blind either men or women t' th' beauties o' home life an' children, an' things, that is, not necessarily. I kin be a sheriff without it destroyin' all o' my finer sensibilities about home an' things. Does a cereer spoil home life? If you'd ask me, does home life spoil a career, I'd say too much of it 'll spoil anything. Who wants t' be slavin' around home with a head full o' big ideas, an' see opportunity after opportunity slippin' away when you might git someone t' keep house fer $8 a week while you're electrifyin' th' world? I don't think bein' a husband or wife ever held anybuddy back that had th' stuff in 'em. Bein' married might inconvenience once in a while, but Gee whop, there's annoyances in everthing. If anybuddy tells you they might have been great if they hadn't married they're spiffin' you. Marriage never hurt nobuddy. Why, you'd never know lots of our greatest people wuz married if th' newspapers would keep still, an' some of our most celebrated careerists have been married four or five times. Some of our foremost artists seem t' depend on an occasional marriage t' keep before th' public. Th' only folks that marriage seems t' hold back are th' boys who are only makin' $20 a week, an' th' girls who've been used t' makin' $35.

Things New and Old About the Bible :

BY REV. W. P. KING
Pastor First Methodist Church, Gainesville, Ga.

Objections to Divine Fatherhood.

I.

Rev. W. P. King

THERE is the suffering which results from retribution.

It was the mistake of the comforters of Job that they traced all suffering to retribution for sin. It has been the mistake of theology that it has represented all the suffering of the world as following after sin.

Whereas the fact is that prior to the appearance of man on earth there is a long dark record of conflict and pain and anguish.

But despite this consideration, much of the suffering of the earth is a direct result of sin.

Who can measure the vast ocean of misery caused by intemperance in drink, that submerges the innocent as well as the guilty?

Who can measure that vaster ocean of misery which comes from gluttony whose troubled surface floats such a dark variety of human ailments?

Who is able to fathom that almost bottomless sea of human anguish that results from the stress and strain of modern life in which the faculties are goaded on beyond their natural pace, both in work and pleasure terminating in nervous breakdown and insanity?

There is also the suffering which falls upon both guilty and innocent as a result of impurity, which is beyond the power of human language to depict.

There is the indiscribable anguish that flows out of the wickedness of war.

In any reasonable attempt at some understanding of the problem of suffering, we must reckon with the large amount of suffering which men bring on themselves through sin.

Human beings come into life with the stain of somebody else's sin written on the tablet of their bodies.

Think of the innocent lives blighted and blasted by the sins of others.

But the sinner himself cannot evade the retribution. Every sin of your life means that you must suffer. Every violation of law means that your life suffers the injury of so much destroyed capacity for what you might have been.

One may be so hardened in insensibility as to be little disturbed by the pangs of conscience, but Jesus Christ lifts the curtain which separates us from the future life, and tells us that sin must receive its just deserts in suffering.

There is the suffering which follows in the wake of ignorance and carelessness. Ignorant of his own body, man loses his health. Careless toward machinery; man is crippled.

Ignorant of the laws of nature, man sows the seed of pain and penalty.

Ignorant of human nature, man loses his property and even his life.

Nature makes no exemption for man on account of ignorance or carelessness, even though it may be a good man who is ignorant or careless.

There would be no progress possible if God made miraculous intervention to prevent the penalty.

Fire burns the innocent babe just the same as the guilty criminal.

A violation of the law of gravity will break the bones of the hero just as it will break the bones of the villain.

The saint or the sinner who through ignorance or carelessness violates the laws of nature, the law of health, the law of gravity both suffer alike.

II.

There is suffering which results from the solidarity of life.

This is closely connected with vicarious suffering. As a result of the inter-relationship there is the suffering of innocence, so that men say, "The way of the Lord is not equal."

Jesus used a little child to stimulate faith, but how often the haggard face of a neglected and wronged child deadens faith.

Let us look fairly at the problem. When a man does evil, he involves others in suffering. But think what it would mean if this were not so. There would be also the impossibility of transmitting the good. It would mean in short that each man lives to himself and that we are not members one of another. Do we desire that this should be the law of human life?

It would mean the individualism of life instead of the solidarity of life.

Then this would involve the good as well as the evil. This would individualize happiness and character. It would make impossible the progress of humanity, human life would be unthinkable. This was the proposed program of Mill, if according to his idea God were just.

Each person's share of suffering and happiness would be exactly proportioned to that person's good or evil deeds, and no human being would have a worse lot than others without worse deserts.

This would make a hard, dry, dismal world.

If my lot in life were exactly proportioned to my individual deeds, it would leave me physically, intellectually and morally in absolute starvation. It is the contribution of others which has made my life a life at all. If we should not have a worse lot than others without worse deserts, then we should not have a better lot without better deserts. According to this we would still be prehistoric savages. Man cannot have the benefit of good heredity without the possibility of evil heredity. Man is not an isolated unit. "We are members one of another."

Our life is organic. To repeat it would not be justice, it would be an end of life in any human sense of the world. This would involve not only a separation of each human life from all others; it would necessarily mean a separate and distinct creation of each human life.

Then the question goes back to the kind of man that God has created. To be a man at all includes the freedom of man. If God had made him a machine, then men could not have inflicted injustice on anybody else. But what kind of a world would this have been?

The answer must be that both happiness and character would have been out of the question, and character would have been impossible. The world is so bound together that it must rise or fall all together. This is as it should be.

III.

Suffering is vicarious.

Suffering for others runs throughout nature and human life. The vegetable dies that the animal may live, and the animal dies that man may live. The parents suffer for the children.

The good suffer through a compassionate concern for the wicked.

The Crucified One, with unutterable pathos of passion and death, has blessed the world with his suffering.

There is the common atonement which is entered into by all high and heroic spirits.

The longing of St. Paul was, "That I may fill up that which is lacking of the suffering of Christ."

"That I may know him and the power of his resurrection and the fellowship of his suffering."

David Livingston lived through 30 attacks of African fever, but his garment of power and anguish was not woven by his transgressions, but out of his love and sympathy for others. Referring to the slave trade, he wrote, "All I can add in my solitude is may heaven's rich blessings come down on every one who would help to heal this open sore of the world."

A short time afterwards he was found dead in an attitude of prayer. In ten years after David Livingston's death Africa advanced more than in the previous ten centuries.

The large results of sacrificial suffering are determined by the greatness of the personality who makes the sacrifice. It is pre-eminently true that there is power in the sacrifice of Christ, a power which uplifts the world.

Jesus accomplished good by his life. In his brief, public career, he brought new inspiration and strength to many lives; relieved a large amount of distress and disease, gave to the world a revelation of spiritual truth and attracted men by his words and works.

But if Jesus had stopped short of the vicarious suffering of the cross, he would have lived in the world only as a sweet memory of a high idealist and misfaken reformer.

The death which seemed to terminate his life only disengaged and set to work the strong vital forces of his life.

The World's Greatest Pictures

"THE LUTE PLAYER" :-: :-: BY FRANS HALS

This is the 14th of a series of 52 greatest paintings which represent the choice of the art directors and connoisseurs throughout North America. Reproduction of this art masterpiece appears in the rotogravure section of today's Constitution.

BY EUGENE P. CONLEY.

Of course, there are exceptions to every rule, and the element of chance always enters into a "sure thing," but it would seem reasonably safe to prophesy undying fame to the artist whose remains are lowered in a pauper's grave, be he the progeny of Dutch parents. In this series so far we have seen how Rembrandt and Hobbema received such a burial, and now Frans Hals joins them. "The Lute Player," by this great portrait painter, which is so characteristic of his style and subject, is one of the treasures in the Amsterdam Gallery.

In the little town of Haarlem, (or it was so in the 17th century), stands the Church of St. Bavon. The churchyard is a graveyard for its members. No monuments are allowed to be erected. All, regardless of position, receive the same small-sized tombstone. Here, so Fate decreed, would be the final resting place of Frans Hals, the painter.

Peter Paul Rubens was celebrating his seventh birthday, and the great Michelangelo had been dead just twenty years, when a child arrived at the home of the Hals family in Antwerp, and was christened Frans. This was the year 1584. The misfortunes of war had made it necessary for the Hals to leave Haarlem, which had long been the home of their ancestors, so they moved to Antwerp.

The dawn of the 17th century finds one candle burning on the birthday cakes in the homes of Van Dyke and Velasquez, contemporaries in later life to the sixteen-year-old Frans, who was making good progress in the local art school. Time will heal most every sort of a wound, but twenty-five years was not a long enough time to drown the nostalgia in the father and mother, so when Frans became of age, we find them comfortably settled again among friends and relatives in Haarlem.

Frans entered the school of Karel van Mander, who was enough of a teacher to recognize genius, and genius is what he saw in Frans Hals. The pupil's sweeping style amazed him. It is not reasonable to presume that when one reaches the age of twenty-six all of his time be given to his profession. For instance, a fair share of one's time must be allotted to recreation, and even affairs of the heart cannot be denied, so it is not surprising to find Anne Hermanszoon adding Hals to her name. The wedded life of this pair, which lasted just six years, proved unhappy. His inebriate habits and temper brought domestic troubles. Less than a year goes by before we find the hail-good-fellow-well-met Frans married again, this time to Lysbeth Reyniers. This union lasted for fifty years and proved a happy one, if indeed, happiness to a wife means making unusual allowances for the faults of the husband.

"The Lute Player" was painted in 1630. This was in the period of his greatest works. Hals, in his portraits, reveals the personality and the characteristics of his time and country. Much of his time was given over to "wine-bibbing and low society." His contemporaries stated that he paid too much attention to drink to become a really great artist. "I wish I knew what brand he used, so I could feed it to my other generals," was the come-back of the great Lincoln, when told that Grant was drinking too much.

When one reaches the seventy-eighth milestone in life's journey, he is no longer young. And, when he finds his resources so low at that age that he can't provide sustenance for the body, life becomes serious and earnest. The good city fathers of Haarlem voted a pension to be paid Hals for the remainder of his life, but he didn't live long to enjoy their liberality. He died in 1666, just three years before the death of his greatest contemporary, Rembrandt.

Did you ever read the story of Zauberlinda, the Wise Witch? In that adventure a little girl visits a silversmith's—and, oh! what a roar greets her ears as she enters! THE ABANDONED MINE

The Adventures of Two Boys Who Try to Solve a Kidnaping Mystery

By W. BOYCE MORGAN

SYNOPSIS

Ted Holmes and Bill Watson have an idea that they are detectives, but the small western Pennsylvania town of Southbank, in which they live, offers them few chances to test their powers. One May morning, however, it is discovered that Bill's little sister, Dorothy, has disappeared during the night. Kidnaping is feared, and Bill and Ted get busy. They decide that the kidnapers would hide the child in an abandoned coal mine not far from town. Jumping on their bicycles, they ride out to investigate. Fresh auto tracks are found leading up the dirt road toward the mine, and the boys follow them, not knowing what they are going to meet at the end of the road.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

INSTALLMENT II.

The road leading up the hillside toward the old coal mine was very rough in places, and several times Bill and Ted had to climb off their bicycles and push them up the steep grade. Low-hanging branches whipped their faces as they rode. Ted, pointing toward some of these branches, found in them another clew to the recent passage of an automobile.

"See how fresh those breaks are, Bill," he said, in a voice that was hushed because of the stillness of the woods and the feeling of mingled fear and mystery that filled both boys.

"The passage extended, dark and foreboding."

"They sure look as though a car had passed here not long ago."

Bill did not answer. He could not keep his mind off the thought of what might be waiting for them when they reached the mine, now only a few hundred yards away. Kidnapers who stole children to hold them for ransom must be thoroughly bad characters, who would hesitate at nothing. Yet here were two boys, with absolutely no means of protection, going up to face them. The old abandoned shaft was at any time a place of mystery and danger; under these circumstances it was doubly so.

But—well, they had started, and they would not turn back. But Bill secretly wondered at the courage of the boy who rode beside him—and envied him when he could not keep a bit of a shiver from running up and down his own spine.

His thoughts were interrupted by Ted's low cry. Ted was a little ahead of Bill, and he suddenly jumped to the ground and bent over.

"Look, Bill," he cried, in an awed voice, "the automobile tracks end here."

Bill was on his feet now, and he, too, scanned the road. And sure enough, the tracks curved sharply into the bank beside the road and were no more! He looked up at Ted, his face paling.

"What—?"

"They must have turned around," whispered Ted. "See—the tracks go in and then out. And—yes, the wheel-marks we were following were double all the way. I hadn't noticed that before. The car came up here, turned around and then went out again."

"How far is it to the mine now?" asked Bill, in a hushed tone.

"Not very far. I think the hole starts just past that next bend. They probably came this far and walked the rest of the way, and the car drove away. Maybe the kidnapers went back to town to see about a ransom."

The boys stood silent, looking up the road. Only a few yards more, but—

"Well, let's leave our bikes here and walk the rest of the way," said Ted, breaking the silence. "We can sneak through the woods and get a look first."

They leaned their bicycles against a large tree a short distance from the road and started quietly up the steep slope, making as little noise as possible as they pushed through the underbrush. The bushes and twigs were not dry at this time of year and did not crack, but the leaves that had rested on the ground since the autumn before, rustled sharply as they stole along.

The opening to the mine—a mere hole in the side of the hill just past a level spot that was covered with black dust and brown gravel—burst upon their gaze as they pushed aside the branches of a thick bush. There it was—the place of mystery to which they had come—foolishly, perhaps, but at any rate, bravely.

"There don't seem to be any one around," whispered Ted, after a moment's glance at the opening. "And I don't see, from here, any footprints in the gravel. Do you—do you suppose we'd better go in?"

Bill swallowed a lump in his throat. "I don't want to," he said finally.

"Well, neither do I," said Ted, "but I hate to come this far and then not find out. Just think—she might be hidden in there, Bill, and we could find her. Come on—let's take a chance. I'm not scared if you're not."

Bill was a little bit flattered because Ted had put the question up to him. He pushed down his fear.

"All right. Come on. I'll go first."

"No," answered Ted. "I'll go first. Give me the flashlight."

Slowly the two boys emerged from the thicket ad crept up to the door of the mine. A heavy timber across the top of the opening was just high enough for them to walk upright under it. Ted flashed the light into the doorway. The passage extended, dark and foreboding, for a few yards, then turned abruptly to the left.

Ted, reaching behind to clasp Bill's hand, started in. The silence was so deadly that it seemed to ring in their ears. Softly, quietly, they approached the curve. Just as Ted stepped around it, his light shining on the dark low wall before him, there was a sudden "W-h-r-rr!" and something soft and black struck him full in the face.

With a yell of terror he sprang back. The light fell clattering to the floor of the mine and went out.

"It was only a bat!" gasped Bill, recovering his voice. Ted had loosened his hand, and both boys stood trembling in the darkness.

"I've got to get the light," whispered Ted. He leaned forward and groped about the floor, but could not find it. Around the corner the feeble rays of daylight which filtered into the shaft were lost in inky blackness. The floor of the mine at this point was slippery and wet, and the soft drip of water from the ceiling could be heard in the silence.

Ted, still unable to find the light, took a step forward, bending as he went. Suddenly his foot encountered something that felt like the case of the flashlight. He bent forward, and then—

Somehow he lost his footing on the slippery floor. He fell, started to slip, and with a rush found himself sliding faster and faster down a steep, wet incline.

He gave one scream which was blotted out to Bill's horrified ears by a loud splash. Seconds later Bill, crouching in agony against the wall of the shaft above, heard another splash and then came Ted's voice.

"Bill!"

"Yes, Ted! Where are you? Are you all right?"

"Yes. I slid down a steep slope into the water. It's deep, too—keep back or you'll fall in."

Ted's voice reassured Bill. Surely no kidnapers were here, no matter what other dangers there were. "Come back, Ted," he cried, his voice a little stronger.

"I can't," came Ted's answer. "This is a big hole down here. I swam up on a rock and I'm out of the water, but I can't get out. It's too slippery and steep. Gosh, that water is like ice."

"What'll I do?" Bill was alarmed now over the plight of his friend.

"Get a rope," called Ted. "I guess you'll have to ride back to that farmhouse at the end of the road. And hurry, it's dark and cold down here."

"I'll hurry," answered Bill. "Don't be scared—I'll be back in a jiffy. So long."

"So long."

Bill turned, stumbled from the shaft, and dashed down the grade to his bicycle. Fear for his friend gave wings to his feet. In a minute he was in the saddle and pedalling recklessly down the road.

That road was never intended for the kind of riding that Bill was doing. Low in the saddle, his coaster brake forgotten, he reeled down the rough road, bouncing from rut to rut and taking the curves so low that his knees scraped the daisies in the ditch.

He saw a big root that projected across the road just a second too late. He swerved his wheel sharply, hit the root a glancing blow, and crashed head on into a tree. His arm went up to save him, but his head hit the trunk as he fell over the handle bars, and he crumped up at the foot of the tree, dazed and half unconscious.

Picnic Luncheon Sets of Gay Crepe That Are Fun to Make and to Use

Summer picnics in the woods will be joyful, but a dainty luncheon set which can be made from a small piece of Japanese crepe will make them even more cheerful, and will add a touch of color when you set your sandwiches and salad out under the trees.

The cloth and four napkins require 1 1-4 yards of Japanese crepe, 36 inches wide. Any gay color will do. Figure 1 shows the piece of crepe in the proper size, with drawn threads marking the 36-inch square for the picnic cloth and the four 9-inch squares for the napkins. Cut on the lines of the drawn threads. Figure 2 shows the 36-inch square with two threads drawn out, 2 1-4 inches from the edge on all four sides. Overcast in black embroidery floss all around the square in the drawn spaces, then ravel the threads away all around the square, leaving a 2 1-2 inch border of fringe. Figure 3 shows the fringed edge on the large square.

Make the napkins (Figure 4) by the same directions used for the picnic cloth, making the fringe 1 inch instead of 2 1-2 inches. Then decorate the corners of the cloth with three contrasting colors of any wash material by cutting one circle 2 inches in diameter, one 1 inch in diameter, and one triangular piece. Arrange these three shapes as in Figure 5, basting them down and making blanket stitching around them in black. For the napkins, a 1-inch circle and a small triangle should be used.

Egypt Originated Strange Burials

The Egyptians were good ones for thinking up spooky stories. One of their ideas was that a man's tomb was inhabited by his double, or soul, so they put all his most cherished possessions into his grave in order that he might still use them when he wished.

Jewish tombs built later are hewn out of rock, and Roman tombs were often merely niches in a great stone. The whole family would be buried in the same fragment of rock just as our families are sometimes buried in the family lot or vault. Many of these were found along the streets of Rome when excavations were made.

In the Middle Ages the custom of burying people in churches became popular, and the church graveyard is an outgrowth of this habit. One tomb in the United States which might attract any admiration is the one erected for Gen. U. S. Grant on Riverside drive in New York city.

The Red Grange of Dogland

Lots of dogs play with a ball, but Charles Murphy, Jr., of Nashville, Tennessee, has one that is a star football player. His name is Babe, and he is a bull dog just a year old. Babe is a cherished member of the neighborhood football team. If one of the boys kicks the ball to him, he grabs it by the lacings and "runs through." And, says Charles, he is a pretty hard quarter-back to tackle. Babe is a good defensive player, too. His method of tackling is to grab the boy with the ball by the sleeve, and he holds on with all his might. When the boys choose up sides to play football, every one of them wants to have Babe on his team.

Bob and Biddy, Playmates

A pair of chickens, Bob, a rooster, and Biddy, a hen, are the pets of Elmer Saylor of Sioux Falls, South Dakota. When Elmer sits down the two chickens always come and perch on his lap or shoulders. Naturally, Elmer thinks that his are just about the best chickens in the world.

Enter Mr. Collie!

The collie dog of John Smith, Shelbyville, Tennessee, does one trick that in itself entitles him to be admitted to the Society of Smart Dogs—if there is such a society. When this dog wishes to get in the house, he stands on his hind feet and rings the door bell. And he certainly ought to get in, if he does that. John describes his collie as having a white nose and a white ring around his neck.

HARDY, THE FAMED NOVELIST, STILL HAS POETIC AMBITIONS

It seems rather strange when a man who has won world-wide recognition in one line of work tells us, as he nears the close of life, that he would have preferred to have done some other work during all those years. Yet such is the case of Thomas Hardy, who, still alive at the age of 86, has enjoyed the highest literary fame in England for many years.

Recently Hardy published a book of poems, and he has declared that, while his fame has been won as a writer of prose novels, he always wanted to be a poet. In fact, about 1855 he first began writing verse, and it was good verse, too. But circumstances forced him into the profession of architecture, in which he won instant recognition.

He might have continued as an architect and become famous in that line, had not a story which he had written been read by the famous novelist, George Meredith. Meredith saw his ability, and after strong urging, persuaded Hardy to write novels. His first one appears in 1870, and for the next 25 years he continued to write books that were masterpieces in their field.

Then, having won fame in this branch of literature, the old lure of poetry again returned to Hardy. Since then he has written much verse, and it is so good that we realize that its author, besides being a great novelist, might have been a great poet—and a great architect. Yet it was necessary for him to confine his efforts to one thing in order to attain success, and it is only because fortune has been kind to him that he has been allowed additional years of life which, having done his real work, he can use in writing the poetry that he loves.

THE LETTER WRITERS' CLUB

AUGUSTA, GA.

Good Morning Kids: Here I am again. There is no one here but me and I had nothing to do so I am writing this letter. Well, did I say I was the only one here? Well, I'm not right. Why our dog is here with me old kid. Well, what do you know about this? I surely do forget easy. Why, I never did tell you my name. It is John Robinson Bell. Do any of you remember me? Well, I have not been telling you hardly a thing, so I will tell you something. My birthday is the fourth of July. Guess what mama and daddy said they would give me for a present. You could never guess. Why, they said they would take five dollars and buy me about a two-dollar watch. Then they would take three dollars left over and give it to me in cash. Then I would ask all the others in the family to give me just money. Then with the three dollars that mama and daddy gave me and that that the others gave me I can buy me a toy steam roller. Won't that be a happy birthday?

Write back to me.

Your friend,
JOHN R. BELL.

A Fascinating New Serial

By John T. McCutcheon

INSTALLMENT XVII.

In Which a Holdup Occurs.

ALTHOUGH Rasher recognized the man as one of the three who had been acting suspiciously at the last stopping place, there was still a a chance that his intentions might be innocent. Consequently he waited as the muffled, dripping figure approached the car. Rasher noted that while one hand was gesticulating the other remained in the side pocket of his coat.

"I'm out o' gas," shouted the man, above the storm. "Can you help me out with a coupla gallons so I can get to the next filling station?" This remark convinced Rasher. It was a holdup. He recalled the extra tins of gasoline the man's car had taken on at the last stop, an amount which could not have been used.

"Where's your car?" asked Rasher, sparring for time. "I can give you a tow."

"I'm headed the other way."

Mrs. Crayton cried out impatiently from within, "Drive on, chauffeur. We're very late already."

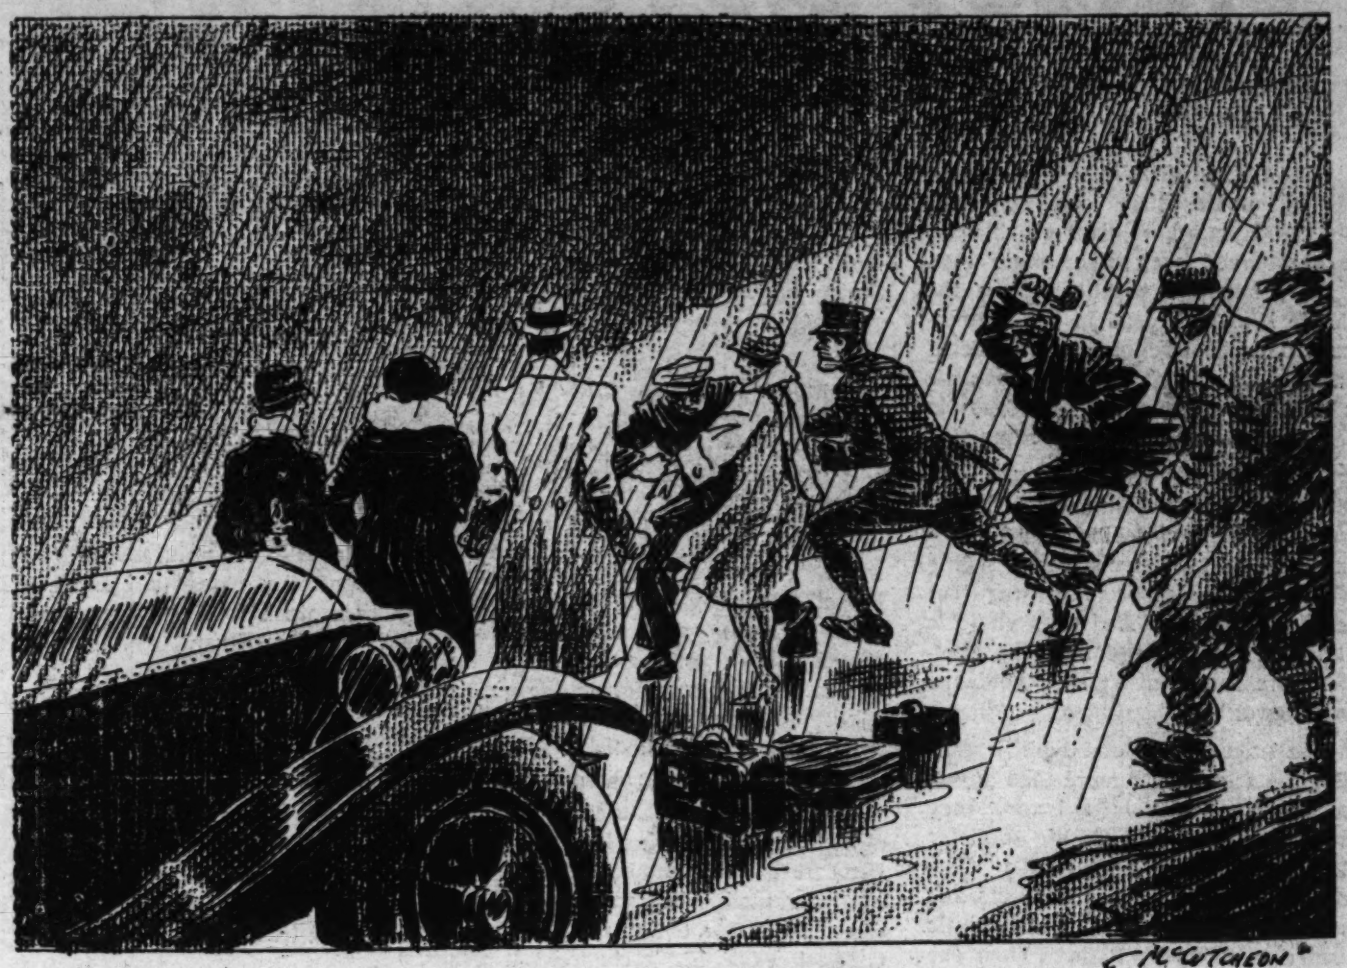

The man's manner instantly changed. The delay caused by this short interchange of remarks was enough for his purpose. Two other men, who had emerged unseen from the bushes by the roadside, now came up from behind the Crayton car. Both carried automatics. The shorter of these two now assumed command.

"Hop out, all of you," he ordered, "and make it damned lively, too."

Mrs. Crayton screamed. "O, why did that stupid chauffeur stop in this lonely place?"

"I think he's in collusion with them," cried Count de Barsac, excitedly. "It's a——"

"Shut up! Can that chatter! Here, all of you line up with your backs to me. If any one makes a sound it'll be your last."

Rasher turned and leaped upon the man.

"He's been shot!" she cried.

Under the menace of the pistol the party scrambled out of the car—Virginia white-faced but composed, Mrs. Crayton on the verge of collapse, the count greatly agitated. Celeste, the maid, was trembling, but was trying to control her nerves.

The bandits worked swiftly and with method. One tapped Rasher's pockets and found him unarmed. The short man, who had assumed leadership, threw out of the car two or three small bags that may have contained valuables. The third, a big, florid-faced man, walked a few steps down the road, where he listened intently for the sound of any approaching car. There was no sound except the swish of the leaves and the steady downpour of rain. Occasionally a clap of thunder came with startling suddenness.

Satisfied that they would have a few uninterrupted moments, he returned, and as another crash of thunder came he fired two shots through the gasoline tank. In a few minutes the tank would be empty.

"Now, lady, fork over that necklace and those bracelets!" As Virginia, with hands shaking, fumbled with the clasps, the leader, with an oath of impatience, tore her hand away and jerked the necklace from her throat. Thrusting it in his pocket, he then seized her arm roughly and began to tear at the bracelets. Virginia uttered a cry of pain, and with no thought of consequences Rasher turned and leaped upon the man, overthrowing him. There was a shot and Rasher felt a hot, burning blow on his shoulder; an instant later something heavy struck him on his head and he crumpled in the roadway.

"The damned fool!" muttered the man behind. "Hurry; we've got to get out of this!" Mrs. Crayton was screaming, hysterically indifferent to the threats of the bandits. The count, who had not yet been searched, was talking excitedly in French.

The bandits, seizing the small bags and now in a state of feverish haste, rushed up the hill, and a moment or two later came the sound of a car starting. Virginia was bending over Rasher, whose head was bleeding and whose body lay so ominously inert in the roadway.

"He's been shot!" she cried. It was her first adventure, and, curiously enough, in the face of a crisis she arose to the occasion. "Quick, Celeste; some water!" She didn't know what to do, but she felt the urgent necessity of doing something. The count now hurried to her side and pressed a small flask of brandy to Rasher's lips.

"Brave, but foolish," he muttered. "It was fool-hardy to resist armed men without a weapon." Even in that moment, when clear thinking was impossible, Virginia suddenly recalled that the count had mentioned having his own pistol, the pistol that had not been in evidence during the moments of its necessity.

"He heard me cry out!" she exclaimed. "He saw the man was hurting me."

"Ah, yes, dear lady, but there are times when discretion is the better part of valor. There are times for action and there are times for restraint. He was foolish to resist."

"The count is perfectly right, Virginia," sobbed Mrs. Crayton. "His foolish resistance might have cost us all our lives."

It was on Virginia's lips to retort that Rasher's foolishness had saved her mother the loss of her valuables, but she pressed her lips tight together and remained silent.

The count gently turned Rasher over and unbuttoned his blouse. A small dark stain was spreading across his shirt front. "Shot through the shoulder," said the count. "It may not be serious." He deftly tied his perfumed handkerchief around Rasher's head. "We must get him in the car and reach the next town as quickly as possible. I think I can drive it."

Rasher was lifted into the front seat and the count took the wheel. All efforts to start the car brought forth only the futile whirring of the self-starter. There was no gasoline.

An examination of the car revealed the punctured tank, now dry. Mrs. Crayton was moaning incoherently in the back seat. Virginia was the first to act.

"Give me your pistol, count. I'll fire some shots. Perhaps we may attract attention." De Barsac flushed uncomfortably as he produced the pistol.

"I was just going to suggest it," he said, and leaning from the car window he fired three or four shots in rapid succession.

After a long wait a farmerish looking man appeared. A dog trotted by his side. In his hands was a rifle. After a pause to reassure himself, he hurried down the incline toward the stranded car.

"We've been held up," cried Virginia. "Our chauffeur's been shot and we must get to a doctor immediately. Our car is wrecked."

The man gazed open-eyed at the collapsed figure of Rasher and then started to inspect the damage to the car. Virginia cried out impatiently.

A farmerish looking man appeared.

"Haven't you a car, or can't you get one quick?" she asked. "Or a doctor, at once?"

"I'll get my team," the man suggested, "and get you up to my house. It's only half a mile away. We can telephone for a doctor, but it will take him a right smart time to git here."

"I insist upon going straight on into town," exclaimed Mrs. Crayton.

Latest Lovely Victim Of Paris

Strangely Tragic End of Wanda Sylvano and the Appalling Facts It Reveals About the Alarming Spread of the Deadly Dope Habit

BY CARL DE VIDAL HUNT.

PARIS.

WANDA SYLVANO, beautiful movie star, and Gabrielle Hyvrard, brilliant girl lawyer, loved each other more than fame or wealth. Now the blonde Wanda is dead in her sumptuous villa at Courbevoie, just outside of Paris, while the dark-haired Gabrielle is lingering between life and death in her luxurious apartment near the Palace of Justice.

A woman known among the night crowds of Montmartre as "Phiphine" is under arrest on the charge of selling Wanda the brain-poisoning drug that caused her death. And somewhere in Paris is a German diplomat whose letters were found in Wanda's gold and ivory jewel box.

The tragedy of Courbevoie is puzzling the Paris police more than any in recent years. Wanda Sylvano, they ascertained, had lived the life of Victor Margueritte's heroine in "La Garconne." She had many admirers and several lovers among the aristocratic foreigners living in Paris. Then she met Gabrielle, the young girl attorney, whose eyes could be soft and pleading when she wanted to win, or flash threateningly when her passion was aroused.

Shortly after that meeting the friends of Wanda began to wonder what strange infatuation had taken possession of the girl's heart. She began to shun her friends in society and her pals among the stage folk. Instead she would be seen in queer places around Montmartre, where young women strut about in masculine attire or soft mannered young men dress up as women —paint, powder and all. And always her new friend, Gabrielle, was with her. They were inseparable.

It was at that time, about two years ago, that Wanda was introduced to an elderly diplomat of great wealth. This man, who is known in every fashionable watering place on the continent, has a princely title. He had seen Wanda in the film "La Garconne" when it was shown in Berlin and had immediately set out to find her. Her sweet face and golden blonde hair had stirred him beyond all control. He promised himself to locate the girl if it cost half his fortune. A month or so later he met her in Paris.

Wanda, whose real name was Germain Fouilleul, was the only daughter of a plain, hard-working Frenchwoman. Her career was a remarkable one. She always wanted to be an actress and one day the director of the famous Grand Guignol gave her a chance. It was there that Sarah Bernhardt noticed her and prophesied a brilliant future for her.

But Wanda soon gave up the stage. She hated the blood curdling melodrama of the Grand Guignol and turned to the movies where she hoped to win the world with her bright eyes and shimmering hair. At once she was successful. Had she appeared in American films her fame wouuld have been world-wide.

Wanda loved luxury. But she was a wise young girl. She did not throw her money out of the windows. She bought real estate in the suburbs of Paris. One of her acquisitions was the pretty villa at 18 Rue Victor Hugo in Courbevoie. She was living there when she met the German diplomat. Her mother occupied a little pavilion, cozily furnished, in the park surrounding the villa.

Gabrielle lived in the villa part of the time. She was miserable and unhappy when Wanda was out of her sight.

The German diplomat with all his money had no effect upon Wanda's heart. His love for the girl went unreciprocated, judging from some of the letters found at the villa after Wanda's tragic death. One of these missives, couched in excellent French, said:

"Dearest little pig:

"I should never write to you or see you again after your mysterious behavior of last night. Why do you laugh when I seriously offer you my heart and everything I possess? Is it that fake paradise you are living in after the drugs? Is it Gabrielle that rules your heart and body so you must do only what she likes? Let me take you away somewhere, to Sicily or Maderia, where you can breathe the fresh air of the sea and forget Montmartre and its deadly associations. LEOPOLD."

It looked like a sincere offer on the part of the elder nobleman. But Wanda stuck to Montmartre and Gabrielle. Occasionally she accepted the company of "Leopold." On one occasion, at Deauville, she even gave a dinner to the elite of fashionable actresses and boulevardiers, disclosing the crest of her princely "protector" upon the table linen he had given her, and drinking a hilarious toast "to her most intimate enemy." Leopold blushed with pleasure and Wanda kissed him on the forehead. That was all.

The night she was up in Montmartre again with Gabrielle. They went to a flat occupied by a demure little woman named Josephine Dufayet, better known as "Phiphine" among those who cannot subsist without the quaint little boxes of white powder she sells for English and American gold. Phiphine is well known to the detectives in the vice squads of Montmartre. But they had never been able to get her with "the goods."

The visits of Wanda to Phiphine's flat became more and more frequent. Her work as a movie actress was more and more neglected. Gradually the poisonous dust she sniffed from the tip of her thumb nail dulled her mind and weakened her body. She had no more energy to attend to her affairs. Then came the tragedy.

Wanda was in the habit of retiring long after midnight and rising late in the day. Her mother, therefore was not particularly anxious when, on Wednesday, she failed to see her daughter around luncheon time. But about 1 o'clock she heard the telephone ring in the villa. It rang persistently for fifteen minutes. This seemed singular to the mother who then decided to knock at the daughter's bedroom door.

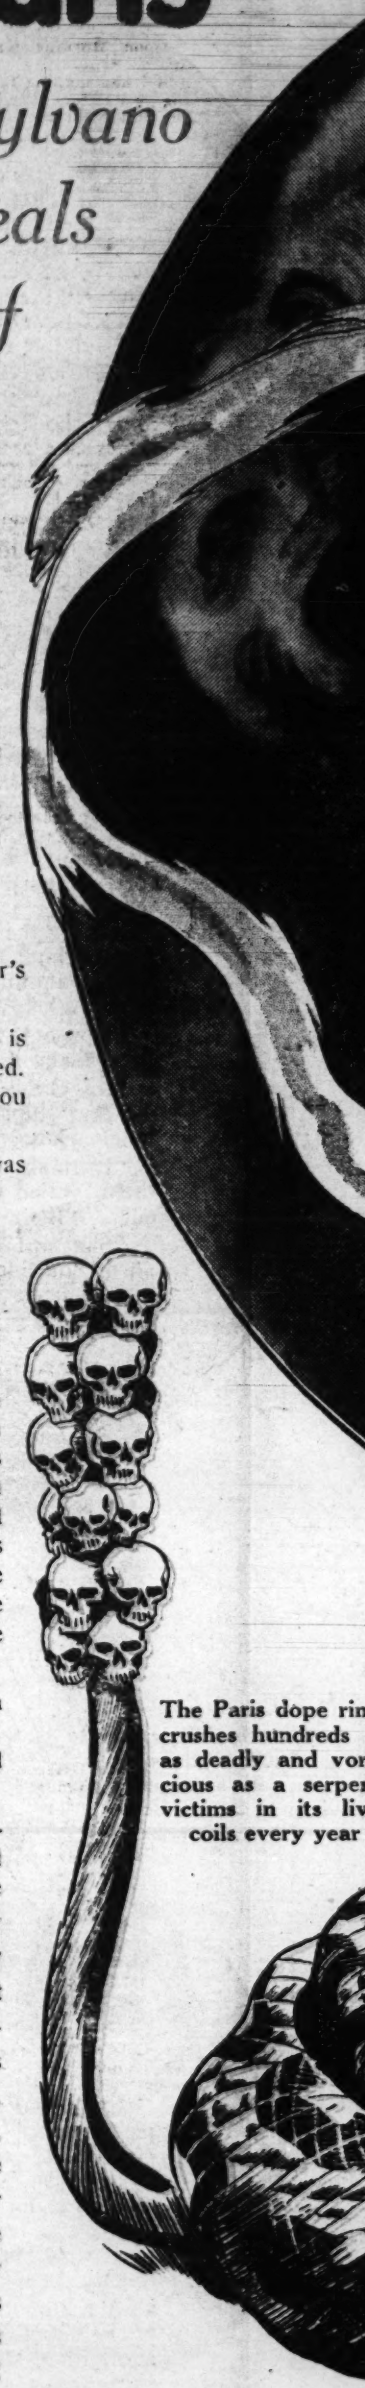

"The phone is ringing," she called. "Answer me, are you ill?"

At last the key was turned inside the door. But instead of her daughter there appeared before her the pallid face of Gabrielle Hyvrard. The young woman seemed in an agony. She was dressed in a thin night gown and her hand was clutching the heavy portiere that masked the door.

"I am sick, I am dying," she moaned, and fell in a heap.

Quickly Madame Fouilleul rushed into the room and threw open the window curtain to admit the daylight. Turning around she was struck with horror. Upon the rug, leaning against the foot of the center table, was the dead body of her daughter. Bottles and small packets that had contained poisonous drugs were upon the table.

M. Vanegue, the district commissary of police, found the little gold and ivory casket containing the inti-

Mlle. Gabrielle Hyvrard eventually recovered enough to make the following statement:

"Tuesday at six o'clock I came to see Wanda. A little while later we left in her auto to take dinner at a restaurant in the Champs Elysees. After that we went to a theater in the Rue Douai. At midnight we drove to a cabaret in Montmartre and had a bottle of champagne. In another 'boite de nuit' we had more champagne and between two and three o'clock we drove home to Wanda's villa in Courbevoie.

"We went immediately to bed, but soon afterward I felt Wanda's arm around me and heard her say she was ill. I felt ill myself and told her so. Had we been poisoned? I did not know.

"Anyhow, my friend got up and opened a small drawer in her writing table. She took out some bottles and paper boxes and spilled some white powder on her thumb nail. She inhaled the powder like snuff and made me take some, too. We hoped that the powder would do us good and stop our intense suffering."

Gabrielle Hyvrard is one of the most promising women members of the French bar. The statement she made was all she was able or willing to say, but the authorities ascertained that both young women had been addicted to drugs for some time.

The authorities are now trying to solve the mystery of their strange love and the direct cause of beautiful Wanda's death. Was it a love pact and intended double suicide? Did the young women tire of the "artificial paradise" of violent drugs and the nerve-racking life of Montmartre? Or was it an accident?

Wholesale raids by the Paris police upon the notorious joints of Montmartre and the Helles district have followed the death of Wanda Sylvano and have revealed a dope ring with the most perfectly organized system of cocaine selling in the world. The raids brought out such a ghastly picture of crime and moral dissolution that even the hardened member of the police de surete were filled with horror.

It was shown that most of the cocaine is smuggled into France from Germany by way of Italy and Switzerland.

Three Italians under arrest have made millions in providing society women and men with the deadly drug.

Such places as "Le Cjien quie Fume," the "Vallee de Chevreuse" and "Le Pere Denis" were revealed to be perfect infernos of drug dissipation. Even a French gendarme was arrested on the charge of promiting the sale of cocaine.

nmis- gold e inti- mate correspondence of Wanda. Some of the letters were from "Phipine" and her arrest followed. The letters from the German diplomat constituted only a very friendly correspondence. Later the solicitor of the re public started an investigation. This judiciary inquest brutally laid bare the love life of the two young women.

What Has Happened to Justice

Murder of Fritzi Mann Unsolved—Hollywood Night Life Gave No Clews to Mystery

She was beautiful with the beauty of the Orient. Yet she was American enough, was Fritzi Mann. Had she been less beautiful, had that curved body of hers held less allure for men, there would have been here no tale to tell, no tragedy to relate.

For even as Fritzi Mann danced her way into the hearts of her audience she no less danced her way into the hearts of individual admirers.

When strangers found her almost nude body lying on the wave-lapped sands near La Jolla, Cal., they did not then realize they were witnesses to a story of laughter and frivolity, of gayety and wild abandon behind which ran a rising flood of tears.

Who killed Fritzi Mann?

Why was she slain?

She had harmed no one. Indeed, the world had injured her. Just prior to her strange end it was known she was about to become mother of a child whose father was not known.

The case has been filed among the other mysteries clogging police calendars and there it lies to be soon forgotten.

Who killed Fritzi Mann?

It is more than three years since the almost nude body of the beautiful dancer was found on the beach near La Jolla, Cal. And no one has paid for the crime.

Usually justice has little trouble in tracking down the man in a case where a girl has been wronged. Usually there are a wealth of clews to point out the logical person to blame for her condition. In this case, however, the law encountered many men. After her murder the police found the cards of fourteen men in the girl's vanity case.

Suspicion fastened first upon a doctor the girl had known. He told the police Miss Mann had asked him to perform an operation, and he had denied her plea. She had confessed to him that she had secretly married a movie actor two days before, he said. But he could not name the actor. The doctor was finally tried, twice. The second time he won an acquittal.

But justice looked in vain for some one to punish.

ON THE afternoon of January 14, 1923, Fritzi Mann, cafe dancer and follower of the bright lights of San Diego and Hollywood, left her home in San Diego and walked to a street car with her mother. She said she was going to the depot to meet a friend on the 6:30 train. She parted with her mother, and, a short time later, called her on the telephone and told her the party which she had planned to attend would be held at La Jolla instead of Del Mar, where it had originally been planned.

Her movements thereafter were only partially revealed.

A. E. Kern, proprietor of the Blue Sea cottage at La Jolla, declared he recognized the girl who registered at his place with a man as Fritzi Mann, the dancer. The man, he said, signed himself as Alvin Johnson. They registered as man and wife, giving their address as Los Angeles.

Again the cloak of mystery shadows a tragic interval. Who was the man with whom Fritzi Mann registered as wife? Was it the man who later was to murder her?

The following morning after the dancer and her strange escort had presumably passed the night in each other's company, strollers on the beach eleven miles from the inn stumbled across the body of a beautiful girl. She lay stretched on a blanket face upward. She had been dead several hours. Only a silken chemise partly hid the body. She had on black silk stockings and satin shoes. That was all.

Not Suicide.

The coroner was notified and the machinery of the law swung slowly into motion.

First it was necessary to establish the fact that the girl had not committed suicide, that she had been murdered.

A bell boy named Gourand declared at the coroner's inquest that he had been among the first to see the body and that he had noticed the ground marked with evidences of a struggle at a spot where it was later believed the murderer had thrown the body over a cliff into the ocean.

An autopsy next revealed evidence that the girl had been first brutally beaten. A clot of blood was found under the head and blood had flowed from her mouth. At this time it was revealed the girl was about to become a mother. Another cut was over her right eye. The coroner declared it murder.

That much established, the next thing to do was to find the slayer. The girl numbered many men among her list of friends. Detectives, seeking to question fourteen persons whose cards were found in the victim's vanity case, discovered all had left town.

Doctor's Story.

The first break came when an army surgeon, Dr. Louis L. Jacobs, came forward with the information that the girl, a friend of his, had visited him a few days previously and told him she was in trouble. She asked him to assist her, he said, to perform an illegal operation. He declined to do so.

The next day police found letters written to the girl by Dr. Jacobs and twenty-four hours afterward he was in jail. Jacobs began fighting. A few days later he went free on a writ of habeas corpus. But in the meantime the grand jury had met and after considering the case returned an indictment charging the surgeon with the murder of Fritzi Mann.

Immediately Jacobs' family, residing at Baltimore, Md., established a large fund to be used in his defense. The best counsel obtainable on the Pacific coast was retained and the battle began.

In the meantime two girl friends of Fritzi Mann had come forward with their stories. One, Miss Ethel Whitney, declared the dancer had spent the Saturday preceding her death with her.

Miss Mann, she said, was expecting a party of motion picture people Sunday for a house party at Del Mar. The house party did not materialize, but, it was said, a friend of Fritzi Mann's came from Los Angeles to San Diego alone, driving a closed roadster.

Who was the mysterious friend? Police Chief Patrick, of Los Angeles, believed for a time that in the finding of that friend lay the solution of the murder. Here was the most fleeting incident in the whole drama, an incident filled with dark possibilities. The stranger driving in from the night, alone, meeting the girl. The body of the girl found the next day. The stranger vanished.

Detectives worked on the clew night and day. No trace of the stranger, of his car, of his movements could be found.

Back to Dr. Jacobs. Not satisfied with his story that he had no knowledge of the dancer's movements on the day of her murder, police dug deeper into his relationship with the girl.

Dressed in the same suit he had been known to wear on Sunday he was taken to the Blue Sea cottage and presented to the proprietor. Kern was not sure the doctor was the man. He might have been and again he might not. The "might not" was the stronger belief.

Fritzi Mann, the murdered dancer

Once more the doctor spoke. This time he admitted the dancer had confessed to him she had been secretly married to a film actor of Hollywood two days before her death. He could not name the actor.

Two Alibis.

Next one William Ryan, barber of San Diego, told a story of having passed a closed car at the top of a hill near Torrey Pines, adjacent to the beach where the body was found, and of hearing a couple inside, a man and a woman, quarreling furiously. Act-

No. 21—The Story of Fritzi Mann ing on the information, police discovered a bloodstained car with the windshield broken.

The following day they took into custody Rogers V. B. Clark, motion picture director. His car was declared to have been found stained with blood, the dash scratched, as though some one had kicked it several times, and a large dent in the rear end as though it had been over rocks such as found near Torrey Pines.

Letters found among the dead girl's effects, police said, indicated that Clark might have been responsible for the dancer's delicate condition.

Questioned, Clark denied all knowledge of the crime or that he had been over-friendly with the girl.

The police found the threads they had so carefully woven soon entangled. Denials were showering from all sides. Kern could not say Clark was the man who came to his cottage with the girl. He looked like him, indeed, but that was not sufficient. Jacobs was building an ironclad alibi. Clark did the same. The case was assuming all the aspects of a dime novel thriller in which every one is accused until the final chapter.

All Indefinite.

Many things pointed to Dr. Jacobs. Many things pointed to Clark,

Dr. Louis L. Jacobs Rogers V. B. Clark
Two men suspected and released in Mann murder case but the fingers wavered while pointing. Nothing was definite.

The Jacobs-Mann case came up for trial in March of 1923. The girl had been murdered in January. Mrs. Mann, mother of the dead girl, came with the victim's youthful brother to be a witness at the trial. Mrs. Rosa De Cacheo, neighbor of the dancer, came too. There was nothing startling in the proceedings and the jury ended in disagreement. Again the army surgeon was placed before 12 of his peers and this time the verdict was definite. It was the hand of circumstance vainly beating against an unshakable alibi and the alibi won. On the jury were four women and eight men.

Clark, in the meantime, was free, his alibi perfect. The case became a mystery deeper than ever.

But with all the alibis, with all the verdicts and with all the denials, the fact remained that somebody had murdered Fritzi Mann. Justice looked in vain for someone to punish.

Down went the police into the night life of Hollywood, down into the brilliant cafes, and roadhouses, the dope dens. Everywhere it was possible to find a clew, they sought. Rich men and gay men were questioned. Their friends of the evening were questioned and their movements checked.

Her Male Acquaintances.

Fritzi, who had danced her way to fame in the cafes of southern California, had friends, men friends, for the most part. One prominent San Diego citizen was questioned by the police. He was said to have been with a girl registered at a Los Angeles hotel. There had been a commotion in the room the pair occupied and the man had been requested by the house detective to leave. The man was married and quite respectable. The girl was just Fritzi.

The girl's mother at her funeral muttered the name of a man she said was the slayer of her daughter. This dramatic utterance, which should have, by every previous experience, produced a tremendous effect and helped clear the way, slipped by with passing mention and vanished in thin air.

Into the dope dens went the police, this time seeking a woman known to be a drug addict. Sergt. Chadwick of the Los Angeles police declared he did not think Fritzi Mann an addict herself, but she was acquainted with people who were. Nothing there.

Miss Dorothy Armstrong, another dancer and friend of Fritzi's, threw a doubt on the murder theory when she declared Miss Mann had told her, after reading in a newspaper of an unmarried girl who had killed herself because she was about to become a mother, that she, too, would do the same thing under the same circumstances.

One of Many Theories.

One of the strongest theories was that Fritzi Mann, who admittedly loved the gay parties of Hollywood, had gone to the Blue Sea cottage with a friend to stage a party, that she had there become intoxicated, had quarreled with her escort, wandered away half clad into the night and had fallen over the cliff to her death.

But the doctors laughed at the theory. Murder, they said, and murder it remained.

Dr. Jacobs, following his acquittal, left the city in company with Louis Shapiro, his cousin, and Mrs. Shapiro, on a trip to Honolulu. So far as can be ascertained, he has never returned to San Diego. What has become of him, the once prosperous surgeon, is a matter of conjecture.

Dorothy Armstrong

Mrs. Mann, the mother, harrowed by the experiences through which she had been and helpless to aid in any further search for her girl's murderer, left San Diego with her young son. She, too, so far as is known, has dropped from the tragic scene never to return.

Drop From Scene.

Fritzi Mann is dead. Well, what of it? A butterfly simmered in the tallow of its candle. A dancer, an entertainer who will no longer entertain.

But it does not matter. Justice demands an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth, the blood of the slayer to wash away the blood of the victim.

So with the case of Fritzi Mann. A young, beautiful girl, scarce 20 years of age, fresh on the threshold of a brilliant career, tossed about as the plaything of men and of fate, warm, joyous, vibrant. Then dead on a shore that cannot tell its tale of tragedy.

The principals are scattered. The wheels of justice grind solemnly on and the pages of history are turned.

of men and women trampling each other down, each for himself. No, no, they might deride her altar as they would—surely it was better than that. Maisie's generation might refuse to light its sacred fires; her own generation might forswear them; but for those few who still believed there could be no forsaking of them. And if they were worth lighting at all, she saw with new vision, the torch must be carried proudly, triumphantly, not by crushed and embittered victims, but by victors, glorying in a chance for greatness.

She returned so uplifted with this viewpoint that she could smile with unaffected pleasure upon the doctor's unflagging attentions to Maisie; so uplifted that she could even meet dauntlessly Mrs. Johnson's dreadful news, devastating to her new hopes.

"I wouldn't let Maisie play around the way she's doing with that doctor, Madame Malpin. You know, of course, he's married."

Madame Malpin's look of horror was all Mrs. Johnson had anticipated.

"Married and going to stay so, he says. His wife ran away years ago with a naval officer and he won't give her a divorce, though she's begged and begged him for one, they say. She's still living with the other man. The doctor's going to pay her back, Mrs. Reynolds—that's his housekeeper—heard him say once, if it takes him to the end of his life—her and any other woman he could hurt, into the bargain. His women patients are always getting crazy about him, Mrs. Reynolds says, and he throws 'em down like a ton of bricks. She's heard him say the only way you can hurt women is through their vanity."

Through Mary McAlpin's complex feminine heart flashed a spark of irrepressible pride that he had not been able to do that to at least one woman. It was quenched in a moment in the thought of what this revelation must mean to Maisie.

Maisie, however, as usual remained mistress of the situation when her mother had summoned sufficient courage to tell her what she had learned.

"Have you just heard that?" Maisie queried, continuing with steady fingers to manipulate her curling iron. "I found it out two days after I met him."

"And have been accepting his attentions just the same?"

"Now, look here," Maisie whirled vehemently around upon her. "Supposing you let me manage this little affair, mother. I'm going to marry him. Do you hear me? I'm going to marry him, but I've got to go at it in my own way, and that won't be yours, needless to say. He's going to want me so bad before he gets through with me that he'll be willing to divorce fifty wives to get me. As yet he doesn't know that, but he's going to if I have to live with him first to make him. You just wait. And while you're waiting, don't talk more about it. I won't hear another word."

Useless, indeed, to add another word, her mother knew, when Maisie was in that mood. Useless also to try to appeal to a man who loved to hurt women. She dared not unburden her heart even to Neil.

In the midst of her anguished perplexity she opened a box in the closet and came unexpectedly upon the blue waist the doctor had prescribed what seemed a century ago.

A long time she stood staring down at it. Then she lifted it from its wrappings.

She was wearing it when Dr. Sutherland appeared that evening. She did not look up from her work, and sensed rather than saw his start of surprise.

"What!" he demanded. "Can it be that the priestess has doffed the vestal garments—played hookey from the altar?"

Always slow of speech, Mary could find no words for repartee. To add to the bitterness of her humiliation, she could feel a hot blush flaming over her face and neck. She did not know whether it was generosity or guile which made him drop suddenly his bantering tone.

"Some fresh air goes with that prescription of the blue waist," he suggested rather hurriedly. "How about a ride tonight?"

As she rose in mute acquiescence he called back to the gay greeting Maisie had halloed from the dining room: "I'm taking your mother out for a little spin. You children ought to see that she gets out more. She can't go on like this forever."

Maisie was waiting for her mother when she got back, nearly two hours later, from her ride. The doctor had left her at the door with a curt goodnight—had not even shaken hands.

"Listen here, mother," she began,

INSTALLMENT XVII.

"WE PICKED Selma up in Jamaica three years ago. She had been in Haiti at one time. She's a great fraud. She's got a wonderful rigmarole of voodoo stuff. She says her mother was a mammaloi—that's a voodoo priestess, you know—and she was brought up to the trade. She's got a lot of stuff about it—incantations and sacrificial black cocks and so on. And she's got the obeah business—that's praying people to death, and putting charms on 'em, so they'll lose all their money, and love charms, and all that. She talks about it even to us with a perfectly grave face—big and black, you know, like an idol right out of the African jungle. Really, it does give you a fit of creeps to listen to her sometimes. We never laugh. We don't want to hurt her feelings.

"You see, Selma's really very intelligent; she's got a good brain. Sometimes I think she's a young woman and sometimes I think she's a hundred. I haven't a doubt that, in fact, she's a perfectly good mulatto Jamaican cook who's heard this voodoo and obeah stuff talked among her own people and picked up the lingo and the rigmarole. She was in Haiti once, but she's rather vague about it—went over on an excursion, maybe. But don't you think a good deal of African jungle lurks in most African brains? I do. I'd bet Selma's mammaloi stuff was all bunk; but probably when she gets herself properly worked up to it she almost believes that she espoused the sacred snake in the dark of the moon, or whatever it is you do that makes a sure-enough voodoo priestess of you. And it's amusing to have a cook that's even a fake voodoo priestess. We've got a lot of amusement among ourselves out of Selma—and she can cook, doctor. It was a stroke of humor in the first place—our engaging her. She fell in love with my husband." Mrs. Snyder made the statement quite soberly, but she laughed at Latham's incredulous stare.

"Fact! You haven't seen my husband at his best. His upper lip isn't very good. Shaving off his mustache didn't help his appearance but he's still a very handsome man, I think." She seemed to invite Latham's opinion, and he replied, "O, yes, decidedly."

"He was better with the mustache. When Selma offered to go to New York with us it was perfectly clear that he was the attraction. Well, that was amusing, too. We had a good many laughs over it—a voodoo priestess." Latham's faint smile admitted that one could extract humor out of a cook who was a voodoo priestess and in love with one's husband. But Mrs. Snyder at once became serious.

"That's the only explanation, doctor. Frank is fond of Lou, too. Selma must have grown jealous of her. A dog may be that jealous of its master, you know. Such cases have been known. Selma must have accepted me as part of the situation; but when Lou came in she must, finally, have grown jealous of her. I can't see any other explanation." She lowered her voice a little, as if touching on sinister things. "A lot of African jungle in her brain, maybe, in spite of her intelligence—something dark and crawly, you know, that set her on to attack Lou underhand. . . . You can't tell; but it looks that way now. So maybe we've got an enemy in our house—a spy that's been giving information. I've thought of that. It could be nobody but Selma. The jungle part of her brain may have turned in that direction. Donahue, as you call him, may have got hold of her."

"But Donahue wasn't sure of your husband when he came here," Latham remarked; "not sure of his identity. He had a photograph of him that he wanted me to identify, after I came here to treat Miss Sheldon and had seen him. He said the true name was Fink."

He thought she looked startled. "Donahue had a photograph of my husband, and said his name was Fink?"

Latham nodded.

She thought it over a minute and replied, with decision: "His name is not Fink. I will tell you who he is and why we came here."

The woman whom he had known as Mrs. Snyder then went on with an air of such simple candor that she was either skillfully acting a part or had made up her mind to throw down the bars and take him into her full confidence:

"My husband's name is Frank Kridel. You won't find it in the hall of fame or in the newspapers, except maybe once in a while in an incidental sort of way. When he got up to the point of making a living—when he was 18—he went to work for Thomas Hallerton, and he kept on with him; grew up in his office, you might say." Her voice softened a bit.

"Tad Hallerton's got a bad name now, doctor—and he's dead. They've unloaded things on him that he wasn't to blame for. There's a world pretty well filled up with worse men than Tad Hallerton—and not many that are much better. At first, you see, it was a good bucket shop. You know what that is?"

"In a general way."

"Well, in a general way a good bucket shop is just as honorable as a fair faro bank. You make your bet; if you win you get the money; if you lose the bank wins. I don't know why it isn't a perfectly good man's game. But it's under the ban. It would take a week to tell it all, and there's no use. Four years ago Tad made a partnership with Luther Fink." The dark, intelligent eyes regarded him thoughtfully a moment, and she gave a considered judgment:

"Fink's a rat—so when it's all over he'll probably come out with a lot of money and a whole hide, while better men will be under the sod. . . . Queer world, doctor. Luther Fink is a rat; but everybody took him for a silver fox till it was too late. Tad Hallerton was generous, loyal to his friends, generous to people he liked. He was always fond of my husband and generous. While the money poured in we had our share. You see what I mean, doctor? I wouldn't think of denying that Tad Hallerton did all kinds of scandalous things in his business—finally. He was always a scandalous kind of man—hearty, fearless, reckless; he wanted a heap of money to blow in and to divide with his friends, and he just went out and got it. Scandalous, of course; but there was warm red blood in his veins, while Fink had only ice water—dirty ice water, too.

"But Tad Hallerton had friends. When it came to a pinch in his business he persuaded a couple of them to put up a good bit of money. . . . The plain English of it is they took a share in the business on the quiet. By that time, you see, thanks a good deal to Fink, the business was crooked as a corkscrew. This was a secret between Hallerton and these men, you understand—supposed to be a dead secret between them. But Fink nosed it out—trust him! Then Fink made a few passes of his own and the concern blew up. There was a lot about it in the newspapers. And Tad Hallerton cut his throat." There was a little catch in her voice; then silence for a moment.

"Now, doctor, I'm going to tell you all I can tell anybody. Tad Hallerton loved a woman. Probably he hadn't any more right to than he had to do a million other things. Poor Tad, you see, never could bother his head about rights and wrongs. He loved this woman and was sad about her—leaving her unprovided for, because when the smash came he hadn't a dollar left. It was Fink who'd foreseen the smash, not Hallerton. He was sad about her, doctor—and terribly worried about the two friends whom he had got into the business. . . . And good old Tad was even worried about Frank and me—fond of us both in his disreputable, warm hearted way. And he was on to Fink by that time."

She looked puzzled for a moment, her brows knitted; and confessed: "You see, you can't figure it out in rights and wrongs. It don't go that way. Tad had no head for those things. The two friends have a great deal of money and some reputation, too. They'd gone into the business on the quiet. If it could be proved that they were partners in the business, then they would be liable for some eight or nine million dollars of debts of Hallerton, Fink & Co., and their reputations would look like a flivver that's been hit by the lightning express. See? Hallerton didn't propose that should happen to them; but he did want them to make some provision for this woman and even some provision for Frank and me—only kind of legacy he could leave.

"He gave my husband some papers and told him to keep 'em tight, and he left a letter where Frank would be sure to get it, and then he cut his throat. Those papers were everything that would connect these two men with Hallerton, Fink & Co. He wanted them to give this woman one hundred thousand dollars and fifty thousand to us, and then to get those papers back. Protecting 'em with one hand and, you might say, blackmailing 'em with the other. That muddle, do you see, doctor, was the best Tad Hallerton could do to wipe his slate of all the other muddles. No right or wrong about it; but generosity. These two men will never miss a hundred and fifty thousand. We came down here with those papers. Fink must have nosed it out and sent somebody down here to get them. To that rat they'd easily be worth a million, two million, three million; because with them in his possession he could blackmail the two friends of Tad Hallerton. For money you can hire men in New York to do anything."

"Then these two men you speak of, friends of Hallerton, sent Andrus down here to get those papers?" asked Latham.

Mrs. Snyder answered promptly: "His name is Billy Wheedon. He was in Hallerton's office, too. He knows the lady very well who is to get the hundred thousand dollars. He brought us fifty thousand dollars in Liberty bonds. That ten thousand dollars I put in the bank was all we had left before he came. Now, I've thought a lot about that, doctor. Billy was going to take the afternoon boat back to St. Petersburg. There was a stalled car that they couldn't get around. Then you and your uncle came along. That stalled car in the road may not have been an accident."

Latham also had thought about that. He replied, "There's a duffer from Pittsburgh down here named Benson. He's been looking for an orange grove. In fact, he bought one the other day. He's interested in orchids, too—the sort of talkative blockhead, you know, who tells you all about his family history and his business the second time he sees you. He hired Charley Teller to drive him into the woods two or three times—doesn't know how to drive a car himself. But he scraped up an acquaintance with Donahue at the hotel. He'd scrape up an acquaintance with a tombstone if there was nobody else to talk to. Well, it seems that Donahue offered to drive the car for him. He was driving it that day. He said he let this man Benson out, then he drove on a ways until he found a place where he could turn around, and when he got back to that narrow place the car broke down. So he left it and went over in the woods to find Benson—tell him not to walk too far, because they'd have to walk back to town. They took a circuit through the woods, looking for orchids and heading south, and by and by got back to town—in time to see Miss Sheldon and Andrus go to the dock. The stalled car might not have been an accident. This man from Pittsburgh is just a loquacious chucklehead. A clever man like Donahue could lead him by the nose. He might have suggested this excursion into the woods at this particular time in such a way that Benson would think he had suggested it himself. Left to himself, after Benson went into the woods, he could have tampered with the car any way he pleased. But Donahue is not the man with the red beard."

"You're sure?"

"Positive. He was with Lem White and the sheriff all the night that Miss Sheldon was at Crab island. Lem White couldn't be mistaken about that. And he wasn't at my office last night. He was out with the sheriff until after eleven. Now, here's another point. Donahue hired Lem White to help him recover money, or bonds, from your house, saying they were stolen and he was a detective hired by the creditors to get them. That's why Lem brought him here that day in the guise of an electric light repairman. But nothing happened and Lem got rather suspicious of Donahue—thought very likely Donahue was throwing him over. So he kept watch more or less.

"One day he trailed Donahue into the woods, and then he saw a woman in a blue skirt—or, rather a woman's blue skirt—following a path through the bayhead that a person coming from this house would naturally take. There's a tumbledown shack there. Lem stepped into it, looking for this woman—pitch dark inside. Somebody knocked him cold with a punch on the chin. Lem's a pretty tough old rooster. I doubt that Donahue could have delivered that punch. There was no bruise on his hand. Of course, he might have used brass knuckles, but even so I doubt that he could knock Lem stiff with one punch. Probably that woman in the blue skirt was Selma; but it all looks to me like somebody we haven't seen yet—a confederate hiding over on Crab island, say. Nobody ever goes there. Of course, the Judds could be hired to keep their mouths shut. They have been hired. We know that from what happened to Miss Sheldon. It's only a half mile from shore. After dark anybody could easily slip back and forth. With that, and signals, and through the Judds, Donahue could easily keep in touch with him."

"That's true," she said.

"There's no other way to account for this man in the red beard," Latham persisted. "It would account for Lem's punch on the chin. And now, Mrs. Snyder, there's another big difficulty to be got over. Say two cut-throats came down here, sent by Fink to get papers worth millions—Donahue in plain sight, operating on shore, and another man in hiding on Crab island. They get in touch with Selma through the negro, Sam, or some such way. That would not be difficult. She keeps them posted by some blind telephone messages and meetings in the bayhead and so forth.

There's no difficulty about that. They know Andrus, or Wheedon, has the papers. They know the papers are in the bank."

He leaned a little toward her, forgetting her true name in his absorption:

"Mrs. Snyder, I saw the bank that morning. It was ransacked from end to end—vault and safe wide open, drawers pulled out and all that. It's only a little place, with only a little furniture in it. We've searched it all over since then. Either Andrus himself got the papers Saturday or they were in the bank Saturday night. A stranger like Andrus could hardly step on the street without being noticed. Careful inquiry has been made. Nobody saw him in town Saturday. The papers must have been in the bank Saturday night. Whoever killed my uncle must have got them. But here is Donahue to this day, almost a week after the murder, hanging around here—keeping the thing stirred up. If he killed my uncle and got the papers, why would he be doing that? Here is the man with a red beard questioning Miss Sheldon—taking big chances in order to question her. Why would he be doing that when, if he killed my uncle, he already has the papers?"

She was regarding him with a questioning suspense, and asked, "What's your answer?"

"Say these men are cut-throats. They've got their hands on papers that may be worth millions in blackmail. The only answer I see is that they are throwing Fink down, trying to make him think the papers are lost. Very likely they have good reason to fear Fink's vengeance. If Fink could hire a cut-throat to kill my uncle he could hire another to kill the first one, if the first one proved false. They may be afraid of Fink, and building up an alibi to fool him—and everything that's happened since the murder is hocus pocus—a blind to throw somebody off the scent."

She considered it and murmured, "That might be."

"Whoever killed my uncle got the papers," he insisted. "Why would these men be hanging around here unless they were trying to fool Fink?"

"Their staying here does need accounting for," she admitted.

"Yes." He looked her in the face a moment and spoke fairly in a tone of entreaty. "Mrs. Snyder, I believe you. I believe your sister. I have made up my mind. I must have some way to account for this beastly murder which leaves both of you innocent. I know you are innocent of that. . . . But you are mistaken about the man who called himself Andrus. He and Donahue came to an agreement."

Before she could speak he made a little gesture for silence, and went on: "I know you believe in him, Mrs. Snyder. I believe all you say about him—up to the crucial point. His fingerprints were in the bank. His cigarette stub was in the grate. My uncle was the best natured man alive; but he would not have carried good nature to the point of getting up in the night and opening the bank for a stranger. What could a stranger have said that would have led Uncle Mark to do that? It's impossible. But he knew Andrus. Miss Sheldon, whom Uncle Mark liked, had introduced him. He would have got up and opened the bank for Andrus. Do you see, Mrs. Snyder; even apart from those fingerprints Andrus was necessary to the plot. I know you like him and believe in him; but it's impossible for me to."

But Latham persisted "He was a man who was used to crooked business; a man who was used to spending money freely. Probably the failure of this firm left him stranded, too. He knew what those papers meant. You admit all that yourself. He brought fifty thousand dollars in bonds down here to you. Very well; he would bring fifty thousand or one hundred thousand dollars faithfully. But this other meant millions. You say so yourself. That's different. . . ." He hesitated to say it because of the obvious implication, then added, doggedly, "The man was a crook—used to crooked business."

She gave him a candid, dolorous little smile, and replied: "We're crooks, too. My husband and I knew, finally, that the business was crooked, yet we kept in it. But there are crooks and crooks, Dr. Latham. Billy Wheedon is our kind of one."

It was embarrassing, but he persisted: "Those papers meant millions. He put them in the bank under Miss Sheldon's eyes. He may have had good reasons for fearing vengeance—and it would be of you that the men up north would inquire. He needed to throw dust in your eyes. Depend upon it, Mrs. Snyder, he somehow came to an understanding with Donahue. You can't account for Donahue's staying here any other way."

But she repeated, "O, no, doctor! Not Billy Wheedon. That's impossible!"

"I know you believe in him," he replied, "but you can't get around his fingerprints."

"Why, yes I can," she said. "Donahue might have planted them. He's been engineering the case. He's gone everywhere, handling everything he wanted to. He might have planted them. That wouldn't be difficult. Probably your fingerprint expert is a blockhead. Donahue could lead him around by the nose."

He endeavored to consider that impartially, and answered, "He didn't put that Santa Clara Beach folder in Andrus' pocket. He didn't put the cigarette case in his clothes. They are Andrus'—or—Wheedon's—own hair brushes. The monogram on them is "W. W." No, Mrs. Snyder, you're mistaken in him. A million dollars is a fearful temptation to many men."

She only shook her head.

"You see," he urged, "I have as little confidence in Donahue as you have. So far as he is concerned, I'll take your side of it. But the sheriff believes in him. The sheriff is a self-confident man who will go ahead in his own way when his mind is made up. I've got nothing that I can tell the sheriff about Donahue—nothing but the merest surmises. We haven't a scrap of real evidence against him—not a trace."

"That's true," she admitted.

"In the face of the evidence against Andrus, it would be useless for me to go to the sheriff with your suspicions and my suspicions of Donahue. He'd only set me down for a fool and pay no further attention." He paused, wet his lips and lowered his voice a little. "He's got Miss Sheldon in his hands. He'll lock her up. I don't want that. I don't want her misused again. . . . Finally, it's for her sake that I'm coming to you. I want something that I can protect her with. Can't you give me a clew to this man Wheedon?"

Soberly she answered, "I can give you his true name, William Wheedon, and an address in New York. But I've already wired New York—last Monday and again Wednesday. I left word for him to wire me when he appeared. I'm sure he's not there. That's all I know, Dr. Latham. I wish with all my heart I knew where he was now. I'd tell you gladly. We're all fond of Billy. It's impossible he killed your uncle. I'm anxious about him."

"But they wouldn't have killed him and killed my uncle, too," Latham pointed out. "They were after only one set of papers, not two."

"Yet it might have happened. Lou says when they left the hotel he was carrying an old valise—something the landlord had lent them to put shells in—and had a couple of old coats over his arm. Donahue was tramping into town then. He probably missed their trip to the bank to leave the brief case; but he saw them going to the dock with this valise and the old coats—enough to hide a brief case, or a bundle of papers, in. I'm afraid he laid for Billy at the dock, where Lou left him that night. But Billy had no papers. So next morning he found out they were in the bank. Do you see? The same set of papers might have got two men killed. Dr. Latham, there are frightful brutes in New York; they would think no more of killing a man than of eating. Hardly a week but the newspapers have some new case."

Of course, he knew that and scarcely heeded her statement. But, looking up to her significantly, he said, "Andrus might be hiding on Crab island."

She gave a doleful little smile for his obstinacy: "The man with the red beard? Billy? Putting those pinchers in her arm? O, Dr. Latham! Don't you think she would have known him? As well suspect me of being the man with a red beard! He was fond of Lou, and she of him."

"I suppose so," he muttered doggedly.

"But only as friends," she put in. "No fonder of him than of you."

He felt his face flush at that surprising statement, and blurted: "I want to protect her."

"I want you to. I'd tell you anything I knew that would help; but I've told it all. . . . It wasn't Billy."

That, evidently, was the end of his tether in that direction. He sat back on the bench, frowning at the placid bayou—vastly discontented with the situation in which the end of his tether left Louise Sheldon. . . . "Sorry—on her account," he muttered.

Mrs. Snyder suddenly gave the subject a new bent: "Lou never knew anything about our business affairs—well, just a faint, rose colored kind of sketch. She came to me five years ago, when her father died. I'm ten years older. But she was away at school most of the time for three years and more. We had plenty of money then. She had her share. When the smash came I told her something of the trouble—a sketch with the dark spots left out. I didn't want to grieve her. She knew we were in bad luck and had to leave New York. She insisted on coming along. She'd taken her share of the good luck, you see, so she wanted to take her share of the bad luck, too. If I had left her in New York probably somebody would have found her and bothered her with questions about us. I thought she might as well come along. You can see what she really knows about it. Billy Wheedon used to come to our house. She knows him and likes him. Everybody does." Mrs. Snyder concluded this little digression by observing, "She's a blessed kid, doctor."

That observation seemed to recognize a special sort of relationship between its subject and the young man to whom it was addressed. Latham again flushed, looking down and wetting his lips, for it quickened his heart.

. . . But finally he had no shield for her against Donahue and the sheriff; nothing new to tell the sheriff that would divert the brunt of the attack from her. Mrs. Snyder might reassert her faith in Andrus' innocence, but to tell the sheriff that would be simply silly. He didn't doubt that both the stepsisters believed Andrus to be innocent—misled, womanlike, by the man's genial air and agreeable ways. As for himself, that idea of a man in hiding on Crab island stuck in his mind. If Louise Sheldon told the truth—which he was bound to believe now—there must be a concealed actor somewhere. Why should not Andrus himself be that hidden man on Crab island? Driving back to town he mulled it over. Why not have a thorough search over there, anyhow? But if Andrus should be discovered in hiding there, now would that react on Louise Sheldon? What would Andrus say if he were caught?

Night's Search Reveals Little.

The front door of his dwelling was unlocked and Dr. Latham walked in without ringing. His prisoner sat at the table in the reception room, finishing a supper that had been sent down from the hotel. A big bottle of mineral water stood on the table. From a slight sound at the rear Latham judged that Selma was in the kitchen. He slipped into the room and was almost at the table before the prisoner saw him. The only light was from the western sunset sky. He saw her start a little, looking up, then smile and motion to a chair beside the table. He whispered, bending his head to her across the corner of the table.

"Donahue falls in with it. He's going to follow Snyder down into the woods from Little Bayou."

This was his second talk with her since noon. He had come the first time to tell her that Andrus' body had been found, killed in the same way as Mark Egan and doubtless by the same hand. She had shed some tears over that and then he had told her what he wished her to do at the inquest. He had been in a great hurry, having so much to do in so short a time—Snyder and Mrs. Snyder to tell about Andrus and to instruct about the inquest and Snyder to fetch up town, then the inquest to get through with. He had been in desperate haste, and so all the remainder of the afternoon she had struck in his mind, weeping, her lips trembling, putting a hand to her eyes as though he had abruptly left her just at that point. Because at that point. Because at that point something ought to have happened that didn't happen, he being under the drive and compulsion of the murder case.

Now, whispering to her across the corner of the table, their heads near together lest Selma hear, that unfulfilled thing came back.

"And you?" she whispered.

Mr. Harvey L. Parry, the well-known Official Shorthand reporter, and Pres. S. E. Sh. Rep. Assn., says:

"Your system has interested me more than anything in the professional line that I have ever seen. I carried your book around in my pocket for several days, studying it whenever opportunity offered. I was sitting at my desk studying it when I was called to report a case, and, without realizing it, found myself using your system in connection with my own. When it came to READING MY NOTES, the parts written according to your system WERE MORE LEGIBLE THAN MY OWN."

The Forgotten Altar

Maisie followed her ominously into her room and shut the door.

"If you've been talking about me to Dr. Sutherland——"

"I haven't," Mary assured her simply. She sank into a chair, suddenly conscious of immense fatigue.

"What in heck did you go out with him for, then?" Maisie demanded blankly.

"Dr. Sutherland is very kind," her mother evaded, amazed at this unexpected skill in deception. "He saw I was at the end of my rope. He used to ask me sometimes to ride—before you came back—when he saw I was tired out."

But Maisie was not yet fully satisfied with the situation. "What did you talk about?" she catechized.

"Dogs, chiefly, I think."

"'Dogs!'" Maisie exploded. "Gosh! Must have been a scintillating conversation, I'll say, seeing you can hardly tell a bulldog from a Pomeranian. Look here, mother, you certainly aren't going to tell me that you went out riding to talk about dogs with a man you've been warning me about——"

"If it's safe for you to go with him, Maisie, surely it should be safe for your mother," Mary reminded her, with the quiet dignity that could check temporarily even her stormy daughter.

The next morning, however, Maisie had had plenty of time to reach the office when Dr. Sutherland called over the telephone, nor did he waste a moment in inquiries for her.

"It's one January day in a lifetime," he informed Mary. "I'm leaving all my patients to die and you leave yours without clothes and let's take a day off, for once. It'll be an investment in health—really."

This time she climbed into the roadster with less trepidation. It would surely be hard for the most sinister of men to harbor evil intentions at such an hour, on such a day, in this white, snow-clad world which was sparkling and glinting and winking back at them like a million diamonds gone mad. She even laughed back at it like a delighted child as they sped through the intoxicating air.

"Do you know," the doctor commented, "that is the very first time I ever heard you laugh. You smile, but you never laugh. Life ought to hold more laughter for you."

Then she remembered why she was there, and the gayety left her heart. She tried her best to counterfeit it, at first because it was necessary to her role, later, because, enemy as he was, she could not somehow bear to dampen the boyish lightheartedness of her companion's mood. He had lost his caustic bitterness of speech and look, and with it a dozen years. She had to steel herself against the charm of his friendliness with the remembrance that it was thus villains must be wont to mask their designs.

Towards noon the doctor turned from the highway and they plunged into a maze of cross-country side roads, rolling in at length through high gates and descending from the car at the entrance of what looked like a frozen little wood.

"It's a shooting lodge I belong to," he explained. "Thought you'd like it better than a roadhouse or a country club."

She followed him up a winding path through a miniature shrouded forest of scrub oak and birches to a rustic looking bungalow. Outside it was of pioneer severity; inside, the long, low living room was aglow with comfort and cheer, though it was preeminently a man's room. Antlers branched from above the huge fireplace; weapons and trophies were the only bric-a-brac; the huge, comfortable chairs were essentially masculine. Mary sank into one of them while the doctor gave orders for luncheon to a silent servitor who had mysteriously appeared. Again she was conscious of that overpowering fatigue, and roused herself gallantly to combat this unexpected enemy who was threatening to frustrate her plot.

They ate lunch at a small table by a great window, alone in the silent room. Outside lay a silent world, wide sheets of snow stretching down to a baby lake fringed by the baby forest. Mary felt no fear, only an infinite sadness. She was having a glimpse of what life might mean if one could be entitled to golden days like this, even only an occasional one, without this never lifting burden of anxiety and suspense—or with some one who might share it.

As if in answer to her longing, the doctor leaned across the table and put his strong hand on hers.

"Can't you hand over a few of those worries to me?" he demanded startlingly. "I'd like more than anything in the world to help carry them. And my shoulders are mighty broad."

She smiled at him bravely. It would be disastrous to have this moment come when Maisie could not reap the benefit of it; on the other hand, she must not alienate his interest.

"I haven't any more," she asserted, "now that you've made Neil well."

"I don't believe it," he told her bluntly. "Why will you persistently keep me at arm's length, Mary? Look here!" He jumped to his feet, motioned her masterfully to a chair by the fireplace, seated himself opposite her. "You've got to listen to me," he commanded. "I'm going to begin at the very beginning."

Then with rough, vivid strokes he made live before her a boy who had been neglected by a mother who cared only for pleasure; lonely days away at school, lonelier vacations. The boy became a man whose wife ran away with his best friend; she left behind her a little lame youngster who died with no mother at his bedside.

"You can see I haven't been trained to a very lively appreciation of your sex. I was down on all of 'em—until I met you."

His crisp voice softened. Mary sat very still. She had entirely forgotten Maisie.

"From the very first I felt you were different. I'd seen plenty of mothers devoted to sick children—it wasn't that. But there was a kind of—nobility—about you, something gallant and heroic and yet so awfully sweet. If you hadn't been so darned attractive your life wouldn't have been so unusual. It's easy for plain women to be good. I kept watching and studying you and I found I was beginning to believe in you—to admire you. And I didn't want to—you see, that would be admitting I'd been building my life around a lie. When I kissed you that night I hoped you'd show you were just the usual common clay.

"I've done plenty of things to be ashamed of these last ten years—not much in them not to be ashamed of—but it isn't a habit of mine to go around embracing females that way, really," he interpolated boyishly. "Don't want to. I was just testing you out. And when you turned me down—so hard—in that sweet, grave way of yours, I got paid back for it, for I fell in love with you, head over heels, like any young calf in his early twenties," he described his condition poetically. "I played around with Maisie just to have a chance to be near you. And every day I loved you harder. That blessed reposefulness and self-forgetfulness of yours in this restless, flaunting, ogling, horrible sea of women. And that low, beautiful voice of yours when you do speak. I don't know what miracle made you trot out that blessed blue waist, but the world got all different when I saw you in it. I didn't dare say anything last night, I was so afraid I'd scare you off again, but I've just got to today. I'm really in love with you, Mary. And I trust you with all my heart—that's more from me. Could you care the least bit in the world for me?"

For all his brusqueness, he knew how to woo. And this time the writing in her heart was clear and plain. This was a man any woman might love. She had to fight to keep her voice unshaken.

"But you are married," she said.

"I'm getting unmarried just as fast as I can. I began divorce proceedings the day after I kissed you."

As she sat dazed by this revelation, he bent over her and caught her hand to his lips.

"Please, Mary," he begged her. "You can move the altar over to my house, and being a doctor's wife will give you plenty to do in front of it the rest of your life."

But she pulled her hand away, completely aghast by the results of her diplomacy. "What have I done?" she accused herself faintly. "I thought I was saving Maisie from you, and instead I've taken away from her the most wonderful thing in the world."

All the way home he argued and pleaded over this point. At first he had been highly amused by it. Then when he saw the serious barrier it was erecting between them, he strove to demolish it. She would not betray to him Maisie's intentions, but kept reiterating that Maisie cared for him.

"Just as much as she does for that post over there," he reasoned with her. "Not but that she'd marry me, probably, in a minute—but for what I could give her. I wouldn't marry Maisie for millions of dollars. One venture in matrimony with a girl of her type is more than enough.

As she still clung steadfastly to her refusal even to consider his proposal, he took a second momentous ride that evening. He laid his difficulties before Maisie. He repeated all that he had said that day to her mother, though in an entirely different tone of voice.

"I want you to help me get rid of this damn fool idea of hers, that she's interfering with your happiness. As I told her, I haven't a doubt you'd marry me for my money and position, you hardened young worldling. Now, you can have that, with a handsome husband your own age thrown in."

"So that's what you think I'd be marrying you for?" she inquired.

She waited for a less populated section of the city to enlighten him. It was true that a month ago it would have made no difference to her plan of marrying him if he had been bald-headed, knock-kneed, false-toothed. But at their first meeting she had unexpectedly liked his voice, his eyes, his bearing; at the second she had decided she far preferred unruly hair graying at the temples to the beslicked pompadours of her younger friends, and that crowsfeet and lines added interest to a man's appearance; at the third she had reflected she would need all her wits when she married this man or he would be her master; at the fourth she did not care if he would be, for she had fallen genuinely in love with him. Maisie had not experimented in love since she was twelve without knowing the real thing when she met it. She had never intended to experience this disconcerting emotion; it disturbed her judgment, hampered her customary dexterity. It would have fitted much better into her plans to counterfeit it; however, here it was, and tonight she must make him realize it.

Maisie knew the power of warm young arms around an obdurate neck, of warm young lips against even unwilling ones. She dismissed the thought of her mother as a rival as too fantastic for consideration. Old as she was, with that worn, pale face——

She wished she had not evoked the thought of its weariness, its pallor. It haunted her as she waited for some dark turn in the road. A rotten deal in the life her mother had had, all right enough—always would have. With those queer ideas of hers she probably would keep on working, wouldn't take the doctor's money even when it belonged to Maisie. What a wonderful chance that proposal, dropping down on her today, must have seemed to her, and what a dead game sport she'd been to turn it down!

Despite herself as she did for this incredible weakness and sentimentality, these untoward thoughts grew in strength, overpowered her imagination, checked her ever-ready speech, drove her into a course of action wholly inconsistent with her philosophy of life. As they went up the stairs, she found herself unbelievably promising:

"All right, old bird. Count on me. I'll make her see what's what. I'm certainly thanking God I'm not going to have to marry you myself to get the money into the family."

Her role of Cupid satisfactorily performed, Maisie developed an unaccountable restlessness. The doctor's proposal of a year at finishing school she hooted at; instead, she substituted a winter in Hollywood.

"I'm not especially pretty," she pointed out with her accustomed frankness. "But there's something about me that makes people sit up and take notice and that I bet I can get across the screen."

The doctor, who was in high good humor these days, seconded this modest assertion, and between them they overcame Mary's objections. Maisie, in the kind of clothes she had dreamed of, with the slimmest of silk umbrellas, shining luggage, and a generous wad in her pocketbook, set forth for the Mecca of so many youthful hopes.

On the way home, Mary wept over her departure against the doctor's shoulder—a process both found amazingly agreeable.

"It's not just that I hate to see her go into that work," she grieved. "It's that she so obviously doesn't care an atom about leaving us. I don't believe Maisie has ever cared for anybody in all her life."

"She's not the only one," the doctor comforted her. "They're a tough proposition, this generation of youngsters. Live your own life, and the devil take the hindmost."

Maisie, to be sure, was not weeping in her berth. Instead, she was engaged in applying more rouge to her already very vermillion cheeks, preparatory to a siege upon the affections of the opulent looking youth across the aisle. Admirers always came in handy, even if one could never hope to have the one man in all the world.

Maisie caught her breath in a sob, checked it fiercely, turned it into a muttered imprecation Only she would ever know that under cover of rouge and oath and flirtation, she was making her way up the steps of the forgotten altar. Her vestal garments were jerked up to a scandalous angle; her wreath was rakishly askew; but she carried her torch high, in a hand that did not tremble.
